"No child, actually or apparently under sixteen years of age, shall smoke or in any way use cigar, cigarette, or tobacco in any form whatsoever in any public street, place, or resort. A violation of the sub-division shall be a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not less than $2 for each offense."

It is said to have been the first intimation many fathers had that their boys smoked, and during the last couple of days many lads have preferred to stand when they might sit. It is also said that although there is usually a falling off in attendance at Sunday school after the Christmas tree exercises, many new faces appeared in the classes to-day, and the circular is believed to have started a moral wave among the young.

Seven Miners Killed by Gendarmes.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—According to a dispatch to The Daily Express from Vienna seven miners were killed and forty wounded Saturday in an affray at Altgebirg, Hungary, between riotous miners and gendarmes.

TO RUSH SHIPPING BILL

WILL FOLLOW THE ARMY BILL

May Be Taken Up by Middle of This Week—Amendments to be Made—Threat of Night Sessions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6. An organized effort is to be made by the promoters of the Shipping Subsidy bill to get that measure through the Senate, and they are repeating the confident predictions of Senator Hanna that the bill will not fail in that body. Senator Frye says he cannot find any factious opposition to the bill, and discredits the reports that filibustering practices are to be resorted to by its enemies to defeat it. He does not expect even prolonged discussion, and says that he looks for only four or five speeches on each side.

"The Army bill," he says, "will doubtless be passed by the middle of the week. The Shipping bill will then be made the unfinished business, and will then have the right of way. The opposition is clearly traceable to the foreign shipping interests, but when the time comes for a vote a majority will be found on the side of the bill. The amendments recently decided upon will certainly tend to facilitate the passage of the bill, as they remove all legitimate objection to the measure.

"One of the principal objections to the bill was that in its original shape it unduly favored high-speed vessels and discriminated against vessels of low power and speed capacity, the vessels which carry the farmers' products. This objection was really due to a misunderstanding of the terms of the bill in its original form, and has been obviated in the amended bill, so that as a matter of fact the cargo-carrying vessels of the description referred to are favored by the measure in its present shape."

This view does not take into account the declarations of Senators Pettigrew, Allen, and Butler to fight the measure to the uttermost. Mr. Frye is quoted as saying that if the opposition makes it necessary to hold night sessions in order to exhaust debate and reach a vote, that course will be resorted to. There is plenty of matter for discussion, and there are other Senators besides those from South Dakota, Nebraska, and North Carolina who desire to analyze the bill and obtain explanations of the amendments. There are three amendments to be offered before the bill will be satisfactory to its friends. The Commerce Committee will be asked to accept an amendment designed to protect American vessels engaged in carrying cargoes to Central American and Mexican ports. Originally the bill barred these vessels from bounties, upon the assumption, it is understood, that most of the goods so shipped would be consigned to American ports on the Pacific Coast. This would be giving the bounties to vessels partially engaged in the coastwise trade. The amendment would give the bounties to vessels sending cargoes to Central American ports.

Still another amendment needed to perfect the bill before it is fit to be voted upon, in the estimation of its friends, is one to change certain conditions prescribed for the owners of vessels looking for Government subvention. Originally the bill required all owners of vessels to give bonds to agree to build new vessels within five years aggregating at least twenty-five per cent. of the tonnage of those already in existence. Ownership of vessels was found to be complex. It was decided to overcome the impracticable proposition by making the requirement apply to a majority of the owners.

The anxiety to get rid of the Army Reorganization bill is appreciated by the opponents of the Shipping bill, but it does not modify their attitude. Pettigrew, Allen, and Butler are not anxious to pass the Army bill, and they are very desirous of deferring the vote on the Shipping bill. The Appropriation bills are pressing for place, and have the right of way at any time. It is always possible to provoke and prolong discussion on the Appropriation bills and without appearing to filibuster. Night sessions are always offensive to both sides, and those held early in the session are usually tedious and unproductive of anything except disgust with the experiment.

THIS WEEK IN CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The consideration of the Reapportionment bill will be resumed to-morrow in the House. The indications point to a final vote on the measure Tuesday, but the fight over the basis of apportionment is a bitter one, and the debate may be prolonged. The outcome is not clear. Mr. Hopkins is still confident that his bill will carry, but in order to pull it through he is now ready to concede an increase of three members to cover the major fractions of the States of Florida, Colorado, and North Dakota, if his bill passes it probably will be with this modification.

The opposition is very aggressive, but on the surface seems to lack the strength necessary to carry the Burleigh bill. There are forces at work, however, by which the opposition hope, through the agencies of Senator Quay, Senator Platt of New York, and Senator Lodge of Massachusetts to swing the delegations of New York, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts into line, and if successful the Hopkins bill may suffer defeat. Mr. Crumpacker of Indiana proposes to move to recommit the bill with instructions to restore the representation of the Southern States, but there is no idea that such a proposition will prevail.

After the disposal of the Apportionment bill the River and Harbor bill will be taken up. It is expected to consume two days. The remainder of the week will be devoted to appropriation bills. The District of Columbia bill probably will be the next of the supply bills to be considered.

The Senate will continue to give practically undivided attention to the Army Reorganization bill until that measure shall be disposed of. That the bill will pass no one doubts, and the general opinion is that it will get through some time during the present week. Senator Hawley, Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, expresses the opinion that the measure will be in conference by Wednesday, but other Senators postpone the date somewhat.

There are several committee amendments yet to be considered, including those relating to the army canteen and the Veterinary Corps. It was supposed at one time that the canteen provision would cause prolonged debate, but the best opinion now is that comparatively little time will be spent on it. A number of amendments suggested by individual Senators will be considered at greater length, and some speeches on the bill as a whole are yet to be made. The provision of the bill authorizing the enlistment of Filipinos in the army of the United States as among the features which are almost certain to come in for sharp attack.

With the Army bill out of the way, the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill will be taken up, and after it other appropriation bills, if any are in shape to be considered.

The Ship Subsidy bill will be restored to the calendar as the regular order of business when the Army bill is passed, and it will be pressed when no appropriation bills are awaiting consideration.

Next Saturday will be largely devoted to eulogies upon the late Senator Davis of Minnesota.

A PROTEST FROM MR. ROOT.

Secretary of War Again Takes Decided Stand on the Subject of the Proposed Veterinary Corps.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Secretary Root has transmitted to the Chairman of the Senate Military Committee a protest signed by Claude V. Morris, Secretary of the New York State Veterinary Medical Society, against the proposed amendment to the Army bill providing for a corps of veterinary surgeons. In doing so he sent the following explanatory letter to Mr. Hawley, Chairman of the committee:

"I send you herewith a copy of a letter just received by me from the Secretary of the New York Veterinary Medical Society commending the position taken by this department in regard to the proposal to create a veterinary corps in the army. Let me also recall to your attention the paper which I left with your committee some time since, signed by a number of the chief veterinarians now in the service, taking substantially the same position. Let me restate the position in order that there may be no misunderstanding:

"This department is not opposed to suitable recognition of veterinarians. It has no serious objection to giving them military rank, although I do not think it is a wise course to give military rank to civilian employes. What I do object to is the creation of a new corps, with a Colonel at the head, reporting directly to the Secretary of War, and thus necessarily creating a new bureau in the War Department, and a body of officers who, communicating directly with the Secretary of War through their chief, are necessarily independent of the commanding officers of the cavalry regiments and the horse artillery organizations.

"One of the recognized defects of our present army organization is that of suitable command and division of duties and responsibilities between the officers commanding troops and territorial departments on the one hand, and staff officers responsible to a head in Washington on the other. The result is that it is impossible to fix responsibility for any failure to remedy defects or abuses.

"The proposed organization of a veterinary corps is but another step in the wrong direction, and will increase the evils which ought to be remedied. The general officer in command of troops ought to be able to hold the officers of the cavalry and artillery regiments responsible for having their organizations ready for active and efficient duty at all times. If the horses of these organizations are under the charge of a veterinary corps, with the chief reporting to the Secretary of War, there can be no such responsibility.

"Give the veterinarians rank if you want to, but I most earnestly urge that you do not impose upon us another bureau of the War Department, another independent corps, another element of disintegration, divided responsibility, and consequent inefficiency."

LEGISLATURE CHAIRMANSHIPS.

ALBANY, Jan. 6.—The selection of members of the various Senate and Assembly committees is about completed, but, until they are read at the session of the Legislature on Wednesday night they will be subject to many changes at the solicitation of party leaders in the State and country.

Jotham P. Allds is to be the leader of the majority in the Assembly, and Senator T. E. Ellsworth in the Senate. Senator Thomas F. Grady will lead the majority in the Senate, and Assemblyman Frisbie in the Assembly. Mr. Allds is a legislator of experience. He said to-night of the proposed returns in State offices and the probable abolition of several offices as suggested in the Governor's message:

"I presume our Democratic friends will assist us in making the necessary reductions in officials and consequent saving in expense, for they have made alleged extravagances in office their war cry while the Republican Party is in power. The fact is that most of the offices it is intended to curtail were under Democratic administrations, or under the orderings of a Constitutional Convention. I don't anticipate any trouble with the minority in carrying out these reforms."

Following are said to be the selected Chairmen in the two houses:

MRS. MARGARET HOPE MISSING.

She Has Not Been Seen Since Christmas Eve.

After a two weeks' search of the hospitals, station houses, and morgues of New York, the relatives of Mrs. Margaret Hope, sixty-two years old, of 157 West One Hundred and Third Street, have given her up as lost. On Christmas eve Mrs. Hope went to the home of her brother, William A. Smith of 302 West Fifty-fourth Street, with presents for the children. She assisted in dressing the Christmas tree. About 11 o'clock her brother took her to the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Street station of the elevated road, and saw her aboard a train. The ticket chopper at the One Hundred and Fourth Street station saw her leave the train and start down the steps for the street. This was the last that was seen of the woman.

BANKER POTTER'S HOUSE ON FIRE

But the Employes Put It Out and Occupants Were Not Disturbed.

Fire was discovered yesterday afternoon on the roof of the residence of Banker E. C. Potter on the grounds of the Westchester Country Club, Westchester, and near the clubhouse.

The stablemen and other employes about the place formed a bucket brigade, and with the aid of a garden hose soon had the fire extinguished. When the Westchester village fire apparatus arrived there was nothing for it to do.

The occupants of the house scarcely knew there was a fire until it was all over, and there was but little excitement. The damage was trifling.

Protest Against Removing a Post Office.

Petitions are being circulated in Harlem protesting against the proposed removal of Post Office Station J, from the Hamilton Bank Building, on West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, near Seventh Avenue, to the northwest corner of One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street and Eighth Avenue. It is said that the present location is central, while the proposed site is out of the way. Postmaster Van Cott told a delegation of the Harlem Board of Commerce that the change had already been recommended, and he thought it was too late to recall it from Washington. Despite this, the petition will be forwarded to Washington to-day.

Thomas McAdam, a lawyer, of 220 Broadway, is looking for J. H. Silliman, formerly a waiter at the Hotel Endicott, who he says has fallen heir to $59,000. The lawyer says that several years ago Silliman came to his office and asked him to file claims against his grandfather's estate in Washington, D. C. The obstacles to the man's getting the money are now removed, the lawyer says, and he is desirous of finding him in order to turn over the fortune.

WANT COLLEGE MEN TO PARADE

Extensive Plans for Participation by the Universities in the Inauguration Ceremonies.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—If plans now under way fulfill their early promise, there will be a large representation of the colleges and universities of the United States in the line of the inaugural parade. The matter has been put in charge of an intercollegiate committee, which has addressed invitations to the Presidents of more than 400 American institutions of learning, requesting that delegations be sent on to represent their respective institutions on that occasion.

In order that the movement may be successful, the suggestion is made that mass meetings be held by the various alumni and university clubs throughout the country, for the purpose of interesting college men in the project. The first mass meeting of this kind will be held in Washington next Saturday, at the Columbian University, when graduates from the leading universities are expected to speak to an assemblage to which all resident college men are invited.

It is stated by intercollegiate committeemen that the different college clubs and societies are expected to come as delegations. Their participation will be strictly non-partisan. There will be no maximum or minimum limit to the size of each delegation, the only requirement being that each body shall be uniformed or decorated so as to display its college colors. Freedom is given to introduce unique features characteristic of college life. Delegations, it is suggested, should perfect themselves in marching, either by column, figures, or changing their formation while in line of march. One large banner should be carried in front of each delegation.

Cheering will be confined exclusively to the time when the respective colleges are passing the President's reviewing stand. Each delegation will be permitted to give only one cheer, so as to prevent an interruption to the cheer of the college following. Horns or other instruments for the purpose merely of making a noise will not be allowed in the parade. It is requested, however, that banjos be brought from as many colleges as possible.

The local committee will make all arrangements necessary for accommodation of institutions signifying a purpose to be represented. The railroads will give a special rate to college delegations.

Blaine Club Failed to Get Quarters.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 6.—The Blaine Club of Cincinnati, the largest political organization in Ohio, has officially abandoned its proposed trip to the inauguration at Washington next month, for which two special trains had been chartered. The committee that visited Washington reported that it could not make arrangements for quarters such as the Blaine Club members were accustomed to. To show what was offered the members for quarters, several letters were read. One wanted the members to sleep in an armory, while another wanted them to sleep 125 in a room in a big warehouse.

PRIEST CRITICISES DOCTORS.

Kept by Some, He Says, from Seeing Dying Church Members.

The Rev. William T. M. Laughlin, pastor of St. Augustine's Roman Catholic Church of Union Hill, N. J., denounced from the pulpit at the late mass yesterday the practice of some local physicians of preventing priests from attending dying Roman Catholic patients.

"We have, unfortunately, no physician of our faith in this locality, and this fact has led to an alarming condition of affairs," said he. "It was only this morning that the practice I refer to was brought to my attention in a convincing way.

"Albert Roach, an altar boy of this parish, was lying near the point of death at his home. The dangerous character of the boy's illness, paralysis of the heart, made his people anxious, and they determined to send for a priest at once. The physician in attendance said that it was not necessary to have a clergyman just then—that the afternoon would be time enough. The boy's condition continued to alarm his parents so, however, that they disregarded the medical man's advice and sent for me. Before I got to the house the boy was dead.

"I have proof that this is not the only instance in which local physicians prevented dying Catholics from receiving the last rites of their Church, and hereafter I am determined to publicly, and from the pulpit denounce any physician whom I detect in such scandalous conduct. Bigotry is an unnecessary adjunct to the profession and practice of medicine, and so far as I can prevent it shall not be manifested by doctors in this parish."

RUN DOWN BY A WOMAN.

Helene Miller of North Bergen, N. J., a tailoress employed at 53 East Eleventh Street, Manhattan, hunted down Charles Blumenthal of 131 Park Avenue, Hoboken, who she says has swindled her. He was arrested last night. Blumenthal advertised in a German newspaper inviting correspondence with people with small incomes desirous of building homes. Miss Miller had several interviews with him and sent him $15 to start her building fund. Blumenthal then dropped the correspondence, and she next met him on a ferryboat.

"I took hold of his collar and gave him a good shaking, demanding my money back," she said last night. "He begged me not to make a scene, and promised that he would settle in a day or two. I let him go, but decided to keep my eye on him, having heard that he lived in Hoboken. When the money was not returned by Dec. 1 I had a warrant sworn out for his arrest. I found out to-night where he lived, and immediately notified the police. I would have given him a good beating, but the detective made me walk on ahead."

Blumenthal will be held to await extradition papers from New York.

Detective Sergeant John Krauch of Capt. Titus's staff visited Hoboken last night, and after looking at the prisoner said he was the man wanted in this city for somewhat similar swindling games. Krauch said Blumenthal represented himself usually as the agent of a well-known building and loan association.

Youths Held for Burglary.

Patrick Garavel, fifteen years old, of 884 Pelham Avenue; William Watson, twelve years old, of the same address, and Frederick Labronico, fifteen years old, of 2,409 Bathgate Avenue, were prisoners in the Morrisania Police Court yesterday morning, charged with entering a vacant house at Washington Avenue, near Pelham Avenue, owned by John B. Kaskins, and cut out the lead pipe and taken off the door knobs. They were held in $1,000 for trial.

Pneumonia Killed "Ossified" Man.

An autopsy performed yesterday on the body of William A. Bloomer, the "ossified man," who died in St. Luke's Hospital on Friday, showed that death was due to pneumonia and not to ossification. Bloomer some years ago willed his body to Prof. Huntingdon of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, but before his death he signified that he was unwilling to have it used for scientific purposes and desired Christian burial.

AGAINST "DYNAMITED" SILK.

Movement for a Law to Compel the Labelling of Weighted Material.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 6.—Congressman James F. Stewart of this district will next week meet in conference a delegation of prominent silk manufacturers of this city, New York, and other silk centres who are interested in legislation to govern the manufacture and sale of silk goods.

For several weeks a quiet movement for introduction of a national label on weighted silks, "dynamited" as the process in dyeing is termed in the trade, has been in progress. An effort to protect the consumer and at the same time the manufacturer who prepares pure silk goods for the market has been precipitated by the methods and skill of dye experts in the manipulation of the silk.

The "dynamite" process introduced in the manufacture of the inferior grades has forced the big jobbers to bar the honestly weighted silks from the market or enter at a great loss into competition with the fraudulent article. The weighting process has continued to such a degree that silk is tabooed by certain metropolitan houses.

Ralph Baer of the Helvetia Silk Mills of this city, who has taken an active part in the movement for legislation, explained that the use of bichloride of tin in the dyeing process allowed the dyer to return to the manufacturer two pounds and more for every one pound of silk sent to the dye house. The silk treated with pure dye, soap, and oils, depreciates several ounces to the pound. The treated product, of course, resulted in an inferior silk.

The dyers managed, however, to give the weighted goods the apparent consistency and brilliancy of the old class of goods. A ready sale for the cheaper goods was followed by general orders for the "dynamited" silk with the inevitable result. The bichloride of tin preparation crystalizes upon exposure to the air, the minute particles forming to cut the silk into shreds upon the slightest wear or friction.

"The silk label legislation," said Mr. Baer, "must of necessity provide for imported goods under like restrictions. The purpose is to allow the purchaser the opportunity for a choice between the classes of manufactured goods. Under the present system the sale is made under false pretenses and is tainted with fraud and deceit to the eventual loss of confidence in trade."

CASH HANDY FOR THIEVES.

Thieves only yesterday afternoon stole $300 worth of goods from the apartments 516 Manhattan Avenue, occupied by Alfred P. Reeves, Secretary of the Road Drivers' Association of New York. Mr. Reeves was on the Speedway driving, and Mrs. Reeves was visiting a sick relative in the neighborhood. She returned about 4 o'clock and found every room in the house ransacked.

The locks leading into the apartments from the public hall had been picked. About $100 worth of clothing, $50 in cash, a gramophone, several pieces of valuable bric-à-brac, and some jewelry were missing. On the floor were several bundles of clothing which the thieves had left behind.

Mrs. Reeves believes they were in the flat when she entered, and that as she entered at the rear door they went out of the front, as she heard a noise in the front room, followed by footsteps in the hall.

The cash which was taken had been laid out on the mantelpiece and was to be used in paying a premium on a life insurance policy.

A tenant in the house said last evening that she heard two young men knocking at Mr. Reeves's apartments Saturday afternoon, and after being informed that Mrs. Reeves was very seldom at home during the afternoon left, saying they would call again.

POLICE AND A DUMMY FLOATER.

Sergt. Fitzgerald of the Harbor Police Sub-Station at the Harlem River and One Hundred and Twenty-second Street, was sitting behind his desk yesterday afternoon when he was called up by Police Headquarters with the information that a dead body had been reported as floating in the Harlem River near Central Bridge. The Sergeant ordered Policemen Gardner, Dunham, William Hughes, and John Healey to set forth in a launch to reclaim the body. Out upon the river went the doughty four, and presently they saw a body floating in the stream.

"Let me get up in the bow," said Policeman Dunham, "I'll haul the corpse aboard."

He did so, but it was no sooner fairly on deck than the men on the launch were seized with a sudden longing to get out of sight. From the banks a shout of merriment went up as the policemen pulled apart a coat and a pair of trousers neatly fastened about a stuffed body so that the illusion of a man was complete.

Later in the afternoon the history of the adventure was related. The body began business early in the morning in the hands of a band of boys to the annoyance of not a few street car motormen in Harlem. The youngsters had a rope tied around the stuffed figure, and they stopped a score or more motormen, who filled the Sabbath air with uncouth language as they saw the stuffed man yanked from under them.

The fun ended rather abruptly, however, when this trick was tried on a car in which two policemen in plain clothes were riding. The latter gave chase, and in order to rid themselves of the evidence of their guilt the boys dragged the dummy to the river, and threw it into the water.

The maximum temperature was 34 degrees at 6 P. M. and the minimum 20 degrees at 7:30 A. M. The humidity at 8 A. M. was 61 per cent. and at 8 P. M. 61 per cent. The barometer at 8 A. M. was 30.43 and at 8 P. M. 30.26.

UNIFORM PRICES FOR DRUGS.

The 1,600 or more druggists of New York are about to adopt a plan for uniform prices for proprietary medicines, which is now one of the important features of the trade. A meeting was held at the College of Pharmacy Building on Saturday and reports were received showing that about 95 per cent. of the druggists favored the plan. Agents have visited the druggists and department stores which handle proprietary drugs, and it is thought all will join in the plan.

An agreement has been made by which the manufacturers will only sell to jobbers, and the jobbers only to retailers who abide by the scale. Heretofore customers for large quantities have been able to buy direct from the manufacturers. A scale of prices in which the greatest rebate from the list price will be 25 cents has been proposed. For cheap goods the rebate will be as low as 5 cents.

Infants' food and beef extracts will not be included, and such articles as phenacitene, salol, and others that are used in prescriptions will also be excluded.

It has been estimated that on an average each of the 1,600 druggists throughout the city sells from $400 to $600 worth of the proprietary medicines a month. Some sell as much as $1,000 to $2,000 worth. Many of these articles the dealers have been obliged to sell at cost or less.

George H. Hitchcock, the Treasurer of the Manhattan Pharmaceutical Association, said last night that fully 95 per cent. of the druggists had signified their willingness to go into the agreement, and that word had been received that the department stores would probably do so also.

"The druggists have been making on an average of less than 10 per cent. on these goods," he said, "and we cannot afford to do business on that scale. This is not a combination to hurt anybody, and the scale we have adopted is a fair one."

"How will you make sure that the men stick to their agreement?" was asked.

"Well, each druggist will have to be his own detective—that's what it will amount to."

EIGHT MEN KILLED BY SMOKE.

Were Asleep in Minneapolis Lodging House When Fire Broke Out.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 6.—Eight men lost their lives in a fire at 115 Washington Avenue at 3 o'clock this morning. The fire had its origin in the rear of the Standard Furniture Company. The men were overtaken by a large volume of smoke in the Harvard Hotel, which occupies the second, third, and fourth floors of the building, and death in every instance was due to suffocation.

The fire was discovered by Charles Hanson, who immediately apprised George O'Connor, the night clerk, and the two men set about to waken the lodgers. Hanson devoted his attention to the second floor, while Connor rushed up stairs. The men were all sound asleep, and in several instances it was necessary for O'Connor to break in the doors. In the meantime he gave the alarm, and the warning soon spread.

What took place in the dingy rooms and narrow dark hallways will never be known. It was a case of every man rushing for his own life. Nineteen of the twenty-seven lodgers were successful, but the others were unable to beat their way through the smoke, and fell in their tracks, where they were found by the firemen. Many of those who escaped came staggering out on the snowy sidewalk like drunken men, barely making their way through the deadly smoke and heat, and only partially clad. Several had the most narrow of escapes.

The loss on the building and contents will not exceed $3,000.

Semi-Annual CARPET SALE

Over Thirty Thousand yards of all grades of carpetings, including

Wiltons Axminsters Body Brussels
Velvets Ingrains Tapestry Brussels

The end of the season finds the stock cut up into remnants and parts of rolls; as well as containing full rolls of carpets that are to be discontinued. The store policy demands clean stocks before the spring carpets arrive. Radical action is required, and ruthless price-cutting brings the necessary activity.

All of the goods are comparatively new—bought for last season's selling. The earlier carpets were cleaned up last July. There is nothing newer or better to be found until the Spring stocks are shown; and though patterns will be different, many will be no handsomer than these, and qualities will be identical, as these are the best carpets made in their various grades.

The thrifty housekeeper finds here opportunity for a handsome saving in the cost of a very important part of the furnishing. Prices are depending on the size of the piece. Lengths ranging from 10 to 45 yards, being sold by the entire piece. Among grades so offered are these:

$1.65 to $1 Axminsters for 50c, 60c, 75c, and $1 a yard
$1.40 Wilton Velvet for 60c to 90c a yard
$1.25 and $1.40 Body Brussels for 50c to 85c a yard
85c Tapestry Brussels for 40c to 50c a yard
70c Tapestry Brussels for 35c to 45c a yard
60c Tapestry Brussels for 30c to 35c a yard
70c Best All-wool Ingrains for 30c to 50c a yard.

Also several thousand yards of Body and Tapestry Brussels at bargains not so great as the above, but of which you can have any length you want at the prices offered:

Body Brussels at $1 a yard, from $1.25 and $1.40

Such an offering in a stock so high in character, so carefully selected, and so clean and fresh, brings a most important opportunity to every housekeeper who is planning new beauty for the home this Winter or the coming Spring.

Walking SUITS and Skirts for Women

The story's brief. Nor will the stay of the garments it tells of be prolonged. Ample lots of each with which to begin the day's selling. But the offering is an alluring one—a rare money-saving opportunity.

These Walking Suits are of double-faced materials—cheviots, covert and broadcloths; jackets are double-breasted and blouse styles; skirts with inverted plaits, finished with tailor stitching. Handsome costumes in the best of recent styles, and good values at $45, as priced Saturday, but now

Twenty Dollars Each

The Skirts are of single-faced cloths—Oxford and blue—finished with outside fold, trimmed with rows of stitching. Moderately priced at $6. Now $4.50.

Second floor Broadway.

Women's Jackets

Short shrift for these short coats. It's a clearing up of little lots, and there's no time nor disposition to dally with them. Half price, or near it, on all these handsome imported and domestic jackets will make lively distribution. Worthy cloths of various sorts, the styles the best-liked of the season, the making all that it should be.

Some cloth jackets are $6, and on Saturday they were thought moderately priced at $10 to $15. Others at $10, that were $15 to $18. And at $15 and $20, that were $26. And a group of elegant coats that are now $25 contains values up to $43.

Beautiful jackets of rich, luxurious velour at $20,—were $38—and at $40—were $75.

Bargains in Furs

Very decided bargains in all fine stylishly made garments of dependable furs. The reductions in price are very liberal and general throughout the stock. A brief list will illustrate the sort of value-giving—will explain what's keeping this fur store so busy every day.

Irkutz Sable Capes in different lengths—only a few of each remain at $17.50, were $30; at $25, were $40; at $50, were $75; at $75, were $110.
Fine Persian Lamb Coats with rich bright lustre, at $75.00, regularly, $95.00.
Short Electric Seal Coats, trimmed with blended mink, at $37.50, from $45.00.
Astrachan Jackets at $45.00, were $55.00 and $60.00.
Collarettes in Combination of Persian Lamb and Blue Fox, at $30.00, from $50.00.
Natural Lynx Collarettes, with deep fronts, at $25.00, were $50.00.
Mink Collarettes, trimmed with Tails, at $35.00, were $50.00.

Second floor, Broadway.

Girls' COATS

Three-quarter box reefers at less than a one-half price,—not all of these—some are only reduced about one-third. They are of kersey, chinchilla and cheviot, in all the most-wanted shades. Some are double-breasted, military effect. Others are effectively trimmed with bands of astrakhan. All are elegantly lined. Sizes 6 to 12 years. The values at $15 to $21.

The Price Is Ten Dollars

Second floor, Ninth street.

The JAPANESE STORE'S Bid for Immediate Attention

Here are sharp reductions in price that assure quick reductions in stock. And that's imperative. We have never been able to do full justice in the matter of show space to the magnificent collections of Oriental goods gathered here. Crowded! And things of rare beauty are almost hidden from view. This is the plan of relief: Radical changes in the pricings such as must prove irresistible.

Only hints of the measures adopted are given below. The scope is wide. A visit to the Japanese Store at this time cannot fail to interest you—profit you, too, if tempted to buy.

Carved Ivories at half price. Some splendid specimens in this group, $2.50 to $62.50, though reasonable when marked $5 to $65.
Dinner chimes, in octaves, at one-third prices. $25 instead of $75, $20 instead of $60, $17.50 instead of $50.
A temple gong and stand is $37.50; was $75.
This beautifully embroidered screen is $100. It was $200.
And then there's this massive, mysterious-looking Japanese shrine. A unique and wonderfully carved piece of temple furniture. Wish we could tell more of its story. But the most pertinent part just now is the price. That's $100. It was $500.

Basement.

Framed Pictures

They are fine etchings, all good landscape subjects. All in 3-inch gilt-beaded frames, with mats. Size of etching inside of frame, 20 x 30 in. The price $2, though regularly $3.

A lot of smaller etchings, two sizes, 17 x 26 in. and 14 x 28 in., inside of frame, have had their prices halved—$1 instead of $2.

The BOOK SALE

The tables are refilled each morning and at times during the day with new lots. We begin this morning, as if it were the first day of the sale—all good desirable books, covering a wide range of subjects. "Hurt" books, that are not really badly injured, hardly enough to warrant such sharp price reductions, and many that are sound and whole and without blemish are treated in the same curt manner,—Prices reduced a half to two-thirds. Plenty of good books at 10c, at 15c, 25c and 50c, and a splendid collection of books for little people at little prices. They're on a separate counter.

January Clean-Up of CHINA, GLASS And Bric-a-Brac

This is the gathering-up of odd lots from the biggest stocks and the largest selling ever known in our holiday business. Four lines, attractive to all housekeepers, are included: Dinner Sets, Fancy China, Cut Glass and Bric-a-Brac. And while they are counted "odd lots" in these vast stocks, they make a collection that seems like a new display, as arranged for this morning—in fact, few stocks outside of Wanamaker's will have so comprehensive a showing of new patterns this spring. Yet these beautiful pieces are marked—

A QUARTER to a HALF Under Value

Housekeepers everywhere are interested—hundreds have been waiting for this announcement. Some quantities are large, but many lots will be sold out quickly. Best selections will be made early to-day.

The Sale of WHITE

The economy of doing things on a large scale. This is the secret of the splendid garments at such low prices. No other cheapening process is countenanced.

The manufacturer that steals out a quarter of a yard of muslin on a garment to save three yards on a dozen pairs of ten-cent drawers can sell them for 8½c. But the cent and a half that you save ruins the drawers. Poor economy for you or for us. We have them made wide enough for comfort, and keep the price down, too. Some manufacturers cut a half yard out of the width, and six inches off the length of a night gown—save a yard of muslin, to the constant discomfort of the deceived purchaser, and use the amount so saved to put on gaudy lace or embroidery.

The Underwear for this sale is made for comfort and honest sizes first; of honest muslins, dainty and refined trimmings, strong, neat sewing, in clean, healthful factories. Garments and prices unmatched.

These hints of medium-priced pieces:

Night Gowns—

Sheets and Pillow Cases

Still you come in record-breaking crowds to buy them, and still the supply holds out—ought to—there were 140,000 pieces in it originally. But it can't last forever, and with it vanishes this phenomenal opportunity for you to buy splendidly made, worthy sheets and pillow cases, of standard makes of muslin, at prices in every instance less than the present cost of the muslin by the yard, and less than the finished goods can be bought at wholesale. Here's one group among many:

42 in. x 36 in., 12c.	45 in. x 38½ in., 14c.	54 in. x 90 in., 40c.	72 in. x 99 in., 55c.

Closing Out Certain Cutaway Coats

For the man whose wardrobe is short, one of these dressy yet comfortable coats, here's a golden opportunity. We have rounded up a collection of small lots of Cutaway Frock Coats and Vests, and to avoid carrying them longer in stock, have marked them at a figure which will quickly relieve us of their unwelcome presence. They are eminently proper coats for afternoon wear, in materials of Clay Weaves, Diagonals, Oxford Mixed Vicunas and black unfinished Worsteds. There are all sizes in the groups, and promptness will assure you the coat you want at much less than you thought you'd have to pay for it.

Coats and Vests that were $12 to $22.50 are now priced at Ten Dollars each.

Boys' Clothing

The weeding out of incomplete lots still goes merrily on. It brings, among other good things, these Russian blouse, sailor and vestee suits to the front. The values of these run up to $8.

Choice at Three Dollars

And these boys' double breasted suits, in sizes 9 to 16. Values up to $6. The price is but $3.25.

About fifty high-grade reefers that were priced up to $10, are re-marked now. Five dollars each.

Boys' all-wool trousers, 4 to 16 years, value $1, at 75c.

The New Plaitings

These are the styles intended for coming spring—newest ideas elegantly worked out in combinations of fine white lawns, batiste, Swiss muslins, nainsooks, laces and embroideries. Also plain plaitings in ecru batiste. Prices range from 30c a yard up to $4.50.

There's also a special selling of embroidery edgings of nainsook and cambric, at about half prices:

Edgings, 12½c yd., regularly 25c.
Insertings, 5c yd., regularly 10c.

CALENDARS

Closing out this choice collection. There are thousands still remaining, as the sale begins this morning. By nightfall there'll doubtless be a different story to tell. Prices are reduced in very decided manner,—as if there should be no doubt as to the very excellent bargain offered.

Many of the handsome specimens of lithography are unique pieces made specially for us. Advertisers are finding this an excellent opportunity, and are buying in large lots. There's a generous supply and good choosing at 5c and 10c for kinds that were 10c to 40c. There are 27 sorts at these prices.

MANY SPEEDWAY BRUSHES

DR. GILL'S TEAM WAS BEATEN

There was a large and representative gathering of road drivers and their fast steppers on the Harlem River Speedway yesterday morning. They came from all parts of New York, Brooklyn, and Jersey, and the consequence was a series of brushes seldom witnessed in the stretch. It was ideal weather for the sport, and the roadbed, which was a trifle hard for the trotters, suited the pacers to perfection. Both sides of the stretch, from Washington bridge north to the starting point at Dyckman Street, was crowded with spectators, and many sought out comfortable spots on the high bluff where they could see both the start and the finish. They were generous and enthusiastic with their applause, but were just as quick to show their disapproval by hisses and cat calls when a driver attempted to take an unfair advantage or showed the white feather by refusing a driver whom he had beaten a second brush.

Although there were many new horses out for honors, it was favorites' day, and between the roan pacer Moth Miller, 2:07, driven by Dr. David Randall, and Alice Barnes, 2:11¾, known as the trotting queen of the Speedway, driven by her owner, E. F. Smathers, they had things pretty much their own way, and won about every brush they entered, besides having three fast heats themselves. Alice Barnes taking two of them. Team races always seem to please the crowd, but about the only one of importance yesterday morning was between Jack, 2:12½, who was put to the pole for the first time with Anhauser and driven by Dr. Gill, and the team composed of Monopol, 2:08¼, and Amoklin, Jr., 2:14½, driven by Theodore Maxfield. Considering the fact that it was the first time the Gill team had been put to the pole, and that they got a very poor start, they made an excellent showing. On the start the Maxfield team had a lead of a couple of lengths, which they held to the first quarter post, when the Gill team began to overhaul them. Both drivers urged their animals with whip and voice, and the stretch was cleared for the finish. Jack and Anhauser were almost on even terms with their opponents, when Jack began to act badly and lost the race by a half length. Both pair were jogged back, Dr. Gill being anxious for a second heat. A few minutes later the Maxfield team was seen coming down the stretch alone on its way home, and the greeting the driver received from the crowd was rather unpleasant.

MOTH MILLER BEAT RED LAWN.

A prearranged brush that excited much interest took place between Moth Miller, 2:07, and Red Lawn, driven by David Lamar. The first heat was close. Red Lawn giving the pacer a hard race, but the second was an easy victory for Moth Miller, who had several lengths to the good at the finish. Following this brush the two star performers were turned together, Moth Miller and Alice Barnes. The first quarter was covered with both on even terms, and then Alice Barnes gained a slight lead, which she held until near the finish, when Moth Miller, on being touched with the whip, made a spurt that put him over the line a short head in front of Alice Barnes. After an easy jog back, the two were started again, this time Moth Miller having a slight advantage. He did not hold it long, however, as Alice Barnes was even with him before the quarter post was reached, and setting a pace that caused the roan to exert all his powers to follow. Coming down the stretch under the whip, it was either horse's race, until Alice Barnes gained a slight lead, which she gradually increased, winning by a half length. Three other crack horses joined in the final heat. They were Smith, the pacer, driven by M. Wright; Maud L., 2:17½, driven by D. Wilbur, and Red Lawn, driven by David Lamar. The start was a very rugged one, and a quarter was covered before they began to get together. Moth Miller soon took the lead, and was getting away from the bunch when he broke. Smith taking the lead, closely followed by Alice Barnes. A pretty race followed for a lead, but Alice Barnes had a trifle too much speed for Smith, and passed him, crossing the finish with an open length to the good. Smith was second, with Maud L. at the hub, while Moth Miller landed fourth place by a head from Red Lawn. Peppina, driven by Elmer Stevens, led the bay mare Dundess, 2:23¾, home, and Alves, Nathan Straus's bay gelding, with a mark of 2:20½, defeated Red Lawn after a close contest.

There was an interesting three-cornered brush between the blind pacer Hopeful, 2:21½, driven by W. E. Durando; Drex, 2:16½, with B. T. Kearns handling the ribbons, and the National Butter Freelance, 2:17¾, driven by George Coleman. Freeland held the lead until the stretch was reached, when Drex, who had been filling third place, showed a remarkable burst of speed at the proper moment, and won the brush without apparent effort. Richard B., the chestnut trotter, with a mark of 2:21¼, did some fast work, and led several horses into camp, among them being La Belle Rosa, driven by William C. Parsons. One brush that excited much interest and proved that marks count for very little in Speedway racing, occurred between the speedy little brown trotter Dark Secret, 2:27½, driven by Thomas Lynch, and Alice Barnes, 2:11¾. The start was fair to both horses, and they trotted the first quarter nose and nose, the pace being a furious one. Several times Alice Barnes tried to drop her opponent, but Dark Secret held on well until within a hundred yards of the finish, when Alice Barnes gained a head of a head, which Dark Secret could not recover, although he made a desperate effort and finished in good form. Richard B., 2:21¼, driven by Charles Lloyd, was matched against Oscar, 2:20½, driven by B. Zahn, with the result that Oscar won by a good length, Richard B. breaking near the finish.

What promised to be one of the best brushes of the morning was spoiled by an accident. The famous pacer Dan Patch, 2:01¾, owned by Nat C. Strauss, was turned to an excellent start with the roan pacer, Moth Miller, 2:07. Both animals went away like a shot from a gun, it being a nip and tuck race to the first quarter post. The roadway was cleared, and everybody was craning their necks to watch the result, when suddenly Robert J. cast a hind shoe, and was pulled up immediately and sent to the stable, much to the disappointment of the crowd. Honors were about even when the accident happened. T. N. B., 2:10¾, better known as the White Ghost, paced several fast quarters, and won a very pretty brush from Drex, 2:16½, driven by B. T. Kearns, and Silvermaker, driven by Clarence Ware. Peppina, one of "Del" Whitehead's team, did some fast work, hooked to a sixty-pound speeding wagon and driven by Elmer Stevens. After winning several lively brushes the mare was finally turned with Dundess, 2:23¾, driven by B. Zahn. The pair seemed to be very evenly matched, and when their positions could be distinguished for up the stretch, Dundess had a little the better of it. Dundess held her advantage until fifty yards from the finishing post, when Elmer Stevens rallied Peppina, who won out with a desperate spurt that caused her to break a moment after crossing the line. In a second heat Peppina won again, but by a very narrow margin.

Alice Barnes, as a grand finale to her morning's work, won a brush from the well-known trotter, David B., 2:09¾, driven by J. W. Cornish. Red Lawn made a good showing in a heat with the gelding, Charlie Everett, beating him by an open length. Among the many who watched the sport was Gabe Case, behind a pair of trotters; A. L. Kecker, behind Atteka Boy; F. Gerker, with Baby Berniece, 2:26¾; Charles Reilly, driving Bel Esprit, 2:12¼; George McBride, with Bobby J., 2:19¾; M. L. Reid, driving Fixmer, 2:13¾; John F. Cockerill, driving Honor Bright and Switt to a pole; Isaac Fleming, driving Page, 2:09¾, and C. B. Newcomb, driving his team of pacers.

GREATEST SALES OF HORSES.

Record Held by Belmont Auction May Be Equaled in Bitter Root Stud Offering.

In the dispersal sale of the late Marcus Daly's Bitter Root Stud, which will be held by the Fasig-Tipton Company in Madison Square Garden Jan. 30 and 31 and Feb. 1, there is promised the first real chance for a new world's record for a sale of horses. For ten years the figures attained at the breaking up of the late August Belmont's racing and breeding establishment have led all events in that line, 131 horses, sold in two divisions, then bringing $611,500. The collection of fashionably bred animals to be offered by the managers of the Daly estate is even larger than was the Belmont estate's offering, but to make up for this, the Belmont breeding establishment, the Nursery Farm, Kentucky, had the advantage in the market that followed a conspicuously successful year of racing for the founder of the stud. Mr. Belmont, in 1899, having led the list of winning owners in America, racing horses of his own breeding. Bitter Root Stud is still young in the breeding world, but while it has not achieved any such sensational successes as did the Nursery Farm in the last years of Mr. Belmont's life, it has produced some notable horses, and in the richness of the winning blood represented in its sires and stud matrons, it compares most favorably with the wonderful collection of producing animals that went under the hammer after Mr. Belmont's death, and the question of whether or not the Bitter Root sale will excel the figures reached at the Belmont sale is an open one. In the announcement of the Bitter Root offering, 178 horses in all are named in the advance catalogues, while in an official announcement the entire number of thoroughbreds to be sold is placed at 191.

Turfmen and breeders hold varying opinions as to the probable outcome of the sale. By some it is argued that the throwing of so many horses on the market will cause a sacrifice, as there will not be buyers enough to keep up prices. Against this, it is argued that the very fact that so great a number of choicely bred horses will be offered at once, will induce the attendance of breeders from all over the world, and be the means of making a better market than smaller sales by any possibility could find. Whatever the result, it is beyond question that breeders of race horses the world over are keenly interested in the Bitter Root sale, and it is probable that every horse breeding country on the globe will be represented beside the sale ring when the great offering is made. The horses to be sold include eight stallions, chief among which is the great race horse Hamburg, 107 brood mares, and seventy-six horses in training. These represent a cost to Mr. Daly of nearly $1,000,000. What they will bring is problematic, for conditions now are different from those attending the Belmont sale, when the world's record was established. There are many horsemen, however, who believe that the figures that have had first place for ten years will be eclipsed.

The Belmont sale took place in the Winter following the season of 1890, when Mr. Belmont had the most brilliant success on the turf that he ever achieved. He raced many of the produce of his private stallion St. Blaise that year, and with these led the list of winning owners, his most brilliant single performer that season being Potomac, winner of the Futurity. Following Mr. Belmont's death that Winter, the estate sold out the entire racing establishment in two sets, twenty-eight horses in training bringing $123,600 in December, 1890, while in October, 1891, the breeding establishment, consisting of four stallions, forty-eight brood mares, twenty-seven weanlings, and twenty-four yearlings, brought $317,900, the grand total being $611,500. Of the individuals at the sale of the breeding stock, St. Blaise brought $100,000, while some of the large prices paid for mares were $20,000 for Viola, $14,100 for Princess, and $13,000 for Lady Primrose. At the sale of the horses in training, three yearlings that would have made the Belmont Stable invincible had the owner lived, were separated, St. Florian, His Highness, and Victory, the three in question being about the three best of the season following. The two sales, taken together, made the high-water mark for thoroughbreds, though before and since there have been a number of other notable auctions.

In 1885 Pierre Lorillard sold out his racing stable, seventeen horses offered bringing a total of $148,050, the highest priced individual being the sensational filly Dew Drop, bought by the Dwyer Brothers, for $20,000. Two remarkable sales of race horses that followed closely on the Belmont dispersal were those of F. A. Ehret and the late Senator George Hearst. The Hearst sale, in 1892, was of twenty-six head for $128,100, the fleet Tournament bringing $23,500, and the highly tried but disappointing Canvass going for $21,500. Young Frank Ehret, after a meteoric turf career, suddenly decided to retire, and disposed of his stable in the same year as the Hearst sale, twenty-six horses in training selling for $223,270. Don Alonzo at $30,000, Sir Francis at $26,000, Yorkville Belle at $24,000, and the yearling Dobbins at $20,000, being the most notable individuals of the lot. Another conspicuous sale of nearly the same time, was that of W. A. Astor's Fernecliffe Stud, when thirty-six head brought $86,675. In 1891, Galore, for $30,000, being the star of the event. Some other famed sales of thoroughbreds were those of the Scott estate, A. J. Cassott's breaking up of his breeding and racing establishments, the dissolution of the Dwyer Brothers' partnership, the Leigh and Rose division of interests, Daniel Swiger's sale of Elmendorf Stud, now owned by J. B. Haggin, and the shin, the Leigh & Rose division of interGideon & Daly auction of 1895. At the Gideon & Daly offering, seventeen head brought $108,500. The Cassatt sale realized $47,340 for sixty-four head. The Elmendorf sale was of seventy-nine head for $82,805. Leigh & Rose in 1894, sold out thirty-three head for $80,950. In England the sale of Lord Falmouth's stud in 1883 when seventy-nine head brought 111,880 guineas, holds first place, though the sale of the late Duke of Westminster's stud last Summer approached it closely, a yearling then selling for $50,000, the highest price ever paid for a thoroughbred of that age.

BARS FOR MATINEE WINNERS.

While matinée drivers still are talking about the decision of the National Trotting Association's Board of Review, giving Harry K. Devereux's horse, John A. McKerran, a record of 2:10 for a matinée performance at Cleveland, another question which means more uneasiness for the amateur reinsmen has been raised. This is whether or not the horses that have won heats at the matinée races on the new Randolph track at Lakewood, N. J., have acquired bars. If the National Trotting Association's rules are enforced strictly, it means trouble for some of the owners of matinée horses. The rules drawn to prevent racing on tracks that are short of one mile specifically provide that heat winners shall acquire bars of the same time that such heats were won in. Under the rules the horses in question are not credited with records, but simply are barred from racing in classes slower than the time in which heats were won. The Randolph track at Lakewood is three-quarters of a mile in circumference, and some of the races were of heats around the course. Naturally horses trotted and paced in time averaging something like 36 seconds faster than they could have covered a full mile, and the owners of horses in the classes around 2:30 now are confronted with the possibility of being able to race their horses in the two-minute class. That the National body will enforce the rule, and place such bars on the Lakewood matinée horses does not seem probable, but the decision against Mr. Devereux's horse has caused so much argument that matinée drivers are unable to guess how far the National Trotting Association will go to enforce its rules.

Major Thomas Dangerously Ill.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 6.—Major Barak G. Thomas, known as the Nestor of the American turf, undoubtedly one of the foremost and most successful old-school breeders in America, is dangerously ill at his home on Main Street, here. Major Thomas was taken to his bed shortly after the December thoroughbred sales, and his physician, Dr. Kinnaird, decided that his malady nearly approached pneumonia. After two weeks Major Thomas rallied, and his friends believed he would recover, but last week he suffered a serious setback, and tonight his condition is considered critical. Major Thomas, although one of the first to race horses, and one of the most extensive breeders, is still a breeder, and has at the head of his farm the good stallion Dr. McBride. He began racing in 1845, when he brought out Willie Herzog, Lady Taylor, Trouble, War Jig, Aureolite, Aureolus, and others, and later on he sent out Floriac, Tribali, Hearsay, Dixietta, Lady Himyar, Banana, and Hazem. Still later he bred scores of the best racers, including the great Domino. During his life he has had many remarkable experiences. His fortune has been made since the war, in which he received the title he still holds fighting on the Confederate side. He is seventy-four years old, and was never married.

Jockey Loates Arrives Here.

Samuel Loates, the English jockey, was among those who arrived on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiserin Maria Teresia yesterday. He has not been in America for several years, and comes at this time, he says, simply on a pleasure trip, expecting to return to England in about six weeks. He stood second to Lester Reiff in the percentage of victories won on the English turf during the past season. When asked if he would accept any mounts while in this country, the jockey said that he did not know as yet. There was a vast difference, he said, between the English and American ways of riding, and added that the American way had many advantages in its favor, but did not specify in what respect it was superior. The American jockeys, he said, had done some wonderful riding on the other side.

Loates's record on the English tracks this season included 114 victories. He was accompanied by his wife, and was met at the pier by J. E. MacDonald of this city.

Corrigan Will Go to England.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 6.—Edward Corrigan, the well-known turfman, arrived last night from San Francisco on his way to Chicago. Mr. Corrigan said he would sail for England on Jan. 15. "Ten of my horses were shipped from New York today," he said. "They are Corinne, Sardine, and eight unnamed two-year-olds. This lot will make my string in England number twenty-six. J. Waldo and W. Waldo have been signed to ride for me abroad, and will sail with me."

CROSS-COUNTRY RUNNING.

Cross-country runners were out in force on all the local trails yesterday, and despite the keenness of the atmosphere pronounced the weather "just right" for this pastime.

Capt. Christopher J. Kenney of the Brooklyn Athletic Club captured first honors in the run of that organization yesterday. The start and finish were at the club grounds, Grand Street Park, Maspeth, L. I. Frank Veres was a close second, John C. Doyle third, William H. Classen fourth, Bernard W. Dudley fifth, and Herman Classen sixth. Time—0:49:41½.

The run of the National Athletic Club from the club headquarters at Maspeth, L. I., yesterday produced some fast running. A course some six and a half miles was traveled. Anthony L. McKeever was first home, followed by Thomas L. Brophy, with William D. Wynne third, R. C. Wills fourth, F. Reuss fifth, and John J. Holt sixth. Time—0:51:11.

The Glendale Athletic Association held a paper chase from its clubhouse at Glendale, L. I. Henry J. Schneider and William H. Laurens officated as the "hares," and with big bags of paper "scent" sped away five minutes in advance of the pack of hounds. They made the course as difficult as possible, but were caught at about three-quarters of the way, and the entire pack raced in, John E. Fleming winning the run with Henry J. Fessenden coming in second, William H. Laurens third, James L. Gladwish fourth, Henry A. Ryan fifth, and Henry J. Schneider sixth. Time—0:41:22 1-5.

The Montauk Harriers held a most interesting run from the headquarters at Bay Ridge. They covered a trail a trifle over six miles in extent toward Dyker Heights, New Utrecht, and around by way of Fort Hamilton home. Henry J. McTighe won first place by six inches from Nelson Muller, who was chased over the finishing line by John F. Gordon and then in the order named came these:

B. E. Richardson, William M. Brown, J. J. Bennett, D. C. McTighe, F. J. Gordon, Henry Brown, W. E. Ernst, J. E. Gallophy, John J. Kelley, Edwin J. French, Hugh Kelly, and Henry B. Gannon. Time—0:52:00.

Nearly thirty members of the Hamilton Athletic Club started out yesterday from the club headquarters at Bay Ridge, on the weekly run of the club. The course was over the open country in the vicinity of Fort Hamilton and New Utrecht as far as the commencement of Bath Beach and return. H. J. O'Brien led from start to finish, winning quite easily, with Ernest Williams second, James H. Bennett third, William G. Richards fourth, Thomas J. Bradey fifth, James J. Mallorey sixth, Daniel McSpedden seventh. Time—0:55:32½.

Fast running and a big turnout of athletes marked the invitation run of the Star Athletic Club in the Ravenswood section of Long Island yesterday. Representatives of the Montauk, Star, St. Bartholomew's, Pacific, Xavier, Long Island City, and Pastime Clubs participated. The usual course from the clubhouse and over four miles of territory, taking in some of the hardest going in the vicinity, was covered.

There were twenty-six starters in the big event. Robert W. Kennedy of the Star Athletic Club won first place after a hot contest with Garrett J. Fitzgerald of the Seventy-first Regiment, who was second, with C. J. Foran, Xavier Athletic Club, third; Harry W. Schell, Star Athletic Club, fourth; F. J. Kelly, Xavier Athletic Club, fifth; A. J. Walsh, Xavier Athletic Club, sixth; W. Gould, Xavier Athletic Club, seventh; J. Donovan, Xavier Athletic Club, eighth; J. H. Lewis, Xavier Athletic Club, ninth; F. Walls, Xavier Athletic Club, tenth, and W. F. Powers, Star Athletic Club, eleventh. Time—0:28:00.

ON LOCAL BOWLING ALLEYS.

The national bowling championships, which will be held at Chicago in connection with the American Bowling Congress, beginning to-morrow and lasting until the end of the week, will attract the attention of bowlers everywhere during the present week, and will probably cause a number of postponed games in the local bowling tournaments on account of the absence of a large number of local bowlers who have gone to Chicago to take part in the proceedings. The Manhattan bowlers left last night at 6 o'clock, together with two of the Brooklyn clubs. Three of the Brooklyn clubs left yesterday morning, and the other, the Prospect Bowling Club, will leave tomorrow morning. The cause of the Prospect's late start is that they are members of the Carleton Club team in the Brooklyn Interclub League, and remain to bowl in that tournament this evening.

A tournament to start during the present week is the Royal Arcanum Bowling League, whose opening games will be rolled on Starr's alleys Thursday evening. The schedule for the week in the principal local leagues is as follows:

MONDAY, JAN. 7.

National Bowling League—New York Athletic Club and Our Council, Royal Arcanum. Starr's alleys.

Interclub Bowling League, Brooklyn—Columbian Club and Aurora Grata Club, Carleton Club and Crescent Athletic Club, Knickerbocker Field Club and Brooklyn Bicycle Club. Club alleys.

ACTIVITY AMONG OARSMEN.

Handball the Favorite Pastime with Rowing Men of the Harlem River.

Most of the Harlem River oarsmen who have been taking advantage of the unusually mild weather of the present Winter to get afloat almost every Sunday afternoon, found the cold air and piercing wind of yesterday a little too much for even their trained endurance, and only a scrub eight from the Atalanta Boat Club and a solitary sculler or two were observed upon the river. There was quite a large attendance at the clubhouses, however, particularly those which have handball courts.

More interest is being taken in this sport this Winter than ever before, and five of the clubs have excellent handball courts in their houses and tournaments in progress. The annual interclub tournament will be started about the first of next month, with the following clubs represented: Union Boat Club, Dauntless Rowing Club, Wyanoke Boat Club, Harlem Rowing Club, and Metropolitan Rowing Club.

In pursuance of the new rowing policy inaugurated at Columbia University by Coach Hanlan, orders for two new eight-oared shells have been placed with Ruddock. One of the new boats is designed for the Varsity eight, and the other for the freshmen crew, and both will be identical in design and dimensions. Ruddock will also build a four-oared shell for Columbia, and a similar one for the Union Boat Club of Boston. He also has under way two single shells for the Seawanhaka Boat Club of Brooklyn, one for Harry Vail, the coach of the Newell Boat Club of Harvard University, and one for Capt. Henderson of the Union Boat Club, Boston.

The crews of the Union Boat Club will begin training next week. They will probably comprise a junior eight, a junior four, a junior double, an intermediate double, and a senior double. The annual ball of the club will be held on Feb. 8 at the Builders' League Hall, Lenox Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street.

The annual election of the Atalanta Boat Club will be held at the Colonial Hotel, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Eighth Avenue, to-morrow evening.

A reception, given by the newly elected officers of the Nonpareil Rowing Club at the clubhouse, One Hundred and Forty-seventh Stret and Lenox Avenue, yesterday afternoon, was attended by over 150 members and friends of the club. An excellent vaudeville performance was given, followed by a supper.

Sloop Mermaid Launched.

Special to The New York Times.

CITY ISLAND, Jan. 6.—Anson Phelps Stokes's new sloop Mermaid was completed and launched from the Woods yard, this place, Saturday afternoon. The launching was only an informal affair, Mr. Stokes's relatives being the only ones present. A trial of the yacht was then made as far as Execution Rock and return, the boat working admirably under the strong breeze which prevailed. The boat will have a few minor details attended to, and will sail in the course of a few days for Nashua, N. H.

Cornell's Athletic Affairs.

ITHACA, N. Y., Jan. 6.—The Cornell Athletic Council yesterday met and approved of the date for the intercollege 'Varsity boat race at Poughkeepsie, which will be held either July 2 or 3. The date for the second crew race in which Columbia, Pennsylvania, and Cornell will be entered, was fixed for May 30. Harvard had been asked to send a crew to compete in this regatta, and if she decides to accept, the event will prove unusually interesting. W. J. Norton, 1902, was made manager of the football team to succeed Frederick Willis.

Prof. C. W. Pound resigned from the council. No recommendation relative to a football coach was received from the Alumni Committee, though it was learned that Glen S. Warner, the Indian coach, would not accept the offer to return to take charge of the team under the conditions imposed upon him.

Clark Out of Game with Yale.

In the schedule of games for Harvard University's basketball team, the date fixed for the Crimson players to meet Yale is Feb. 15, at New Haven. In that game, by special agreement, Harvard will lose the service of the team's present Captain, Clark, formerly a Yale man. Clark, who was graduated from Yale two years ago, played on the Yale basketball team then, and now is unwilling to play against the team he formerly was associated with. His absence from this game, about the most important that Harvard has to play, will be at his own wish, and with the approval of the members of both teams.

Seventh Regiment's Rifle Tourney.

In the regular Saturday night shooting competition of the Seventh Regiment on the rifle range in the basement of the regiment's armory, Sixty-fifth Street and Park Avenue, a handicap match was the chief event. In this Private William Phillips of Company D proved the winner. The scores in the handicap and the scores made by soldiers of the regiment who qualified as sharpshooters and experts follows:

Found with Feet and Hands Frozen.

Z. H. Sayre, sixty years old, of 139 Grant Avenue, Jersey City, was found unconscious at daylight yesterday within a block of his home. His hands and feet were frozen. He was taken to the City Hospital. His condition was critical, but it was said last night that he would recover.

BETH ISRAEL HOSPITAL.

The annual meeting of the Beth Israel Hospital, 206 East Broadway, was held yesterday afternoon, and was largely attended. Kaufman Mandel presided.

Harris Cohen, the President, in his report referred to the progress that has been made on the new hospital building at Cherry and Jefferson Streets. The structure is now nearly completed. It will represent, when finished, a total expenditure of about $200,000, and will provide adequate facilities which have been lacking in the present quarters. Mr. Cohen reported that the total amount received as donations to the building fund is about $40,000.

During the year 531 patients were received in the hospital; 282 had to be refused on account of lack of room. Of free consultations in the dispensary there were 32,000, and 38,000 prescriptions were filled. Mr. Cohen reported that the finances for the last year had been sufficient to meet all obligations and allow $6,000 to be transferred to the building fund.

Among individual contributors are Harris Cohen, $6,000; Leonard Lewisohn, $2,000; Jacob H. Schiff, $5,000; Emanuel Lehman, $1,000; S. W. Korn, $1,000; Dr. S. W. Bandler, $1,000; Andrew Carnegie, $200; James Stillman, $100; Charles F. Schieren, $100; Speyer & Co., $150; Lyman G. Bloomingdale, $100; Spencer Trask & Co., $100, and Benjamin Stern, $200.

The following were elected to fill vacancies in the Board of Directors for the coming year: David Blum, Arnold Kohn, Raphael Hurwitz, A. E. Isaacs, Barnett Levy, James Lissner, Nathan Marcus, D. Orently, M. Osmansky, Jacob Pelz, L. L. Richman, and J. Zelenko.

CHURCH FREE OF DEBT.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Jan. 6.—The First Reformed Church congregation saw $2,000 worth of notes and mortgages burned from the pulpit this morning. They represented the whole of the debt of the church, and it was announced there was $300 in the treasury.

The Rev. Herman Vanderwart made the announcement at the service that the kindness of members and friends of the church had brought this about unexpectedly, and that the church would start the new year clear of any debt. If it was found the expenses were greater than the ability of the church members to give he proposed that there be a reduction of expenses, commencing with a cut in his own salary and the abolition of the position of janitor.

James Coyle Goes to Bellevue.

James Coyle, sixty years old, who at one time was worth about $200,000, according to the police, was taken to Bellevue Hospital yesterday from Gouverneur Hospital. Coyle made his money in the saloon business in Hester Street. Margaret Coyle, a relative of Coyle, who lives at 175 Sackett Street, Brooklyn, and is reputed wealthy, called to see the sick man at Gouverneur before he was transferred yesterday. The doctors say he hasn't a penny left of the fortune he once had.

Unions Object to Governor's Ideas.

Labor unions object to that part of Gov. Odell's message recommending the consolidation of the offices of the Commissioner of Labor, the Commissioners of Arbitration, and the Factory Inspection Department. Resolutions of protest from Building Constructors' District 253 will be forwarded to the Governor this week. The resolutions declare that all three bureaus are necessary if the work is properly done, and say that they are the only Commissions which have been asked for by organized labor.

Talk of a Co-operative Bakery.

A general conference of trades unions and Hebrew church and reform organizations will be held to-night at 88 Attorney Street to discuss a plan for a co-operative bakery to aid the striking bakers. The church associations have promised to assist the bakers in gaining the ten-hour day for which they are striking.

Santa Claus Appears on "Twelfth Day."

Dinner to William H. Ten Eyck.

William H. Ten Eyck, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Republican County Committee, will be the guest of honor at a complimentary dinner, tendered to him at the Hotel Savoy on Wednesday, Jan. 16. Among the invited guests will be Gov. Odell, Lieut. Gov. Woodruff, Senators Platt and Depew, State Chairman Dunn, and Collector Bidwell. Capt. J. Stuart Wilson will be the toastmaster.

LABOR OPPOSES A MUSICAL TRUST.

Central Federated Union Excited Over a Plan to Exclude a Union.

At yesterday's meeting of the Central Federated Union Eugene A. Johnson, Delegate of the Manhattan Musical Union, protested against the admission of the American Federation of Musicians to the body. Delegate O'Brien of the Granite Cutters' Union, denounced Johnson, saying he was trying to establish a musical trust. There was an exciting debate, but the question was submitted to a referendum vote of all the unions. This will mean a fight between the unions in the Miscellaneous Section and those in the Building Trade Section, the latter having always taken sides against what it considers a narrow policy on the part of the musicians.

John J. Pallas, Chairman of the committee to bring about an agreement between the unions involved in the rapid transit tunnel and the sub-contractors, to prevent strikes, reported that the sub-contractors appointed Contractors Farrell, Holbrook, and McNulty a committee to see the labor committee this week and try to effect an agreement.

The Belvidere Council of City Gardeners complained that the landscape gardeners in Central Park were cutting down their working days to four a week. The complaint was referred.

The Amalgamated Engineers will give a dinner to Peter Curran, the delegate of the British Trades Union Congress, at 62 East Fourth Street, on Jan. 11.

The Board of Health will be asked to order an inspection of sailors' licensed boarding houses, which, it was said, are unsanitary. In some of them, it was reported, twenty people were sleeping in one room.

Genesee Society's Nominations.

The Nominating Committee of the Society of the Genesee has made the following nominations: President—Louis Wiley; First Vice President—Hamilton Odell; Second Vice President—M. T. Wilbur; Secretary—C. P. Williamson; Treasurer—M. W. Wynne; Historian—Job E. Hedges

RAILROAD CONSOLIDATION.

It is one of the humors of events that the day the Inter-State Commerce Commission submitted its report embodying a recommendation for the authorization of pooling among the railroads the consolidation of the Central Railroad of New Jersey with the Lehigh was announced. The previous day had brought the publication of the practical consolidation of the St. Paul line with the Great Northern, giving a continuous control from Chicago to the Pacific. Within a relatively short period like control has been concentrated in one group of capitalists for the entire railroad system debouching at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Newport News and Norfolk. In the light of such advanced and, recently, rapid evolution of the principle of railway combination along lines and over areas in which Congress has been seeking for a score of years to enforce competition, the report of the Inter-State Commerce Commission—sound as it undoubtedly is—seems like an echo from a situation that has practically passed away.

The forces tending to the unification of railroad control, first in limited and homogeneous territory, and gradually embracing these separate territories, have existed from the very establishment of steam land transportation. The knitting together of the separate roads which traversed the valleys of the Hudson and the Mohawk and reached toward the terminus of the Erie Canal on the shore of Lake Erie was as much in obedience to these forces as the latest and most far-reaching combination. The most powerful motive power working in this direction was the need of providing for the steadily increasing trade of the interior with the Atlantic Coast, especially with the constantly developing coast States of the North, and, afterward, through the Atlantic ports, with Europe. The trade thus demanding transportation grew with the spread of population westward. The largest single element in it and the one having the greatest influence on railroad evolution and consolidation was, of course, the shipments of grain to the seaboard and to Europe. But in addition there was a rapid development of inter-State trade in all branches of production, and especially in the products of the various and vigorous industries that sprang up in the path of migration and settlement, and gradually established themselves in a hundred centres, many of them as important as the valleys of New England used to monopolize. Within the memory of men now living the iron and steel industry of Western Pennsylvania was as novel an extension of the area of production in that form as the like industry in Illinois and the enormous ore trade of the Mesaba region have seemed in the last twenty years.

It was while this tremendous evolution was still relatively imperfect and the grain trade was still the chief element in the railroad problem that Congress undertook to deal with the regulation of the roads. It sought two objects. One was uniform rates for like service; the other was competition that would reduce these rates as low as possible. The legislation by which these objects were to be obtained embraced the inter-State commerce law, with its amendments, and the so-called anti-trust law. The pursuit of these ends was natural, and the ends were legitimate. Unfortunately the means selected to secure them were not merely inadequate, but practically self-defeating. Having decreed that each road should charge the same rates for the same service, Congress decreed that no two or more roads should agree and have power to enforce the agreement to maintain uniform rates. The inevitable result was a series of intermittent but constantly recurring rate wars, carried on more or less covertly, by which rates were now cut and now raised, being always unstable, and often ruinous. In effect Congress compelled a "struggle for existence" among the roads serving common territory, and in the course of that struggle the weak have been absorbed by the strong, or a strong control has seized on the exhausted or imperiled properties and practically consolidated them. The efforts of Congress to enforce competition really enforced consolidation.

It might be inferred that, in consequence, competition, or the reduction of rates, which was the object of competition, has been rendered difficult or impossible. We do not think so. Competition there still will be, if profits warrant, and the enormous accumulation of capital will henceforth facilitate that result. But, even if competition is checked, there will still be a powerful force tending to the reduction of rates—the need of constantly increasing volume of traffic to earn profits on the vast and advancing investment. This is the natural safeguard against the abuse of control which consolidation gives. The secret of success in a great modern business, railroad or other, is not great profit from high prices on a limited demand; it is the much greater aggregate profit from the extended demand springing from low prices.

THE CASE OF MOLINEUX.

The public will refuse to believe that the extraordinary delay in bringing the appeal of ROLAND B. MOLINEUX before the Court of Appeals for hearing is due to any other underlying cause than negligence. But negligence may be culpable, and where delay in determining the fate of a man under sentence of death is unreasonable and inhuman, blame attaches unless good cause is shown.

It was remarked upon that the District Attorney's office, as it was organized under Mr. PHILBIN'S predecessor, displayed a singular zeal and interest in securing the conviction of this man. Its efforts were entirely successful, although the case presented the startling anomaly of a conviction of murder in the first degree obtained against a man who, according to the testimony, could not have made the preparations shown to have been made for this crime without the aid of an accomplice, while the record contains no testimony whatever as to the identity or the existence of such an accomplice. It is quite within the bounds of reason to say that the trial presented aspects which made it desirable, not merely in the interest of the accused, but for public reasons, that the appeal should be heard at the earliest possible moment.

MOLINEUX was convicted on Feb. 10, 1900. His counsel completed their appeal papers and handed them to District Attorney GARDINER on May 4. The District Attorney's office certainly did not display unseemly haste. It took more than two months, until July 26, to examine the papers and prepare its case for submission to the trial Judge, Recorder GOFF. Then the Recorder immediately took a three months' vacation, and although he returned to the bench more than two months ago and took the appeal into consideration a month ago, the papers have not yet reached the Court of Appeals. A man who was convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to death eleven months ago, although on a new trial he may be acquitted and set free, has nevertheless been subjected to the penalty and torture of nearly a year's confinement while his prosecutors and the trial Judge have at their good pleasure and convenience given this most leisurely consideration to his case.

In these proceedings a very scant respect has been shown for the demands of justice, the interests of society, or the rights of the prisoner. The matter approaches the proportions of a public scandal.

DOLLAR GAS.

With the beginning of the year 1901 the legal price of gas to meter consumers in New York reached $1 per thousand cubic feet, the minimum figure of the progressive reduction from $1.25 provided for in the act of 1896. It will be remembered that when this act was under consideration the representatives of the local gas companies declared that it meant ruin to those who had invested their money in the gas business, since it would render dividends impossible when surplus was exhausted. When made, these statements were believed by those who made them, no doubt; but systematic economies have materially reduced the cost of producing gas and selling it. The reduction of a million dollars in gross earnings for 1901 as compared with 1900, which the change from $1.05 to $1 would show on the 1900 output, has been discounted, and is not expected to have any effect upon the market value of local gas securities; from which we may infer that no reduction in net earnings is expected. In point of fact, the 1901 business will probably be more profitable than that of 1900. The opportunity for increase is in the day consumption, which now materially exceeds the night consumption. This explains why the incandescent electric lamp have not hurt the gas interest anywhere—except possibly in Russia.

It does not follow, however, that a scaling down of the charges to meter consumers could go on indefinitely and not destroy the value of the gas plants supplying New York. At the present prices of coal and petroleum, a dollar a thousand is as low a price as the Legislature would now be justified in fixing as a maximum charge to meter consumers. Large consumers can always take care of themselves in the matter of rebates by special contracts. The gas business should be profitable, for the excellent reason that it gives no assurance of stability, and the interests of the consumer would not be promoted by making it unprofitable by statute. Its managers should have no excuse for the practice of sordid economies, nor for an arbitrary policy in dealing with consumers. At the present rate of $1 per thousand the business will pay handsomely, and with the large economies possible under consolidation, the saving in high salaries and the releasing of many valuable parcels of land now used for gas-work purposes, the stockholders will have no immediate reason to complain of the returns on their investments. To this no right-minded person will offer any objection.

Public opinion in New York is not hostile to the gas interest. The community is disposed to treat very fairly, and even liberally, those who work under local franchises. The gas management now has an opportunity to establish itself in public confidence and respect, by methods which make for success in every line, and especially in a business so intimately connected with our daily life as the sale of light. If it is wise and discreet it can count upon exceptional immunity from legislative interference. At the dollar rate the gas company can supply good and uniform gas of 26 candle power, and a service in every way satisfactory to reasonable consumers, and it will show sound business judgment by doing it.

COMMANDANT CUIGNET.

A French officer wrote to the French Premier and to the Minister of War, making grave charges against the Minister of Foreign Affairs. He attempted to confirm his charges by introducing through a Nationalist Deputy in the Chamber a statement questioning the authenticity of a document in the Dreyfus doesier, a document which, while it established the moral innocence of DREYFUS, was not permitted to have legal weight. The case of Commandant CUIGNET is important because it shows to what lengths the enemies of the French Republic will go, and because it is very likely the precursor of similar schemes to wreck the present Government, just released by the amnesty law from all obligations to the Dreyfusards. The Military Board of Inquiry, in declining to regard the case other than a breach of discipline, and hence within the jurisdiction of the Minister of War to inflict punishment, has blunted the weapons of the Nationalists for some time to come, although they will doubtless continue to dig in the old grave in the hope of bringing to light some fresh skeleton which they themselves have placed there.

CUIGNET knew perfectly well that his charges were ridiculous, his desire, or the desire of those who inspired him, doubtless being to place the Government on the defensive in a matter to clear up which would have meant a revival of the old scandal with fresh opportunities for Anti-Semitic, Nationalist, and Royalist agitation. It was as though he had accused M. DELCASSE with writing the bordereau and then challenged him to establish his innocence thereof. His whole action savors of the fantastic rôle played by the disgraced DU PATY DE CLAM, which was comical in spite of the tragedy it hid. But suppose, as he has alleged, that the Panizzardi dispatch of Nov. 2, 1894, was actually a forgery. Then the false interpretation of it which helped to convict DREYFUS before the first court-martial, together with the true interpretation which was ignored by the Rennes court, is rendered worthless, while its own origin is consequently laid at the door of those officers of the Secret Intelligence Bureau who first construed it into being a confirmation by the Italian Military Attaché of the guilt of the unfortunate artillery officer.

In the light of this absurdity it does not matter whether CUIGNET subscribed to the Foreign Office version of the dispatch, as M. DELCASSE says he did, or not. But the Minister of Foreign Affairs was the only person upon whom he could pin the absurd charge. In doing so he committed a breach of discipline, which quite naturally was the only tangible point which the Military Board of Inquiry found worth considering.

THE TIMES ANNUAL FINANCIAL REVIEW.

We think we may say, with moderation and modesty that the Annual Financial Review issued to-day by THE TIMES can be read with interest and profit by all intelligent business men, and that it is substantially indispensable to a careful and thorough study of the deeper and broader currents of business in the year just closed.

The statistics embrace the detailed course of the market for all bonds and stocks dealt in on the Stock Exchange, with comparisons with the previous year, and like facts for outside securities; a statement as complete as can possibly be made, and more complete than any that has come under our notice, of the formation of new corporations; a statement of dividends declared; four charts graphically describing the course of the market for iron, cotton, wheat, and corn.

In addition to these statistics, the Review presents articles by writers of acknowledged authority—and many of eminence—on the subjects to which they are respectively devoted. Among these writers, to mention but a few, are the Hon. LYMAN J. GAGE, Secretary of the Treasury; the Hon. JAMES WILSON, Secretary of Agriculture; Mr. JAMES H. ECKELS, former Controller of the Currency; Mr. MUHLEMAN of the Sub-Treasury; the Hon. GEORGE E. ROBERTS, Director of the Mint; Mr. JOHN HYDE, Statistician of the Agricultural Department. Apart from these gentlemen, whose reputation is quite independent of their official station and experience, there are others, whose standing in the business world is a guarantee of the value of their judgment, such as Presidents HILL, CALLAWAY, PURDY, and RIPLEY, Messrs. CHARLES R. FLINT, W. F. KING, HENRY B. HEBERT, CHARLES D. FREEMAN, President WALMESLEY of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, and students of special industries like Messrs. BAYLES, HOBART, SAWARD, and others.

There are also reviews of distinct value of the situation in foreign countries—Germany, France, China, Australasia, Canada, Central and South America, and a survey of the world's financial outlook by Mr. A. J. WILSON, editor of The Investors' Review of London.

The formal recognition of the appointment of M. WILLIAM DE KLEMME as the first Russian Consul to India recalls the agitation that was manifested in London last Spring when the desire of the Russian Government to have its commercial interests looked after in an official way in India was first made known in Downing Street. It was then declared that a Russian Consulate in India simply meant the establishment of a Russian centre of political propaganda within British territory, and that the British Government, in acquiescing in such a demand, would put into force a one-sided agreement, since no British Consular Agents were permitted in Russian Central Asia. Whether the restrictions regarding British representatives in Russian territory have now been removed we do not know, but an object lesson in the curious attributes of the Russian "commercial agent" is to be found in the Balkans, where the St. Petersburg Government by means of mere Consulates is enabled to sway the destinies of three nominally foreign States. Then, too, the recent establishment of a Russian Consulate at Prague, in Bohemia, has caused no little apprehension in Austrian official circles. It is therefore to be hoped that the appointment of M. DE KLEMME to Bombay has been preceded by a concise statement of the exact functions he will exercise, and that Downing Street has secured similar privileges in Russian Central Asia. Otherwise the Far Eastern question may presently be entangled in new issues.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut has introduced in the House of Representatives a bill amending the Gold Standard act of last March. It requires that when greenbacks or Treasury notes are redeemed in gold from the gold reserve, they shall be canceled; their value in gold shall be replaced in the reserve, and against this gold certificates shall be issued, presumably to be used in the ordinary transactions of the Treasury. The effect of this bill would be the same as that of the measure recommended repeatedly by President MCKINLEY, requiring that legal tenders once redeemed shall not again be paid out except in exchange for gold. That is a perfectly sound principle, and the gold standard cannot really be established firmly until it has been adopted. Mr. HILL does not, of course, expect action on his bill at this session, but it is well that there shall be such a measure constantly before Congress until it is passed.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Imitation can be the severest condemnation, as well as the sincerest flattery, and it was doubtless with the intention of expressing in characteristic way his disgust, natural to all patriotic Americans, at the impudence of the anti-imperialists that Mr. CLEMENS, at the City Club dinner, professed "a strong aversion to sending our bright boys out to the Philippines to fight with a disgraced musket under a polluted flag." The professional humorist must vary his effects, under penalty, if he does not, of becoming wearisome at last, and it is an entirely legitimate device for him occasionally to put on a solemn face and with all the accustomed signals of sincerity to exploit with seeming earnestness the views held by foolish or wicked or deluded persons on some great question. The late "Petroleum V. Nasby" did this with brilliant success, and it is no wonder that "Mark Twain" aspires to win a triumph of the same sort. But the plan, though good when skillfully carried out, has its incidental dangers. Mr. LOCKE avoided them, possibly because he had never justified any suspicion of a desire on his part to preach directly, instead of indirectly. Mr. CLEMENS, unfortunately, has suggested several times of late that his inclination lies that way, that fame as a humorist does not content him, and that he aspires to add to his own abundant laurels those which lesser men acquire by the maintenance of a consistent gravity. This has now and then proved confusing, even to some of his most ardent admirers, and we very much fear lest his present assumption of anti-imperialism's garments may deceive the hasty-minded into thinking that he wears them from choice and habit. Of course Mr. CLEMENS is not so poor a jester that he need paint large on every one of his inventions, "This is a joke," but he should not go to the other extreme and trust too confidently to the existence of a universal sense of humor. When he talks about the United States flag as "polluted," it would be only reasonable caution to give us all a reassuring and explanatory wink. Else may mistakes follow—mistakes the consequences of which to his popularity may be serious.

—IBSEN and the innumerable other literary fellows who were so prompt to seize upon "heredity" as a useful and up-to-date substitute for the Nemesis idea, and who, with its aid, have constructed so many more or less profitable horrors that were supposed to evidence deep scientific and philosophical knowledge on the part of the authors, are likely soon to pass through a period of considerable embarrassment. For the real scientists and philosophers seem to be coming around to the opinion that though "heredity" undoubtedly is a factor of appreciable importance in human life, it really is of no vast influence, and, worst of all for the dramatists and novelists of the realistic school, its decrees are very far from final or immutable. A recent writer in The American Journal of Insanity, for instance, declares that though the child does at birth show in various "stagmata" the effects of ancestral sins, yet the future of these so-called degenerates is hopeless only when they remain in the conditions, morally and physically depressing, to which they are born. If removed to another environment and well trained and nourished, they exhibit a marvelous reparative power, and in a majority of cases turn into useful, happy, virtuous, and healthy men and women. "Children of the slums," we read, "taken early, fed and raised in honest families, as a rule become normal citizens in spite of terribly degenerate parentage." We hear of the results with delighted astonishment. This theory may also do away with that fatalism which condemns degenerates and their offspring as hopelessly incorrigible, and which gives rise to the various absurd proposals for preventing their reproduction. Efforts at regeneration will take the place of nature's brutal methods of ruthless destruction of the least fit, as it is the rule for civilization to preserve and make useful that which was formerly destroyed by nature with reckless prodigality." Other authorities are taking the same view, and the doom of the degenerate seems to be only a warning after all.

—Resenting the current intimations that there is something wrong about the staff of physicians and surgeons at Bellevue Hospital, The Medical Record bids the critics look in another direction for the origin of the abuses now creating so much excitement. And its accusing finger points straight at Commissioner KELLER. The doctors, declares The Medical Record, should not be blamed for the misdoings of nurses, ward attendants, and others indirectly concerned in the care of the patients, since the doctors, though they made regulations, had no power to enforce them. The management of the insane ward is given as a case in point. "This part of the hospital had for many years an experienced medical Superintendent, who resigned last Spring, and whose particular office was then abolished. It cannot be denied that the medical staff strenuously advocated the continuance of such a superintendency, but without avail. Instead of honoring the appeal, the Commissioner of Charities shifted the new duties upon an already overworked house staff. This was doubtless considered wise on his part at the time, but the ultimate results can hardly bear out such an assumption. The virtual acknowledgment of error in this regard is now manifest in his finally acceding to the original wish of the board by re-creating the office of Medical Superintendent of the Insane, and holding the incumbent to strict accountability for proper supervision of his wards." The writer of the article credits Mr. KELLER with excellent intentions, and hints that he, as well as the hospital, was the victim of political influence. Mr. KELLER himself, however, is precluded from making any such excuse. He has often and loudly proclaimed his belief that party service was the best possible qualification for public service in any capacity, so he cannot complain that "pulls" controlled his appointments.

—Now that the first thrill of exultation on entering a new century has passed away, not a few people are confessing to a sense of doubt as to whether the change is an altogether agreeable one, and to a sort of regret at the drawing of so broad a line in their lives. Those who are old, either in years or feeling, recoil timidly from the necessity of identifying themselves with a new era, an era toward the glories of which they do not even hope to contribute anything, while, on the other hand, they dislike to couple themselves definitively with "the last century," a phrase that for so many years has had for all the world a moldy, ancestral sound, replete with the associations of semi-barbarism. The nineteenth century was all right, of course—while we were all in and of it; but now it is different. Some of us, and alas, how many! are still in and of that century, and the one just beginning has only the faintest of direct personal interest for us. It's a fine moment for the boys and girls, for those whose successes—and failures—are all before them, and no wonder they eagerly accept the prophecies of the great things to be done in the next hundred years. Some of them will do the great things, and a lot of them will at least see and profit by the doing, but there is little consolation in the prospect for those who are only survivals from "the last century." The generation that was and the generation that is to be seem to stand strangely—and for the former, sadly—far apart, if you happen to have eyes for the distance.

AID ASKED FOR A PARIS CHURCH.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Kindly permit me to direct the attention of your readers, not a few of whom I know are friends of this mission, to the circumstances in which we are placed. Besides paying the tax levied on ordinary citizens, the French Government, notwithstanding the representations made in our behalf by the British and American Ambassadors, demand the heavy tax specially levied on religious orders in accordance with the loi d'accroissement. Our church and house have been formally seized, and the Minister of Finance declares that the property will be sold unless we pay a sum which, with fines and legal expenses, amounts to 20,000f.

For more than thirty years our fathers have labored here among the English-speaking people of Paris, devoting themselves not only to the spiritual interests of our people, but also, so far as possible, to the alloviation of the temporal needs of the poverty-stricken. For the maintenance of our church and mission, we have no grant or aid whatsoever, except the voluntary offerings made to us, so that it has always required the utmost economy and the most strenuous efforts on our part to pay the demands which we have had hitherto to meet.

As the members of our congregation in Paris are unable to meet the sum now asked of us by the French Government, hope of saving our church from confiscation and of continuing our mission for the benefit of English-speaking people who live in or visit Paris lies in the generosity of our friends in England, Ireland, and America. Many people in these countries, no doubt, have reaped advantages from our presence here, and to them and to the charitably disposed we look with confidence for aid in our hour of trial and need.

The withdrawal of the priests who have labored so long for the English-speaking population in Paris would be a calamity of no small magnitude, and it is to prevent this evil that I am reluctantly obliged to bring our case under the notice of the public.

Many of your readers will remember me as Superior of this mission some years ago. Since then I have had to fulfill a similar office in other houses in England and Ireland, and recently I have been recalled here, in order to succeed Father Osmund Cooke, who labored so indefatigably in this mission for several years, and who through ill-health has been obliged to resign.

PHILIPPINES AND MARK TWAIN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In this morning's TIMES your quote Mark Twain as saying, in his speech before the City club, that "he knew enough about the Philippines to have a strong aversion to sending our bright boys out there to fight with a disgraced musket under a polluted flag," &c.

Now, will THE TIMES be kind enough to get Mr. Twain to explain just what the musket has done to become disgraced and the flag to be polluted, either in the Philippines or anywhere else on this earth where it has been carried? He admits that he doesn't know much about finance; it may turn out that he knows still less about the Philippines.

Perhaps Mr. Twain does not expect the public to take anything that he says seriously, except his humor. C. S. H. B.

Seeds as Vote Getters.

In THE TIMES of Jan. 3 I notice an article, headed "Seeds as Vote Getters," which calls attention to one of the most unjust uses of so-called public money. Originally the purpose was to introduce new varieties of plants and flowers, and by experiment have them tried in the various soils and climate of this country, but it has degenerated into sops for Congressmen, against the protests of honest Secretaries of Agriculture. The appropriation is constantly increased—the bulk of it is spent for varieties as old as the country and almost as old as the Christian era. They are bought cheap, put up cheaply, and scattered broadly throughout the country at the expense of the Post Office Department, accounting largely for the deficiency in that fund, and to a great extent destroying the long-established business and plants of seedsmen, whose only profit now is in introducing new varieties and selling their old seeds to the Government to be used as vote getters.

Just as well might the Government buy and distribute five millions of cheap pocketknives, or odd shoes, or goose yokes. There are grave doubts about the legality of the whole thing. In fact, a suit was once brought to test that, which only went far enough to have the law amended to try and legalize it.

Many packages of the seeds are franked to individuals who don't own a foot of ground, and mail bags full are sent to stores or Post Offices and dumped out for men, women, and children to help themselves.

Pardon my asking for so much of your valuable space to protest against this abuse of power. H. B. HATHAWAY.

Salaries of Cabinet Officers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your article in this morning's issue, "Discreditable Parsimony," in which you present your opinions as to proper emoluments for the Judges of United States courts, and say the proposed increase as to salary "is demanded by every consideration of fairness and expediency," is timely. Admitting all this, what is your view of the situation as to the Vice President of the United States and the members of the Cabinet? At the opening of the twentieth century, is it not an auspicious time to review the past and consider the meagre salaries paid to and the sacrifices made by those who fill these positions?

Many of them, men of marked ability and reputation, are compelled to draw from other sources the money to maintain a creditable habitation in our country's capital city. I might elaborate or plead at length for what the people of this country consider "a deeply discreditable situation," and no time should be lost in changing it. But this is not necessary; action is demanded, the facts have long been promulgated and talked about, and it is time some effort be put forth to right a great wrong. May it be your mission to give an article upon this subject all the prominence given to the one to which I have alluded. CONSIDERATION.

Porto Rico's Legal Status.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your account of the filing of the "Briefs in the Porto Rico Cases," published in this morning's issue, as usual is the best and completest. As you are no doubt aware, the section of the Constitution applying to these cases is in the article relating to States, viz.:

ARTICLE IV.

Section 3, 2. The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States or of any particular State.

The law is as plain as it can be, and shows how far the Administration has gone astray in the "benevolent" government it has set up in Porto Rico. If Porto Rico is not "territory," after the ratification of the treaty transferring it to the United States, what is it? If it is territory, by what authority does Congress enact a tariff law, to the prejudice of other "territory" of the United States?

It is a question vitally affecting the interest of every citizen, irrespective of politics, and to those who have no Constitution of the United States I would suggest that they procure one, which they will find in pamphlet form in the book stores at a small sum. It will be interesting to follow the arguments as to the right of the Administration to set up a "benevolent" government outside of the Constitution. It would also be interesting to know who the "advisers" were of the course that has been pursued. When the arguments are delivered, I hope you will publish as full reports as possible. WILLIAM C. DIX.

A Plea for Universal Peace.

While the air is yet full of the reverberating sounds of the elaborate eulogies on the nineteenth century, while our reverend gentlemen and our gifted orators are busy compounding high-sounding phrases in honor of the past century, we glance reluctantly up at the daily dispatches containing a report of the proceedings of the Christian armies in China, and the unenviable record which they had established for themselves in the past and present, and read also of the bloody executions with which they have celebrated the first day of the twentieth century. Our sweet and alluring dreams are dispersed like a cloud before a gale. Mr. Editor, I am no pessimist, nor one of those professional flaw-pickers, but nevertheless I maintain that as long as the nations will fail to recognize the sacredness of human life, as long as they will not be ready to admit that the negative commandment of "Thou shalt not kill" applies just as much to aggregate communities and commonwealths as it does to individuals, so long a state of warfare will be possible, and the practice of arms will be considered an honorable and legitimate vocation.

The inventions of Hiram Maxim and a Lord Armstrong will yield honor and munificent incomes to their originators, while The Hague Peace Convention will break up in a fruitless farce through the pernicious jealousies and intrigues of the various nations. We are just as far yet from the goal as is the Hottentot from our state of evolution. Let us abandon this complacent indulgence in the remuneration of past achievements and strain all our energies toward the remedying of these most uncivilized evils and the attainment of sublime perfection of which the twentieth century should really be able to be proud.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your readers who live on the west side of town have probably had occasion to comment on the condition of Central Park West from Fifty-ninth Street to One Hundred and Tenth Street—on what might be termed the dust nuisance.

The entire length of this thoroughfare, although completely asphalted, except between the car tracks, has not been thoroughly scraped or swept for some time, in consequence of which the Eighth Avenue electric cars, which run over that section of the road at a much higher rate of speed than elsewhere, cause the dust to rise and enter the cars in such volume as to cause passengers to appear, if they be unfortunate enough to be clad in dark clothes, as though they had been sojourning at a grist mill.

If we cannot obviate this state of affairs by better service on the part of our street cleaners, might we not expect the Metropolitan Traction Company to sprinkle that section of their track with oil, as on the steam railroads of the country, and thus eliminate a nuisance which is a disgrace to our Street Cleaning Department, and certainly no credit to the Metropolitan Traction Company? A SUFFERER.

THE GOODLY COMPANY.

Ripley D. Saunders in St. Louis Republic.

A loyal heart for a loyal friend,
And love for those that love you,
A fearless soul to the journey's end,
Whatever skies above you;
A laugh for luck in the dawn's glad light,
And a song where the night shall find you,
And the road you travel is brave and bright,
Though Fate ride fast behind you!

For loyal friends make a bold array,
And love is a charm to shield you,
And a fearless soul drives thoughts away
That to defeat would yield you;
And a laugh is a spell for gladness cast,
And a song so strong shall find you
That the coward Fate, from first to last,
Rides shivering far behind you!

IN FOREIGN LANDS.

THE FATE OF THE CONGO FREE STATE.—Considerable interest was manifested in European diplomatic circles the other day when it was announced from Brussels that on Jan. 3, 1901, the Belgian Parliament would vote upon the proposition to annex the Congo Free State in West Africa. The fact that no news of the action of the Parliament has come by cable would imply that no interrogation was made on the matter, and hence the King of the Belgians will continue to have personal jurisdiction over the West African territory until his death.

According to a convention signed July 8, 1890, following upon a loan of 25,000,000f. made to the Congo Free State, Belgium had the option, six months after the expiration of a term of ten years from the date of the convention, of annexing the independent State, with all the profits and advantages attached to the sovereignty thereof. The last date upon which the annexation could be accomplished was therefore Jan. 2.

For some time past it has been the opinion of those in Brussels well informed in the matter that the Parliament would not vote for annexation; since a majority of the Deputies and Senators are afraid of colonial ventures for Belgium, and, on the other hand, that the King is not desirous of ceding the State. He is said to be persuaded, with good reason, that Belgium, with its second-rate and costly officialism, would not derive from the colony all the advantages it is capable of giving, and, secondly, Leopold II. is not anxious to give up the considerable commercial profits which he derives from the Congo under the existing arrangement. On the other hand, Germany is known to be anxious for the absorption of the Free State by Belgium, as then many of the questions arising between the Congo and German East Africa would be greatly simplified.

In any event, however, the Congo territories, which constitute one of the largest colonies in existence, will lose the Free State on the death of Leopold II., who has bequeathed it to his country in his will dated Aug. 2, 1889, by the following passage:

"We, by these presents, bequeath and transmit to Belgium after our death, all sovereign rights over the Congo Free State, such as they have been laid down and recognized in the declarations, conventions, and treaties entered into since 1885, between the foreign powers on the one part and the International Congo Association and the Congo Free State on the other part, as well as all the properties and advantages attached to this sovereignty. And, granting that the Belgian Parliament pronounces favorably upon my aforesaid disposition, the sovereignty shall be exercised collectively by the council of the three administrators or the Congo Free State and by the Governor General."

THE DEMOLITION OF FRENCH FORTIFICATIONS.—The French Senate, following the recent vote in the Chamber, will shortly be asked to authorize the demolition of certain fortified places in the northern departments of France, which the penetrating power of modern siege guns has rendered quite vulnerable. The War Council has in the meantime taken exception to the vote in the Chamber, and has decided to amend the original measure by advocating the preservation of the strong places at Lille, Langreses, Laon, and La Frère. The council has also set forth on its minutes that the Chamber had "too hastily, and without due reflection, voted the dismantlement of the fortifications of the capital of the Department of the Nord."

The forthcoming amendment is regarded by military authorities in Berlin as to presage the inclination or intention of the French War Council to make the northern and northeastern defenses thoroughly serviceable, if not quite so formidable as those on the Vosgian frontier. In the discussion in Council of the subject, Gen. Donop, President of the Cavalry Commission, declared that when he commanded a division at Reims he found, from a study of the lines of invasion, that it would be dangerous to touch any fortified place whatever. He argued that even the smallest and weakest of such defenses had their advantages in this—that they could always be utilized in order to hamper and delay the march of the enemy. On the other hand, Gen. Saussier, former Military Governor of Paris, maintained that there was great utility displayed in preserving the northern and northeastern fortifications, declaring that in modern warfare energetic offensive tactics were capable of producing the best results, especially in the case of French soldiers, whose temperament inclined them toward vigorous assaults on an enemy.

CONTEMPLATED PURCHASE OF A SPANISH ISLAND.—A fortnight ago an interpellation was made in the Madrid Cortez concerning the report that a British subject was negotiating with the Government for the purchase of the Island of Salvora, at the mouth of the River Arosa, in the northwest of Spain. The Government in reply stated that it was simply a transaction between individuals, and hence a matter with which it was not concerned. It was then declared that the would-be purchaser intended to lease it to the British Government as a coaling station, or at least as a depot where coal might be stored for the use of the British Navy or merchant marine.

The question was at once taken up by the opposition press, and a few days later Gen. Azcarraga, President of the Council, in referring to the matter, said it was a lamentable fact that Spain had no laws such as existed in other countries against the acquisition of territory by foreigners, and that it was even more lamentable that private persons looked after their own interests in preference to those of their country, and sold their property to foreigners when they could do so advantageously.

It has later transpired that the island, which lies about two miles from the coast, is some three miles in circumference, and supports a few salting warehouses and a lighthouse, and at present belongs to a resident of Madrid, who, according to the opposition press, has raised money on it from several Conservative Deputies. The Englishman, it is said, has offered him 8,000,000 pesetas for the land. Most of the papers that have touched upon the subject make stirring appeals to the Spaniard's patriotism not to part with the island at any price. In case he declines to be so moved, an attempt will be made to have the Government purchase it, although this, according to the Opposition press, is just the issue that the owner and mortgagees had in view from the first.

THE FACTORY STRIKE IN CALAIS.—The strike in the lace factories of Calais, which has been going on for over eight weeks, had not attracted much attention in other parts of France until the Paris papers began to print articles on the extraordinary rise in the price of the fabrics manufactured in the Channel town. Few disturbances have marked the strike, yet up to ten days ago it was estimated that the workmen and girls in wages alone had lost over 6,000,000f.

The period of the strike has already covered the busiest portion of the year, during which the masters pay as ordinary wages between 700,000f. and 800,000f. per week. The committee of the union has distributed 149,000f., and has, moreover, borrowed 25,000f., which it has also distributed. On the other hand, the masters have been obliged to give a subsidy to those men not members of the union who have been locked out on account of the strike. Then, too, the manufacturers have been forced to decline offers for the coming Spring, and these orders have been placed elsewhere, some in Holland and some in Nottingham, England, so that at this late date, should work be resumed, it is believed that half time will be resorted to until the Winter is over.

The lace trade of Calais amounts in value to about 600,000,000f. annually, and most of the manufacturers there are self-made men; many of them have still only one or two machines, while 130 possess not more than three or four. These men, it is said, are practically ruined, and unless the larger manufacturers and the strikers come to an agreement before long, they will migrate to England.

POLICE STREET CLEANING IN PARIS.—Ever since the close of the Exposition the Paris papers have contained an unusual number of accounts of highway robberies, garroting, assaults, and murders. The police, it was charged, were either in league with the criminals or were utterly inadequate to cope with them. The police authorities replied that in making wholesale arrests, as they had formerly done to suppress an epidemic of crime, it was more than likely that many foreign visitors who, after the close of the Exposition, had lingered to get a taste of Parisian life might become entangled in the net; hence disagreeable complications might arise.

After sundry warnings, however, on Christmas Day the police resorted to the old-style battue. That night 392 persons were conducted to the Dépôt. Among those apprehended were 10 for robbery, 144 as vagrants, 83 for intoxication, 2 for night attacks, 13 for carrying concealed weapons, 3 for rebellion against the police, 3 for "special" offenses, 1 for attempt to murder, and 100 women charged with street walking. The battue will be continued nightly, it is said, until Paris is "clean." The Magistrates, working full hours, have so far only been able to dispose of the cases at the rate of 100 per day. According to the latest mail advices, 90 per cent. of those arrested are either convicted, or, in the case of serious offenses, held for trial.

CARDINAL GIBBONS ON WAR

Prays that Legislators May Never Be Betrayed Into Establishing a Large Standing Army.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 6.—Cardinal Gibbons to-day delivered a sermon at high mass in the cathedral, in which he reviewed briefly the events of the century just closed, with special reference to the wars which have been waged during that period as a preface to an urgent plea for universal peace. He incidentally touched upon the subject of the proposed increase of the standing army in this country, pointing out the evil results arising from the maintenance of large bodies of armed men in Europe, and expressed the hope that similar conditions may never obtain in this country. The sermon, in part, was as follows:

"The mission of Jesus Christ on earth was a mission of peace. He came to establish in our hearts a triple peace, peace with God, peace with our neighbor, and peace with ourselves. But Christ's mission of peace had a wider scope than to the individual man. His mission was also to bring peace to the family and society. Before the advent of Christ war was the rule, peace the exception, throughout the world. In pagan Rome the Temple of Janus was closed in time of peace and kept open in time of war. From the reign of Tullus Hostilius, the third King of Rome, to Augustus Caesar, a period covering 650 years, the temple was closed only for six years. So that Rome enjoyed only six years of tranquillity against 644 of warfare.

"But although wars are less frequent and less inhuman in the Christian dispensation than in pagan times, it must be confessed that we are, as yet, far removed from the millennium of universal peace. In fact, the nineteenth century, from its dawn to its sunset, has witnessed an almost continuous scene of sanguinary struggles between the nations of Christian Europe.

"From the beginning of the nineteenth century till 1815 the great Napoleon was engaged in a series of the most colossal and sanguinary engagements which set all Europe ablaze. Napoleon encountered the whole of Europe, and was generally victorious until the memorable battle of Waterloo, when he was defeated and his sun was set. History justly accords to him the title of the greatest military General of his age. About the middle of the century occurred the Crimean war, in which the allied forces of England, France, and Turkey fought and defeated the Russians.

"A few years later hostilities broke out between Austria and the combined forces of France and Italy. Austria was overcome in the battle of Solferino, and was obliged to surrender her Italian provinces. In 1870 the Franco-Prussian war took place, which proved so disastrous to the French Empire. Besides an enormous war indemnity, France was compelled to transfer to Prussia two of her provinces, Alsace and Lorraine.

"And at this moment, after an enormous expenditure of men and money, England is endeavoring to bring to a successful close her war with the South African Republics. It is stated that this campaign will cost England $600,000,000.

"And how does our own country stand on the subject of war? Although the cornerstone of the Constitution is peace with all nations and entangling alliances with none, we have had on our hands four wars in the century just brought to a close. In 1812 we were engaged in the war with Great Britain, which was justifiable on our part, because it was a war of defense. In 1846 the Mexican war occurred. Our terrible civil war began in 1861, lasting four years, and we have recently closed the war with Spain, which resulted in the loss to her, and in the acquisition by us, of all her foreign possessions.

"When we read of a great military campaign our imagination revels in the contemplation of the heroic achievements of famous Generals. We listen with rapture to the clash of arms, the shouts of the victors, and the sound of martial music. We seem to catch the spirit of enthusiasm by which the combatants are animated.

"But we take no note of the shrieks and agonies of the soldiers weltering in their blood on the battlefield. We take no thought of the sick and wounded lying in hospitals and prisons. We are unmindful of sorrowing wives and mothers at home weeping and sighing for the loved ones far away. We do not picture to ourselves the homes made desolate, the 'Rachels bewailing their children and would not be comforted because they are not.'

"During the civil war I served as a volunteer Chaplain at Fort McHenry and Fort Marshall, and I had many occasions to contemplate the frightful calamities occasioned by war. Gen. Sherman remarked in his blunt and expressive language that 'War was hell.' Happening to converse with Gen. Sheridan, I questioned him about his Virginia campaign. His face assumed an expression of sadness, and with a mournful voice he said he hoped never to witness another war.

"Is it not a mockery of justice and a scandal to the pagan world to see two Christian nations cutting the others throat in the name of Christian civilization? Is it not an outrage to contemplate one nation forcing by the sword her laws, her government, and political institutions on another nation in the interests of trade and commerce, as if merchandise and dollars and cents were of more value than human lives? Is it not monstrous to see a strong power invading a weak one and seizing her territories on the hypocritical plea of rectifying her boundaries? This rectification of boundaries is a very old practice, and is a polite name for robbery on a large scale.

"The old Roman Empire 2,000 years ago was constantly engaged in rectifying its boundaries. It did not stop till it had annexed all of Europe and a good slice of Asia and Africa. But the day of retribution came at last. The warlike tribes of the north swooped down like avenging eagles on that decaying and corrupt body—the Roman Empire—and rectified her boundaries over again. The empire was dismembered and the map of Europe was changed.

"It is a subject of great concern to the friends of the Gospel of peace that Christian Europe presents to-day the spectacle of a huge military camp. All the nations of the Continent as well as England, are armed to the teeth, and are living in mutual dread and distrust of each other. They are devoured by an insatiable ambition of conquest and dominion or by a fear of invasion. Armed nations, like armed individuals, are a constant menace to one another, and are easily provoked to fight.

"And these military forces, instead of diminishing, are unhappily increasing every year. As soon as one nation augments its armaments, its neighbor feels impelled to do likewise in self-protection. According to a report compiled and published in 1887 from official sources, the army list of Europe on a war footing comprised nearly 14,000,000 men, and the annual cost of maintaining the military establishments even in time of peace exceeded $600,000,000. At the present time the cost would probably amount to $1,000,000,000.

"May God so guide our legislators and statesmen that they may never be betrayed into imitating European Governments by the establishment of formidable standing armies. God forbid that we, ourselves, flushed with recent victories, should ever become intoxicated with the wine of imperialism or militarism, but may we always follow the traditions of the fathers of the Republic.

"God grant that the new century which has just dawned upon us may inaugurate a new era of peace, fulfilling the prophecy of Isaiah, 'They shall turn their swords into plowshares, and their spears into sickles; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they be exercised any more by war.'"

LUTHERAN CHURCH DEDICATED

Basement in West One Hundred and Fortieth Street, Near Seventh Avenue, Finished.

The Evangelical Zion Church, belonging to the German Lutheran faith, on the north side of One Hundred and Fortieth Street, east of Seventh Avenue, was dedicated yesterday morning.

The pastor of the church, the Rev. Henry Noehren, assisted by the Rev. C. Mueller of St. Paul's Church, Buffalo, met on the front steps of the church at 10 o'clock, and were joined by about 200 of the congregation. The builder, James J. Ownes, presented the keys of the church to the pastor, who accepted them with a short address. The doors were then opened, and a procession was formed, the pastors with Bibles, and the Trustees, with the sacred vessels, leading the way. The congregation formed in the rear, and all marched into the church.

The Revs. Noehren and Mueller placed the Bibles and sacred vessels on the altar, while the congregation sang a German hymn entitled, "Open the Gates of the Church." After a short speech of dedication by the Rev. Mr. Noehren, the regular Lutheran service was held, the Rev. Mr. Mueller preaching the sermon.

The church was organized as a mission by the Rev. Mr. Noehren on Nov. 1, 1896, and services were held in a store on Eighth Avenue, between One Hundred and Thirty-ninth and One Hundred and Fortieth Streets. The first congregation consisted of fifteen adults, and there were twenty-eight children in the Sunday school. On Dec. 21, 1899, the church was incorporated to hold property, and on the next day the lot where the new edifice is situated was purchased for $11,250. The basement of the new church, which will eventually be used as the Sunday school, has been finished at a cost of $7,500. The structure for the church itself will be started at once. There will be a large tower on the church. The property belongs to the Evangelical Synod of North America, with headquarters at St. Louis.

In the basement, which was dedicated yesterday, is a marble baptismal font which was given by Philip Ausserehl, a member of the congregation. At present there are thirty families worshipping in the church, and there are 100 children in the Sunday school.

A "congregation evening" will be held to-night, at which all the pastors of the Lutheran faith in the city are expected. To-morrow night there will be a concert for the benefit of the church, and the dedicatory services will end on Wednesday night with a meeting of the various associations in the church.

GRATITUDE FOR RICH MEN.

Dr. Savage Says Those Who Productively Employ Millions Will Be Considered Benefactors.

"The Twentieth Century: A Prophecy," was the theme chosen by the Rev. Dr. Minot J. Savage at the morning service yesterday at the Church of the Messiah. In his address Dr. Savage said: "We have reached the point now where I do not think the wealth concentrated in the hands of very rich people is such a public calamity as a great many seem to think. I cannot see much help in what is popularly called Socialism. I would be a Socialist in a moment if some one would prove to me that we could end human ills by Socialism; but we are not going to get rid of human nature by Socialism. I believe in individualism, and in that necessary co-operation which comes out of the necessary mutual interdependence of people, of communities, of States, of nations. That is the only Socialism that is coming. The world began in Socialism, and it was barbarism and tyranny of the worst kind, and every step toward liberty has been a step toward individualism.

"'I do not believe that at the end of this century the rich people are going to be envied as they are now. I get fierce and wild and angry at communications from people whom I do not understand except by supposing that they are as angry as they can be at Rockefeller and Carnegie and these men, for what? Because they have a pile of money and the writers haven't? I can see no other reason. The man who is worth ten or fifteen or a hundred millions of money must use that money for the public good or he cannot get returns for it. I do not want a hundred millions; it would take all my time; I would rather have something else. I think by and by that these wealthy men who have proved their capacity to productively employ hundreds of millions will be looked upon with gratitude by the main body of people for doing it."

BUSINESS MEN IN RELIGION.

A Duty for All in the Realm of Morality, Dr. Eaton Says.

The Rev. Charles H. Eaton, D. D., pastor of the Church of the Divine Paternity, Central Park West and Seventy-sixth Street, spoke yesterday morning on "Religion and Business." Dr. Eaton said: "Some of our business men say inadvertently, I cannot be a church member because of the demands of trade. There are many busy, active men who have accumulated fortunes in their business who have managed to find plenty of time to administer to the spiritual side of life. Turn from the temporal side of church life and you will find many business men who do not recognize the authority of the Church over the business world.

"In the realm of morality and religion there is a duty for every business man and woman. I do not wish it to be understood that all business men who are not church members are in the shadow. All morality and religion is not confined to the Church. There are innumerable men who are seldom found in a church among the most true and honorable in every other way except in religion.

"Matthew Arnold opened a way clear to deep thinkers," continued Dr. Eaton, "in his criticism on a tract on the smoking evil which he had come across. The tract stated that smoking involves a pleasurable sensation, and that all pleasurable sensations should be avoided. Earnest men, it said, should give up smoking. No wonder Matthew Arnold made fun of it. It is as false as the falsest thing to say that a man should avoid all pleasurable sensations. Should I give up the pleasurable sensation of being in the open air that God has given to me? Should I renounce the pleasures of eating and drinking and sleeping, and smoking, if you will, just because it involves a pleasurable sensation? No; for I see when a man ceases to find pleasurable sensations in life it is time that he asked God to take away his spent life.

"Even to-day in the schools of New York our children sing 'I want to be an angel.' I should be ashamed of any bright boy, with his whole life before him, who wanted to be an angel; it's foolish."

Dr. Eaton then spoke of the necessity of a business man watching the welfare of his soul as closely as his business.

PASTOR COX RESIGNS.

The Rev. Sydney Herbert Cox, pastor of the Lee Avenue Congregational Church, at Hooper Street and Lee Avenue, Brooklyn, tendered his resignation as pastor at the morning service yesterday. Recently this church society consolidated with the New England Congregational Church Society, and the first joint service was held yesterday.

The Rev. Mr. Cox became the pastor of the Lee Avenue Congregational Church about two years ago coming from the Tabernacle Church, in Jersey City.

A meeting of both church societies will be held on the night of Jan. 15, to elect officers and choose a Pulpit Supply Committee. The Rev. Mr. Cox will fill the pulpit until a successor has been installed. Mr. Cox will be retained.

The church of the New England Congregational Society, South Ninth Street, has been sold to the German Lutheran Emmanuel Church.

W. J. BRYAN BACK FROM TEXAS.

Says He Killed Sixteen Ducks on the Wing to One on the Water.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 6.—William J. Bryan passed through Kansas City to-night on his way home from Galveston, Texas. He hunted ducks while on his trip, and facetiously said that he killed seventeen ducks, sixteen on the wing to one in the water.

Speaking of his paper, The Commoner, he said the first issue would be out about Jan. 20. He feels that his newspaper enterprise will be a great success. He said that subscriptions were received from thirty-five States and Territories within a week after he announced his intention of publishing The Commoner.

New Yorkers Buy Canadian Mills.

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 6.—J. Leith Ross of New York is in Halifax examining the titles of the lumber mills at Ingalls River and St. Margaret's Bay owned by the Young Brothers. A sale of the mills to New York parties has been concluded. They are among the largest mills in Nova Scotia, and the purchasers propose to erect a pulp mill in conjunction.

Webster Davis's Father Dead.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 6.—Daniel F. Davis, father of Webster Davis, formerly Assistant Secretary of the Interior, died to-day of consumption, aged sixty-four years. Mr. Davis was a veteran of the Civil War.

ASSAULTED HIS FAMILY.

John Geiger Beat His Wife and Two Daughters for Not Giving Him Money.

John Geiger, a lithographer, living at 161 Avenue C, was arrested at midnight last night charged with having assaulted his wife and two of his daughters, after making repeated demands for money from them. Geiger had a pocket-knife in his hand and was threatening to "carve" each member of the family.

Geiger's wife has been ill. Yesterday morning he went home after a night's spree and demanded money of her. She refused, and he pulled her out of bed and commenced beating her. The neighbors interfered. A few hours later he asked his oldest daughter, Sophie, fifteen years old, for money, and when she told him she had none he beat her until the neighbors again interfered.

About 12 o'clock last night he asked his daughter Bertha, twelve years old, for money. She said she had none. He threw a large galvanized iron pail at her. She dodged and the pail struck the four-year-old daughter, Lily, causing a trifling scalp wound. Policeman Regan was called and arrived just as Geiger was brandishing his knife about his head and threatening the entire family.

SEES VISION IN TROLLEY SLOT.

Demented Man Runs After Golden Chariot Driven by Bluebeard, Then Drives It Himself to Police Station.

As a result of his vivid imagination James Burns, forty years old, who is homeless, is now an inmate of the insane pavilion at Bellevue Hospital.

Last night he was wandering about the entrance to the East Thirty-fourth Street Ferry slip. All at once he uttered a yell of excitement and started on a trot up the centre of the street car track leading through Thirty-fourth Street. He bent low over the pavement and looked down through the slot.

He was pulled up by Policeman Wilson of the East Thirty-fifth Street Police Station, and told of seeing a golden chariot as he gazed down through the trolley slot, drawn by three teams of white horses, and driven by a personage named Bluebeard. Then he gazed into the slot again and pleaded with Bluebeard to "pull up," as he wanted to drive the team himself.

Policeman Wilson placed a pair of imaginary lines in the man's hands, gave him an imaginary whip, and led him to believe he had gained his ambition and was driving the prancing white steeds. In this way he was taken to the East Thirty-fifth Street Station, and thence was removed to Bellevue Hospital.

ROBBERS ON CHICAGO ELEVATED.

Bold Attack on Passengers at 3 o'Clock in the Morning.

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—A series of robberies along the lines of the Chicago elevated lines, four ticket sellers having been robbed in less than a week, has caused a feeling of uneasiness among the night station men along the lines. The boldest of the robberies took place at 3 o'clock this morning, when a lone robber attacked the occupants of the Lake Street Line station at Ashland Avenue, robbing the agent and four passengers who were waiting for a train.

After taking about $30 from his victims the robber held them in the station until a train arrived, and then compelled them to board the train, which drew away from the station before the robber's victims could make their predicament known to the trainmen.

A passenger who alighted from the train took in the situation and fired several shots at the robber, but the bandit escaped.

DECORATIONS FOR HARBORVIEW.

Miss French Will Have a Turkish Room at the Newport Villa.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Jan. 6.—Miss Elsie French has selected an original set of decorations in the cloak and coat room at Harborview for the use of the guests who will attend the wedding breakfast and reception on Monday afternoon next.

The room is known as the red room. It will be transformed into a Turkish room, and the finest of Turkish decorations will be used. The floral decorations will include American Beauty roses, palms, and blooming flowers, with the fireplace banked with small ferns, holly, and plants.

The large floral horseshoe made of American Beauty roses which was used Saturday evening at the bachelor dinner given in New York by Alfred G. Vanderbilt, reached here to-day and was conveyed to Miss French.

BART CARRICK MISSING.

The Contractor Left Home on Friday—May Be in Buffalo.

Bart Carrick, a city contractor, has been missing from his home since Friday. A dispatch yesterday from Buffalo saying that a man temporarily insane had been found in that city on Saturday leads to the belief of his friends that he may be Carrick, although they are deeply mystified.

The Buffalo police found in the man's pockets letterheads bearing the name of Carrick & Co., contractors, at 310 West Fifty-second Street, New York. Other papers tend to prove that he is Bart Carrick, although this is by no means certain.

Carrick lives in West Fifty-second Street. His wife said yesterday that she had not seen him since last Friday, and that then he was well and in good spirits. Senator Plunkitt, who has known the missing man for years, said last night that he could not account for Carrick's disappearance. "I do not believe that the man found in Buffalo is Carrick," said he, "but I have telegraphed to find out. If it is he I shall have him brought on here."

FUNERAL OF BISHOP WIGGER.

Archbishop Corrigan Will Officiate at the Mass on Thursday in Newark.

ORANGE, N. J., Jan. 6.—The news of the death of Bishop Wigger was announced in all Catholic churches throughout the diocese this morning at all masses. Special prayers for the repose of the soul of the late prelate were said, and later a special mass of requiem will be sung in each church.

At Seton Hall a constant vigil is being kept beside the body of the late Bishop. It is still in the Bishop's apartments. It will be removed to the Chapel of the Immaculate Conception to-morrow or Tuesday morning, and will lie in state there Tuesday afternoon and evening. On Wednesday the body will be removed to St. Patrick's Cathedral in Newark, where it will lie in state from afternoon on that day until 8 o'clock Thursday morning.

A pontifical high mass of requiem will be sung at 9 o'clock Thursday. The officiating clergyman will be Archbishop Corrigan of New York, who was Bishop Wigger's predecessor as Bishop of Newark. It is expected that almost all of the priests of the diocese will attend the service. The burial will be in the Catholic Cemetery in East Orange. Thursday will be observed as a day of mourning throughout the diocese, and all the church schools and institutions will remain closed. In some parishes the schools will not reopen until a week from to-morrow.

Smallpox Prevalent in Missouri.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 6.—At a meeting of the Board of Health to-day Dr. J. C. James, resident member of the State Board of Health, said there were cases of smallpox in more than one hundred counties of Missouri, and that the most vigorous quarantine measures had failed to stop the spread of the disease. City Physician Coffin expressed the fear that Kansas City would suffer an epidemic of the disease this Winter. There are 100 cases here now and new ones are being discovered daily. The smallpox existing here is not of a virulent type, and few deaths are expected to result from it.

President to Speak Here Feb. 11.

President McKinley will be one of the speakers at the celebration in honor of the birthday of Abraham Lincoln at Carnegie Hall on the evening of Monday, Feb. 11. Gov. Odell will preside and Henry Watterson will deliver his lecture on Lincoln. A poem by Frank Emerson Brooks and singing by the Choral Union will be other features. The band of the Fifth United States Artillery of Fort Hamilton will furnish the instrumental music.

SOCIAL GAYETY IN HAVANA

Brilliant Palace Ball Given by Governor General Wood.

German Naval Officers Entertain—Amusements of the American Colony.

Special Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Jan. 2.—The American colony in Havana said with a sigh some two months ago that the season was going to be a very quiet one socially, that there would be absolutely no gayety.

There was sufficient reason for this prediction. In the first place the epidemic of yellow fever earlier in the Fall and Winter took away interest in gayety—that is, among the Americans, since it was among them that the disease found its victims. Secondly, the scarcity of American ladies, which condition was in a large degree a result of the first, since those who belonged here were afraid to come back from the United States on account of the sickness, and, lastly, because many who entertained extensively last year are not here this year.

Cubans have had time to recover from their period of mourning succeeding their long war, and have become as gay as ever, but American guests are far from being essential to the success of their entertainments.

But suddenly activity has seized the social world, and the promises of dullness have disappeared. The season from now until Lent will probably be far gayer than it was last year.

There was no cause to complain of lack of social life during the holidays, beginning with Christmas night, when almost every American who had a home gave a dinner party, the guests being mostly those who were boarding in hotels or private boarding houses, or had no one here to look after their Christmas. By far the most elaborate of these dinners was that given by Gen. and Mrs. Wood to bachelor army officers and married ones whose families were not here. There were about fifteen guests. On the same night there was a dance at Columbia Barracks. Every two weeks the officers give a hop in the pavilion.

BALL AT THE PALACE.

Thursday night, the 27th, the palace of the Governor General was thrown open for a large ball, the first which has been given there during the rule of the present occupant. There have been numerous smaller affairs, chiefly dinners to prominent Cubans, but this was the first function on such a grand scale. It was a very brilliant affair. Gen. and Mrs. Wood received the guests in the first salon, and from 9 until after midnight stood receiving the 1,500 persons who were invited. Long before the 1,500 had arrived the rooms were crowded. There were beautiful Cuban girls, followed by their faithful and ever-watchful mothers. There were Cuban women not beautiful, and these are as numerous here as in our own country, in spite of the ideal "beautiful señorita with jet black hair and eyes like the night." Then, too, there were beautiful American women, for our country may be proud of her fair representatives here.

Army officers in considerable number were present, although the glitter of their uniforms was wanting, for as they are not as fortunate as the navy in having an official evening dress, they wore ordinary civilian evening dress. The naval officers were resplendent in gold lace and brass buttons, not so much our navy, as it only has two members here. The Germans had a much larger representation; since its cruiser Vineta was in port at the time, and the officers, from the portly Captain down to the Lieutenant, including a Baron, came ashore for the occasion.

The crush was almost too great to admit of dancing, but still many of the younger people attempted it. The room used as the ballroom was the one in which official receptions are held.

There was music constantly. When one band ceased to play the other began.

From now on until the end of the season Gen. and Mrs. Wood will receive every Tuesday afternoon.

DANCE ON GERMAN WARSHIP.

On the afternoon following the ball there was a dance on the German cruiser, for which about 100 invitations were issued. Two officers from the ship met the guests at the wharf, and saw them comfortably settled in the pinnace for the ride to the cruiser, which lay at anchor half a mile out in the harbor. These German officers are interesting men, and made most of us blush for our ignorance of their language when they spoke to us in fluent English. I also heard one speaking excellent Spanish in conversation with a Cuban. Each woman felt herself a commanding officer when, instead of bowing in acknowledgment of an introduction, each German raised his hand to his cap in military salute, and then made a profound bow, the cap in no case being removed.

There was the usual profusion of eatables and drinkables distributed from little booths all over the ship, and the ribbons, with the ship's name, were carried away as trophies by almost every girl.

The compliment paid Germany at the ball the previous night was returned. When Gen. and Mrs. Wood came aboard the band played "The Star Spangled Banner," and when they left the marine guard was turned out on the gun deck in compliment to the General. While he stood to receive their salute the band again played our National air, and as his launch shot across the harbor the Governor General's salute was fired from the three-inch gun.

The new year was ushered in by a ball at the Admiralty building, where in their respective turns Spanish, English, Spanish, and American Admirals have lived. It was in this building, with its great halls, its narrow galleries, its marble stairs, and its patio open to the sky, that almost a century and a half ago Lord Albemarle tried to make peace between the conquered and conqueror in a few magnificent but unsuccessful balls.

This new year's ball was the first of a series to be given by the Army and Navy officers of the staff and garrison of Havana. The new year was well under way before the dancing was over, and the American colony is looking forward to the next dance in the series with a great deal of pleasure.

Many, both Cubans and Americans, left the ball in time to go to midnight mass, which was held at all the Catholic churches —not the short mass, which we find at our churches at that time of night, but one which lasts from two to three hours.

Then there are the races at the club grounds, which draw large crowds, although the various events are usually uninteresting. There are rarely more than three or four entries, and of these one jockey at least falls from his horse in the beginning. Still, in spite of its stupidity, everyone goes because everyone else does. It is an excellent place to display one's newest gown. Cuban society turns out in force to these races, which take place on Sundays or holidays. The former, of course, is the fashionable day here for the theatre, balls, or whatever the function may be. Some well-intentioned person suggested not long since that if Americans would frown upon this practice and refuse to attend any gayeties given on that day would be changed. It is to be feared that this reasoning is not good, however, since it is a matter of the utmost indifference to the large majority of the native inhabitants whether Americans attend their entertainments or whether they remain away from them. If there is an alternative it is probably in favor of the latter alternative.

There are two women's progressive euchre clubs. The larger of the two is just being organized, and its membership list includes the most prominent women of the American colony.

In the near future the North Atlantic Squadron will make a stop here, and its coming will be the signal for many entertainments.

DOROTHY STANHOPE.

Henry Wyndham Dead.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Henry Wyndham, Baron Leconfield, formerly Captain of the First Life Guards and Member of Parliament for West Sussex in the Conservative interest from 1854 to 1869, is dead. He was born July 31, 1830, and succeeded his father, in 1869, as the second Baron Leconfield. He owned about 110,000 acres of land. He is succeeded by Charles H. Wyndham.

Would Object to Exchange of Cyprus.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 6.—Discussing the alleged project of an exchange of German East Africa for Cyprus, the Novoe Vremya says: "Under existing treaties, the other powers must be consulted about Cyprus, and Russia will never consent to Germany securing such a foothold in the Near East."

PRIORI'S REPRIEVE DAZED HIM.

Molineux and Other Prisoners in the Death House Congratulate Him.

SING SING, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Warden Johnson was to-day notified by a telegram from the Governor of the reprieve for twenty days granted to Lorenzo Priori, who was to have been executed this week. Gov. Odell on the telephone confirmed the telegram. He said that friends of the condemned man had laid before him a long petition declaring they could prova his innocence.

Warden Johnson told Priori of his respite. The prisoner was dazed by the news, as he had been fully prepared to die. The other prisoners, including Molineux, called out their congratulations. The only exception was that of Joe Vathello, who asked what good it was to have the death put off, when Priori would have to die anyhow.

BROKE HIS AUNT'S SURREY.

Quigley and His Friends Made Merry New Year's and Are Arrested.

Edward Quigley, seventeen years old, lives with his family at 2,627 Seventh Avenue. His father owns several horses. His aunt, Mrs. Mary Peck of 113 West One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street, has a fine new surrey. On New Year's Day Edward invited two of his chums to take a ride. They were Leo Eysler of 74 West One Hundred and Eighteenth Street and Joseph Peeling of 238 West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street. Young Quigley took one of his father's best horses and his Aunt Mary's surrey.

"Aunty won't care," he told his friends. They got up into Westchester when the surrey broke down. It was left at a road house, and the trio came home with the horse.

Mrs. Peck heard of her surrey's fate, and told young Quigley to get it home and quickly and get it fixed, or she would put him and his friends where they would not be able "to break other people's property."

Mr. Quigley told his son he would have to get out of the scrape without help. The boys last night brought the rig down on three wheels. Edward promised his aunt to "make good" if she would give him and his friends a chance to raise the money, but she was so angry when she viewed the wreck that she called a policeman and had the three locked up charged with grand larceny. The boys were bailed out.

CAR RUNS INTO A CARRIAGE.

Knocks It from the Track and Three Persons Are Thrown Out.

One of the cars of the Twenty-ninth Street cross-town line last evening ran into a carriage in which three persons were seated about midway between Ninth and Tenth Avenues The carriage belonged to J. J. Slevin and was returning from a funeral. Nobody was injured, although one of the passengers in the coach was taken to the Roosevelt Hospital suffering from shock, having fainted in the excitement.

The coach was driven by Michael Cunningham of 29 Stanton Street, and those seated inside were: Conrad Becker of 410 West Fifty-third Street, Mary Carver of 74 West Forty-ninth Street, and Mrs. Mazzetti Nicolai of 444 West Fiftieth Street.

The carriage was being driven toward Tenth Avenue, having turned out of Ninth Avenue into Twenty-ninth Street. Car No. 590, in charge of Motorman John McNulty and Conductor C. Campbell, came up from behind and bumped into it, throwing the carriage off the track. The rear wheels were smashed, and the vehicle tipped over on one side, the occupants being hurled out onto the pavement. Mrs. Nicolai fainted from the shock and fright.

Policeman Tautphan of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station sent for an ambulance from the Roosevelt Hospital, and the surgeon, when he arrived, revived Mrs. Nicolai. She was then taken to the hospital.

MAIL STOLEN IN ITALY.

Five Bags Taken, Three Said to be from New York.

ROME, Jan. 6.—Five bags of registered letters have been stolen on the railroad between Turin and Rome. Three of the bags came from New York. The loss is estimated at 200,000 lire.

At the local Post Office it was said last night that no information had been received in regard to any mail matter stolen in Italy.

E. P. Wilbur of Boston Dead.

BOSTON, Jan. 6.—Edward Payson Wilbur, widely known for his long participation in State and city affairs, died at his home on West Newton Street to-day, aged sixty-nine years. He was a native of Newburyport, and since 1857 had been engaged in the dry goods commission business in Boston. He has served in the Common Council, and School Committee, on the Water Board, and in both branches of the Legislature. From 1889 to 1895 he was a member of the State Board of Civil Service Commission.

Eleven Arrests in Gambling Raid.

Capt. Walsh and two of his dectectives of the Eldridge Street Police Station, raided, at midnight last night, an alleged gambling room in the rear of a saloon at 57 Allen Street. The proprietor of the saloon, Morri Tinteltaub, and reputed proprietor of the gambling room, was arrested, together with ten players. They were all locked up. A number of cards and dice were seized, as well as some money. The men, it was said, were playing "stuss," Russian poker, and shooting craps.

Arrivals on Kaiserin Maria Teresia.

Gillig, Charles E. Barnes, Charles C. Frick, Consul John B. Bernhardt, George M. Cushing, A. John W. Grip, Scandinavian Minister to the United States; N. W. Harris, and Carl Schurz.

Passengers on the Cymric.

Among the passengers who arrived yesterday on the White Star liner Cymric from Liverpool and Queenstown were Norman M. Anderson, the Right Hon. the Countess of Antrim, Samuel Bell, Mme. La Comtesse Dendimos, Viscount Duniuce, Gerald M. Fennell, R. W. C. Ellison, Capt. W. O. Forbes, H. Hailsworth, F. O. Houghton, Al Clifton Kelway, Charles R. Service, E. R. Thomas, Dr. W. Warren, the Rev. Harry Wilson.

Struck by Engine; May Die.

Frederick Dresser, thirty-two years old, of 120 East One Hundred and Eighth Street, a car coupler employed at the switch yards of the elevated railroad, at Second Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, was knocked down last evening by an engine, and perhaps fatally injured. Dresser attempted to cross the tracks in front of the engine, when he slipped. He received a fractured jaw and seven broken ribs, and was taken to the Harlem Hospital.

Verdict on Mahackek's Death.

Coroner Cronin of Queens has held an inquest over the body of Joseph Mahacek of 253 William Street, Long Island City, who, it is asserted, was killed by John Flanagan of Manhattan in a barroom brawl in Manhattan some days ago. The injured man lived a week after the assault was committed. The Coroner's jury rendered a verdict that Mahacek came to his death from a fractured skull caused by a blow inflicted by John Flanagan.

Dr. C. S. Hurlbut Dies in Springfield.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Jan. 6.—Dr. C. S. Hurlbut, the first graduate dentist to practice in this State, died here to-day of pneumonia. He formerly was President of the Connecticut Valley Dental Association, was a prominent member of the Massachusetts Association, and was the inventor of many devices used by his profession.

Deal with Hamburg-American Line.

BERLIN, Jan. 6.—The Kosmos Line has entered into an agreement with the Hamburg-American Line admitting the latter to the west coast of America, under the flag of the Kosmos Line.

FELL FROM FIRE ESCAPE.

Woman Drops from Fourth-Story Landing, and Will Die.

With her back broken, both legs fractured, a fracture of the skull, and serious internal injuries, Mrs. Angelie Betrio, fifty-five years old, of 505 East Twelfth Street, was last night taken to Bellevue Hospital. She had fallen from the fourth floor landing of the fire escape in the rear of the building at that number, and there was scarcely a sound bone left in the woman's body.

Attracted by the sound of some boys fighting in the yard in the rear of her home, she went to the window to look out. She stepped out on the fire escape, and after having satisfied her curiosity started to return. She missed her footing and slipped through the opening of the fire escape. She fell to the landing on the third floor, bounced off, and struck the paved court below.

A policeman sent in a hurry call for an ambulance from Bellevue Hospital and the woman was taken there unconscious. She will not recover.

BOY CRIMINAL'S CALLOUSNESS.

He Tells How He Watched His Grandparents Drink Milk He Poisoned.

BRIDGETON, N. J., Jan. 6.—Russell Lawrence, the twelve-year-old boy who has been indicted for attempting to poison his grandparents, and who is in the county jail, shows no remorse. He tells the story of the attempted poisoning as though it were simply some ordinary incident of every day life.

He says that his grandfather threatened to punish him owing to a complaint which had been made by his grandmother. He feared he would be whipped, and after thinking the matter over, remembered the paris green which had been purchased for use in the house, and made up his mind to use it on his grandparents. He placed it in the milk which the family was to have for supper. He then sat down to the table with the old folks and watched them drink the milk, but drank none of that given to him.

It is expected that he will be sent to the reform school.

MLLE. BREVAL ARRIVES.

Mlle. Lucienne Bréval, the French prima donna, arrived here on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiserin Maria Theresia yesterday. She comes under engagement to the Maurice Grau Opera Company, and will make her first appearance as Chimène in the revival of Massenet's opera "Le Cid" on the 16th.

Mlle. Bréval was born in 1870 and entered the Conservatoire at the age of seventeen, studying under the well-known teacher Warot. She made her début in 1892 at the Paris Opéra, creating the rôle of Selika in "L'Africaine." A short time after this she succeeded Mme. Rose Caron in "Salammbo." She sang the rôle of Brünnhilde in "Die Walküre" when that opera was produced in Paris for the first time, as well as being the first to sing the rôle of Yanina in Augusta Holmes's opera, "La Montagne Noire," at its production in 1895. Other rôles first interpreted in Paris by Mlle. Bréval were Eva in "Die Meistersinger" and Ilda in "La Burgonde." Her first appearance at Covent Garden, London, was two years ago, when she created the rôle of Valentine in "Les Huguenots." Other operas in which she has appeared are "La Damnation de Faust," "Patrie," and "Aida."

In New York Mlle. Bréval will appear in "Salammbo," "Les Huguenots," "Le Cid," "L'Africaine," and as Brünnhilde in "Die Walküre" singing in the last-named opera for the first time in German.

Pianist Enrico Toselli Here.

Enrico Toselli, the Italian pianist, arrived on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiserin Maria Theresia yesterday. He is only eighteen years of age. His first appearance in this country will be on Tuesday, Jan. 15, at Carnegie Hall. Signor Toselli was born in Nice, and went as a child to Florence. He studied in Rome under Sgambati.

JOHN C. SIMS DEAD.

Had Been Secretary of the Pennsylvania Railroad Since 1881.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6.—John C. Sims, Secretary of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and well known in railroad circles throughout the country, died at the University of Pennsylvania Hospital at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Sims was operated upon on Dec. 11 to relieve him of an acute attack of appendicitis. He stood the shock of operation well and was slowly progressing toward complete recovery until Dec. 28, when his heart began to fail him. He rallied slightly from this new danger, but again grew worse and succumbed to-day. All the members of his immediate family were with him when the end

ACCUSED OF THEFT.

John Crutcher of Atlanta Says W. G. Tigpen of Macon Picked His Pocket.

Magistrate Flammer had a complicated case before him yesterday in the Jefferson Market Court. The prisoner was William G. Tigpen, who lives at the Victoria Annex, Broadway, and Twenty-sixth Street. He was charged with stealing a twenty-dollar gold certificate from John Crutcher, a furniture dealer of Atlanta, Ga., at the Marlborough Hotel, on Saturday. Tigpen said he was not guilty. He said that he belonged in Macon, Ga., where he formerly managed a hotel.

James J. Corbett, who was in court on another case, told the Magistrate that he knew the accused man, that he was highly respectable, and that he did not think he would steal. As the complainant had not appeared, Tigpen was discharged, and he left for the West Thirtieth Street Station to recover the twenty-dollar certificate which had been taken from him at the time of his arrest.

Two hours later Crutcher entered the court hurriedly. He apologized to the Magistrate for being late, and said that he had lost his way in coming to court. He said he wanted to prosecute Tigpen, as he was sure he had stolen the money.

The Magistrate explained to him that he was too late, and that the prisoner had been discharged. Just then Tigpen came into court again. He told the Court that the Police Sergeant at the West Thirtieth Street Station had refused to give him the twenty-dollar certificate, and he wanted an order from the Magistrate.

"You are just in time," said the Magistrate. "The complainant is here now, and I will reopen this case."

Crutcher said he was stopping at the Bartholdi Hotel, and that on Saturday morning he went to the Hotel Marlborough to call on a friend, George Lewis of Atlanta. He went to the room, where Tigpen was with Lewis. Lewis went away after a time, and Tigpen remained. Crutcher said that he fell asleep on the bed, and when he woke up a twenty-dollar gold certificate which he had in his vest pocket was missing. Tigpen was still in the room. The men remained together all day Saturday and at night went to a Turkish bath in West Twenty-eighth Street, where Tigpen, Crutcher said, changed a twenty-dollar gold certificate. He then caused Tigpen's arrest.

Tigpen denied the charge. He said he could prove where he had got the twenty-dollar certificate, and could show that he was respectable and responsible.

Magistrate Flammer paroled him until to-day for further examination.

SEWARD PARK PLAYGROUNDS.

50,000 East Side Residents Petition for Their Continuance.

Fifty thousand residents of the lower east side have signed a petition that is to be presented to the Board of Aldermen to-day requesting that provision be made for the continuance of children's playgrounds in Seward Park.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment, at its meeting last Thursday, made an appropriation of $8,000 for improving Seward Park. It has been observed, however, by those who are interested in the movement to secure playgrounds for the children in the congested tenement districts that no provision has been made for that feature.

The petition sets forth the need of playgrounds, and suggests that a part of the appropriation be used for that purpose.

The playground in Seward Park has hitherto been conducted under the auspices of the Outdoor Recreation League. It has been found to be a highly successful and desirable feature, and it is believed that by setting aside a portion of the park for playgrounds, much good will result. A letter has also been addressed to the board from the Nurses' Settlement asking that it use its influence to secure the greater part of the park for playground purposes. The observations of eighteen nurses who have spent their time in the tenement districts and whose investigation leads them to believe in the importance of the playgrounds are cited in the letter requesting the board to direct that proper expenditure for the purpose be made.

CORBETT GETS HIS DOG.

James J. Corbett, the pugilist, was the centre of attraction in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday when he appeared there to recover his dog, an English bull terrier, which he said had been stolen from his Broadway saloon.

The prisoner who, on Saturday night, was charged with stealing the dog, refused to give his name or say where he lived. Policeman Link led the dog by a chain when he appeared in court. The dog, whose name is Beaut, seemed to know Corbett, and jumped all over him, but refused to notice the prisoner. Corbett told Magistrate Flammer that he had had the dog for fifteen months, and that it had been in his saloon all that time until it disappeared a week ago. Several of the court clerks told the Magistrate that they recognized the dog, having seen it in the saloon. Corbett said that he did not want to press the charge of larceny against the man, but he wanted the dog back.

The prisoner said that he found the dog on the street three or four weeks ago, and considered it belonged to him, but when it was made clear to him that the larceny charge would be pressed he consented that Beaut be turned over to the pugilist, and Corbett went away proudly leading the dog.

MUST ANSWER FOR HER DEATH.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 6.—John O'Brien, a brother of Mrs. Mary Kelly of Kearny, who died in St. Michael's Hospital Sunday last from injuries sustained through being thrown or pushed over an embankment of the Erie Railroad in Harrison, will have to answer for his sister's death.

Coroner William Parslow of Jersey City and a jury heard evidence in the case last night. The evidence showed that O'Brien had been with his sister, Mrs. Kelly, on the night she received her injuries, and that she had told Chief Rogers of Harrison that O'Brien had either struck her or shoved her over the embankment.

The jury returned a verdict that Mrs. Kelly came to her death from injuries received in Harrison on Dec. 23, while in the company of O'Brien, and that O'Brien was partly responsible for her injuries.

O'Brien is held for the Hudson County Grand Jury.

BOYS PLAYED SUNDAY "GOLF."

East Side Urchins Improvise Games and Are Arrested.

Nine urchins, ranging from ten to thirteen years of age, were rounded up by policemen in citizen's clothes from the Madison Street Station yesterday afternoon. The policemen turned them over to the Gerry Society, who will appear for them in the morning.

The lads broke windows and hurt passers-by, the police say, in playing "golf" in the streets on the lower east side. Hydrants and lamp posts on coal scuttles served for putting greens, the sidewalks and asphalt for approaches, and rungs of chairs, hockey sticks, &c., as implements of play in the link game.

After trying to put a stop to the games by warning the boys, the police made the arrests. Two other lads who were arrested were bailed out. One game, where the majority of the boys were caught, was going on between Pike Street and East Broadway, and a few were corralled on Jefferson Street, but many escaped.

ROBBED MAN WHO AIDED HIM.

Mr. Eagleson Gave a Home to Foy and the Latter Stole His Clothing.

"I took him in from the street and gave him a home," said Ernest N. Eagleson of 200 East Tenth Street, "and he showed his gratitude by stealing my clothes."

Eagleson is a worker in the Bowery Mission, near Prince Street. During the holidays he met Foy in the mission house. Foy related such a "hard-luck" story to him of being an orphan, homeless, and friendless that Eagleson offered him a home.

On Thursday Foy disappeared from Eagleson's house with two suits of clothes. Foy was caught on the Bowery on Saturday night by Detective Larkin.

"You are an ingrate," said Magistrate Olmsted to the prisoner, as he held him for trial in $500 bail.

ACCUSED OF BURNING A BOY.

Brossi Said to Have Held Little Charles Timmers Over a Bonfire.

Joseph Brossi, an Italian laborer, thirty years old, of 446 East One Hundred and Fifteenth Street, was a prisoner in the Harlem Police Court yesterday morning charged with holding Charles Timmers, seven years old, of 1,631 Avenue A, over a bonfire until the boy's hands were frightfully burned and the hair on his head was completely singed off.

Brossi has been working on a new building at Eighty-sixth Street, between First and Second Avenues. On Saturday afternoon, as it was cold, the laborers built a bonfire, and little Charles, with his brother George, thirteen years old, and Eugene Canfield, twelve years old, of 413 East Eighty-sixth Street, played about it. The boys' charge that Brossi lost his temper, seized the smallest and held him over the fire, while the other men refused to interfere.

Brossi denied the charge and said that the boys were at the bonfire and commenced to kick the wood and stones. They were finally ordered away, and in running out of the place little Charles fell into the fire, thus burning his hands.

Magistrate Meade said that he would give Brossi an opportunity to get witnesses and he held him in $1,000 bail for further examination this morning.

The father of the injured boy said that he had positive proof that the Italian held the boy in the fire and that the boy did not fall as the prisoner alleges.

LOST FOUR YEARS' SAVINGS.

Couple Attend Wedding, Miss $236, and Now Are Penniless.

Andrew Peters and his wife, Elizabeth, of Great Neck, L. I., on Saturday night lost a wallet containing $236, while on their way to attend a church wedding at Roebling and South Fourth Streets, Brooklyn. The money represented the savings of four years.

Not having any faith in savings banks, they kept their wealth in the chimney of an old fireplace at their home. Before leaving home on Saturday evening Peters placed the wallet in his hip pocket. Several times on the way to Brooklyn the couple satisfied themselves of the safety of their little fortune. It was not until after the wedding ceremonies that the wallet was missed.

Mr. and Mrs. Peters boarded a crosstown car for Long Island City, intending to take a train for Great Neck. The car was crowded, and they were compelled to stand. The car had gone but a block when Mrs. Peters discovered that the wallet was gone.

"My God, Andrew," she exclaimed, "the money is gone."

Several men upon hearing this made a hurried exit. Considerable excitement followed among the passengers as Mr. and Mrs. Peters became frantic over their loss. Mrs. Peters sobbed like a child and between her sobs she said her husband on Saturday had lost his place, and that now they hadn't a dollar in the world.

The loss was reported at the Greenpoint Avenue Police Station. Almost the entire night the couple, with the assistance of a policeman, searched unavailingly for the money. Neither one was able to say whether the wallet had been stolen or had fallen from Mr. Peters's pocket.

AUTOPSY ON IGNATZ KAFFKA.

Coroner's Physician Weston performed an autopsy yesterday afternoon on the body of Ignatz Kaffka, forty-six years old, whose death on Saturday night was reported to the Coroners' office by the officials of the Montefiore Home for Incurables, at One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street and Broadway. The report was made to the Coroner's office by Dr. Joseph Frankel, one of the medical directors of the institution, living at 46 East Seventy-fifth Street, who had been summoned to attend the patient after a dose of sulphate of strychnine had been given to him.

The report of Dr. Weston does not settle absolutely the cause of death. Dr. Weston's autopsy disclosed the fact that the man was suffering from adhesive pericarditis, an inflammation of the pericidium. This really caused death, but to what extent death was superinduced by the dose of strychnine the report does not state.

DEAF-MUTE'S APPEAL TO COURT.

Wrote He Would Help the Upbuilding of New York and Was Pardoned.

Among the prisoners in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday was a deaf-mute who was charged with intoxication. When he was arraigned he handed Magistrate Flammer a note couched as follows:

Judge, I am more than hurt at being in court as a prisoner, I was taking hot punches because I was ill with colds. If I am sent to prison I will be no better than a well-dressed thief. If I am out I will help the upbuilding of New York's safety. A man is valuable to the city for the up-building. I feel sorry for what I have done, I never hurt a man. I was very tired, caused by three sleepless nights.

N. B.—I will treat the policeman as often as I can if I am allowed to go.

He explained further in writing that he was a printer and lived in One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street, but did not remember the number. He was discharged.

UNCLE AND NEPHEW FIGHT.

Solomon Waterman of 153 West Sixty-sixth Street and his nephew, Oscar Waterman, of 72 East Eighty-first Street, were prisoners in Centre Street Court yesterday morning charged with disorderly conduct, in that they engaged in a fistic encounter to the edification of a large crowd of people on Broadway and Duane Street Saturday afternoon.

Policeman Bary of the Broadway squad told Magistrate Mayo that when he interfered the prisoners were pommeling one another fiercely, and traffic on Broadway was blocked. The trouble, it appears, was over family and business matters.

The Farmers' Loan and Trust Co.
Trustee.
By E. S. MARSTON, President.
New York, January 2d, 1901.

WANTED—An ambitious man of affairs, for a long-established, universally known corporation, of the highest rank, reputation, resources, and amount of business, and which operates everywhere in the United States and Canada, largely through its own representatives. The man wanted to assist an overworked Chairman of the Board generally, and specially to take over the management of the great and constantly growing outside business. He should be experienced and preferably not over forty years of age, and also preferably now occupying a responsible similar position. The compensation will be large at once, and will be considered secondary to the special ability required. The right man upon evidence of success would be made one of the higher officers of the corporation with appropriate increased compensation. The applications will be treated by the Chairman in every respect confidentially. Address CHAIRMAN, P. O. Box 1579, New York City.

To the Stockholders
OF THE
AMERICAN STEEL AND WIRE CO.
PROXIES.

At the request of the holders of a large amount of the preferred and common stocks of this company, we solicit the co-operation and support of all stockholders who desire the election of an efficient Board of Directors at the next annual meeting, to be held on the 19th day of February, 1901. We are prepared to receive proxies entitling us to vote stock at said meeting.

Blank forms of proxies can be obtained at our office.

TO THE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDHOLDERS
OF THE
Fort Worth and Denver City Railway Company.

The interest on the first mortgage bonds of the Fort Worth and Denver City Railway Company, which, by agreement of October 12th, 1895, between a Committee of the Bondholders and the Union Pacific, Denver and Gulf Railway Company and its Receiver, was reduced for a time to four per cent., will, after December 1, 1900, accrue and be payable at the original rate of six per cent.

The control of the Company through stock ownership is in the Colorado and Southern Railway Company, and it appears from published reports that the present earnings of the property are not sufficient to pay the full interest on the bonds. Under these circumstances it becomes essential that the bondholders unite in securing all the consideration to which they are entitled, and, if need be, enforcing their rights under the mortgages and otherwise protecting their interests.

The undersigned have been requested by the principal bondholders to act as a bondholders' committee, and in order to confer upon the committee necessary authority, the bondholders are respectfully urged to deposit their bonds at once with the United States Trust Company under a bondholders' agreement lodged with it.

Engraved certificates of deposit will be issued by the Trust Company, and application will be made to the New York Stock Exchange to list the same.

Copies of the agreement can be obtained either from the Trust Company or from the Committee.

All that certain lot, piece or parcel of land, with the buildings thereon erected, in the Borough of the Bronx, in the City of New York, Bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at a point formed by the intersection of the southeasterly side of Stebbins Avenue with the southerly side of Home Street, running thence easterly along said Home Street fifty-two and ninety-eight one-hundredths feet; thence southerly ninety-four feet; thence northwesterly one hundred and two and seventy-four one-hundredths feet to the southeasterly side of Stebbins Avenue; thence northeasterly along Stebbins Avenue thirty-two and ninety-nine one-hundredths feet to the point or place of beginning, be the said several dimensions more or less, being the same premises heretofore conveyed by Henry D. Tiffany and wife to Olimpia Bonfandy by deed dated December, 1886, and recorded in the office of the Register of the City and County of New York on December 20th, 1886, in Liber 2,017 of Conveyances, at Page 170, and being the same premises conveyed by Frederick W. Pitcher and his wife to said Alfred Ericson by deed dated October 24th, 1898, and recorded in the office of the Register of the County of New York October 31st, 1898, in Block Series, (Conveyances,) Section 10, Liber 15, Page 180, and indexed under block number 2,692 on the land map of the City of New York, subject to an encroachment on the southerly side of said plot to the extent of about one inch to about one and three-quarter inches.

MILTON S. GUITERMAN.

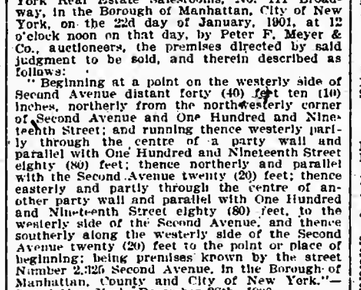
The following is a diagram of the property to be sold, as described above:



The approximate amount of the lien or charge to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold is $13,039.52, with interest thereon from the 9th day of November, 1900, together with costs and allowances amounting to $371.20, with interest from the 20th day of November, 1900, together with the expenses of the sale. The approximate amount of taxes, assessments, or other liens, which are to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money or paid by the referee, is $861.04 and interest.

SKULL BROKEN, DIDN'T KNOW IT.

Patrick Madden, Fatally Injured, Went About for Several Days.

Patrick Madden, nineteen years old, of 123 Fremont Street, Jersey City, was dying at the City Hospital last night from a fractured skull. William Horn, twenty-two years old, of 357 Jackson Avenue, was locked up on a charge of atrocious assault, and Michael Killeen, twenty-one years old, of 37 Fairmount Avenue, was held as a witness.

Madden was found unconscious on the sidewalk near his home on New Year's night. Nothing was known of an affray at that time, and as he had evidently been drinking, he was locked up on a charge of drunkenness. When he was arraigned on Wednesday he made no statement, but admitted that he had been drinking. He showed no sign of his injury. He was fined $5. As he had no money, he was committed to the county jail for fifteen days in default. That afternoon his sister paid his fine, and he went home.

On Thursday he complained of a pain in his head. Dr. Mulvaney was called. He found that Madden's skull was fractured, and the patient was sent to the City Hospital. He refused to say how he was injured until yesterday, when he was warned by the surgeon in charge that he was likely to die. Then he told his story and the arrests followed. At the hospital last night it was said that there was no hope of Madden's recovery.

YERKES'S LONDON RAILWAY.

Mr. Parshall, Who May Be Its Manager, Arrives Here on Business.

H. F. Parshall, who, it has been rumored, is to soon assume a managerial position in connection with the Yerkes London underground railway system, arrived in New York on the White Star steamship Cymric yesterday. When asked if the reports were true, he said:

"There have been negotiations between Mr. Louderback, Mr. Davis, Mr. Yerkes's representative and myself in reference to the matter. I made a proposition to them, and I may receive a favorable reply. That is as near as I come to being Mr. Yerkes's London manager."

Referring to the different London traction companies Mr. Parshall said:

"I have been in England for many years, and have been interested in most of the large construction work. My object in coming to America at this time is in the interest of the Central London Railroad and the Glasgow Corporation Tramway. The Central London has been successful since its inauguration, as many as 250,000 passengers having been carried by the line in one day. The road is six and a quarter miles in length, running from Shepherd's Bush to the Mansion House. The cost of the road was £5,500,000, and it is the only railroad in London that is run on strictly American lines."

Mr. Parshall said that he considered Mr. Yerkes to have been very lucky in securing his concession, as he believed that Parliament would consider unfavorably most of the London underground schemes now projected. The nature of the business in connection with his visit, he said, was to place a large order for railroad supplies, the amount or the nature of which he declined to tell.

Investors, Manufacturers or Merchants desiring to purchase or lease can find a golden opportunity for INVESTMENT or RENTAL in New York City Realty.

A Plot of Land 9,200 Square Feet with entrance on two streets, in a most central location, between 14th and 23d Sts., Broadway and 6th Ave.

This location has all the advantages of 5th Ave. for business purposes, at about one-half the rental.

Will sell plot, erect a building to suit tenant, who will lease part or all of same, or build from your own plans and turn it over with the land at a stated price. Building will have light on all sides, being superior in this respect to a corner building.

This is a remarkable opportunity for any one seeking a profitable real estate investment or lessees desiring warerooms close to the shopping districts of 14th St., 6th Ave. and 23d St.

SILK UNDERWEAR

has always been looked upon by most people as one of the unattainable luxuries, as belonging to the rich alone. Its soothing influences and health retaining properties seem beyond the reach of the very persons to whom they would be of most benefit. With on the market the most moderate purses may afford underwear luxury, as the material, though soft and fine enough for babies' wear, is so durable as to outlast far heavier fabrics.

See the word KOTEDSILK on every garment.

The Financial Situation.

New York, the Financial Centre of the World—great strides have been made toward this goal, and the pace grows. What in 1900 was accomplished—and tremendous was that accomplishment—is but suggestive of what 1901 promises.

In the financial world the past year will be long celebrated as the breaker of records. Long and in many a way remarkable is 1900's list of developments, putting past financial achievements behind. Industrially and commercially there has been progress amazing; and National net financial results prove not merely satisfactory, but incalculable. Dark spots there were as the year unrolled, and hard-times prophets were frequently on parade. Looking backward the scarecrows of 1900 were a tawdry lot, but in their day some of them had aspect quite serious enough to be disconcerting. Most effective was the crystallising of doubts as to National election results. They who are big in the business world, as well as the smaller fry of Wall Street, took account for a time of political "uncertainty," and the ghost of cheap and dishonest money intruded nervousness with its threats. The record seems curious now—but it was very real. Apprehension at the time could be ignored only by strong heads and stoutest confidence in the good sense and good faith of the people. The whole Summer and all the Fall up to the very day of election was a waiting time throughout the business world.

And thus, when finally the National verdict was recorded, the financial situation was not only of a sudden clarified, but forthwith developed such an energy as no precedent ever approached. A revelation—that is what Wall Street has ever since been celebrating.

Of the year's phenomenal record notably extraordinary are the figures quoted in international trade balances—disclosing the United States as the conspicuous creditor Nation of the world. Exports outrun imports hundreds on hundreds of millions of dollars. And the apparent showing is that something like $500,000,000 of American money is left on balance abroad. That the actual sum is tremendous shows significantly in many ways and in many quarters. International bankers lay stress upon it. New York no longer has to contrive ingeniously and continually to obtain loans abroad—New York has become the lender. Foreign money markets no longer levy taxes upon borrowers here; the concessions come this way. The foreign trader, the foreign banker, foreign municipalities, and, finally, foreign Governments, come across the ocean for financial accommodation. Not all this has developed graciously; the foreign critic has stubbornly hooted—while foreign necessities, steadily growing, are met by American prosperity, growing just as steadily.

International trade balance figures are suggestive rather than conclusive. It is impossible under prevailing conditions that they can be complete. Without available records to show interchange of actual funds or transfer of credits, any "balance" must be faulty; and not merely those vast items are lacking in making up announced balances, but there is no method whereby account can be taken of the international transfer of securities or the disbursement of interest or dividends. In his annual review of financial conditions, Secretary of the Treasury Gage suggests that he is making efforts to remedy this defect, and representatives of the Treasury Department have been in consultation with important bankers here; but the bankers expect no early successful solution.

One fact, according to the bankers, very clear is that Europe has stopped sending back American stocks, having practically no further deliverable supply. Large volumes of our securities are, of course, still held abroad, but speculative holdings have been liquidated; the foreign owner of American stocks now carries them for investment—is getting larger net return and ampler security than can be found elsewhere in the world. And what now is of most consequence in that quarter is as to when the foreigner will begin to rebuy—for our record since November's election is of the character, which, sooner or later, is bound to command the attention and arouse the enthusiasm of the European trader, whose appreciation of a profit is superior to every possible prejudice. So far, however, the rise in American stock market values has not had foreign effect. Professional speculators at London and at Berlin have been opposing the advance, and some of the most prominent of them have lost fortunes in fighting our betterment. They sold American stocks short by wholesale immediately following election day, they sold calls without limit, they hurrahed proclamations that they had the Yankees caught. They wish they hadn't. The shares which most they pounded have gone up 20, 30, and 40 points—many of them are more than doubled in value.

But the art of money making involves many a quick change of front—as history in every market of the world has testified; and small wonder need there be if of a sudden we should have the spectacle of clamorous favor abroad for everything American. It is no new speculative move to try to make back fortunes where they have been lost.

It is wholly human that Europe should hesitate in recognition of the new good times that are here. Most of the rest of the world has had a year of embarrassment. Germany, after a wild speculative boom, is paying savage penalties now, with panic threats almost continual; and England's South African experience has not been much a promoter of optimism. In politics, in finance, in general trade, and even in their harvests, the nations of Europe have fared in dismal contrast with the prosperity making here.

Money market conditions have been agreeably disappointing. Rarely has a year hitherto closed without stringency severe enough to upset stock market equanimity; but here again is precedent set aside—December, 1900, being actually the chief buoyant month of the year. Bank rates abroad had to advance, but at no time has there been even a flurry in Wall Street. And this in face of the fact that never before have our financial institutions been called upon to provide so vast a sum for dividend and interest disbursements. The National bank policy of new circulation figures to some extent—though not at New York directly on a large scale—this new factor providing accommodation for interior demands hitherto making end-of-the-year drafts here.

Though apparently not much heeded, the gold product of the country has expanded prodigiously, with immediate effect upon money market conditions. The suspension of South African gold mining is offset more than appreciated by the rushing yield of Colorado, California, and Alaska. In gold, as in practically all else, this glowing side is this way.

What has recently taken place in Wall Street (measured by the upward rush of quotations) takes proportions beyond the comprehension of any man's mind. Thousands of millions of dollars have been thereby added to the quoted wealth of the country.

In many conservative circles there is disposition to regard this development as not wholly good. Unwholesome possibilities are discovered by the prudent who regard booms as danger signals. Runaway markets are unsatisfactory markets, urge cautious veterans. And such critics are insisting that we have already overdiscounted all the excellent conditions ahead of us.

It is not, however, the ultra-speculative man of Wall Street who takes issue with adverse views like these. The foremost bankers of the country are believers in the betterment that has come into our security markets. They see nothing that is artificial, unnatural, deceptive, likely to bring damaging results. What they urge is that the declaration of the people of the United States at the polls in November was the establishment of an actual new business era. Their insistence is that, instead of overdiscounting the good things of the present and future, we were up to November discounting only what was evil and threatening; that we had capitalized our confidence at the very lowest ebb; that we were refusing to take account of anything but the bad, and thus, they aver, what has since appeared to be an extraordinary outburst of buoyancy (with some apparent aspects of recklessness) can be adjudged but normal reaction from a too long unwarranted depression in public confidence.

At the beginning of 1900 uneasiness was widespread; at the beginning of 1901 prosperity dominates. Then a variety of serious problems were demanding solution, political uncertainty was already intruding, commercial difficulties were troubling New England and the West; and—what was most of all disturbing—a vast mass of new industrial securities was without public investment support or favor, hundreds of millions of capital being tied up thus not merely in idleness but endangered. Now not the least occasion in the world is there for political anxiety, weak spots in the financial and commercial world are no longer gaping, vast loans upon trust stocks have been financiered satisfactorily and profitably, and that enormous volume of industrial securities unmarketable a year ago is assimilated, producing profit for the public.

Meantime, of every man's knowledge is the fact of a new tendency—actual development—in corporation management. Some disclosures along this line have had phenomenal market sequels; others that impend are not unlikely to be equally dazzling. Fights between great corporations are out of fashion, railway wars are not soon again to be important. Bitterness of competition, the cutting of rates, demoralizing tactics generally, disappear—for the reason that finally the owners of the railroads of the country become the managers of their own properties. Where rivalry has ruled, co-operation is established. As Wall Street begins to comprehend how far-reaching is this new policy, better market values are recorded—naturally enough.

One factor influential in the market's current buoyant development is notably unique: when the turn came, when depression turned to confidence, the new condition found the public not merely ready to buy, disposed to buy, but able to buy. Nobody was overloaded, Wall Street commission houses were bare of stocks, margin accounts were relatively little, and they were sound—the public was rich in ready money. Securities held were in larger volume than ever before in the history of the country owned outright. Thus when the "outsider" began to buy confidently and largely, he was not confronted with vast lines of stocks seeking a market. The very fact that an enforced waiting time had been imposed, that more of apprehension than of anticipation had figured in making the records and contracts of the earlier part of the year, was responsible for this healthful feature of the situation. And though the public bought in confidence it bought prudently; overloading performances have not been evident, it has not been the fashion to pyramid speculatively; in truth, practically every commission broker on the Stock Exchange testifies that clients, even those most enthusiastic, have operated in moderation. But the same authorities agree that buyers have never taken position more courageously; for though professional manipulation has over and over again made raiding tests, the new public in Wall Street refuses to be scared, cannot be sent sprawling into nervous liquidation.

Why was the public confident? Because the public was awake, the public could see the universal tumbling over of the scarecrows, found certification in every business quarter that prosperity could not be crippled, belittled, restrained.

And what the public could see further was that the security market had finally the right character of leadership—not the manipulating speculator, but great international bankers; not the scalping trader, but comprehensive financiers. Therein was the quality of leadership bound to win, safe to follow.

For 1901 Wall Street's outlook could scarcely be brightened. Substantial market improvement is not only probable, but similarly sure seems the prospect that such improvement can be permanent. No boom is wanted. It is not the part of calmness and sense to satirize conservatism. They who go fastest do not always go furthest. It doesn't hurt to be sure.

H. ALLAWAY.

Secretary Gage Sees Promise of Continued Prosperity

He Speculates as to the Whereabouts of the "Balance of Trade" That Stands to Our Credit.

Dictated to The New York Times

By LYMAN J. GAGE,

Secretary of the Treasury of the United States.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—"With the close of the Nineteenth Century and the beginning of the Twentieth," said Secretary of the Treasury Gage, "we have abundant cause to be gratified with our progress as a nation and with the share of prosperity that we are enjoying—a prosperity, it is also gratifying to know, that has been accorded in a measure to other nations."

"And what of the future, Mr. Secretary?"

"Do not ask me to prophesy. I am not a prophet. I am so little concerned about the future that I never read the weather reports. I prefer to keep an umbrella and overshoes, and to take the weather as it comes, with such precautions to guard against inclemency as may be suggested to everybody by common prudence.

"The year has been a good one with the Treasury, which has met all current obligations out of the receipts, saved nearly $11,000,000 by refunding old bonds at a lower rate of interest, and has accumulated an excess of receipts amounting to about $20,000,000 for the first half of the fiscal year. To those disposed to boast of our credit and our resources this condition provides justification. It also provides, perhaps, the temptation to excessive public expenditure."

"Was not the foreign trade of the year a remarkable indication of our prosperity?" was asked.

"It is a wonderful showing. Last year, when the total trade reached slightly beyond $2,000,000,000, the country saw a gratifying assurance of material and industrial development. That record has been surpassed by more than $250,000,000, and the exports of the United States, notably of agricultural and manufactured products, have found their way to the consumers of the world to the extent of $640,000,000 in excess of our purchases abroad."

"Is it possible to account for this so-called 'balance of trade' in our favor—to show whether it has been realized by us?"

"That is an interesting question, and one hard to answer. Allusion was made in my annual report to efforts that had been made to ascertain in what method the vast trade balance in favor of the United States is settled. The imports of gold do not furnish an explanation, for of gold and silver we seem to have exported a few more millions of dollars than we imported, the imports being roundly about $111,500,000 and the exports about $118,500,000.

"Efforts have been made by inquiry to ascertain the amount of securities returned to the United States in settlement of indebtedness to us, with the discovery of some hesitation, for business reasons, of those handling the securities. A plan has been suggested by which, with the observance of proper confidence toward those extending the desired information, it may be possible to learn approximately the extent to which American securities are returned to this country.

"A calculation, largely conjectural, it may be admitted, has been made to account for the $640,000,000 'balance of trade' in our favor. This calculation puts the amount of securities returned during the year at $200,000,000; for freights it is estimated that another $100,000,000 may be accounted for; American tourists may have taken abroad to pay the expenses of travel another $100,000,000; possibly $100,000,000 have been used to pay the interest on American securities abroad and to meet investments of foreign capital in the United States; and about $100,000,000 can be accounted for in loans to Great Britain, Germany and other foreign countries during the year. The suggestion has been made that Americans have carried large credits abroad, for the purpose of meeting obligations for goods ordered. This amount has been put at something like $100,000,000, but the total of these suggested figures exceeds the 'balance of trade' as ascertained by the statistical reports."

A TIME FOR CONSERVATISM.

"From such indications as are to be found in the conditions of business, do you look for a continuance of present prosperity?"

"The present indications are favorable for continued prosperity. Human nature is not satisfied with repeating its successes. It must improve upon them. There is need of conservatism now, when we are prosperous. When we get beyond the line that divides conservatism and recklessness, and expand prices on mere interchangea without corresponding actual transactions, there will be occasion for concern. We cannot see the coming of depression. There is no barometer to indicate its approach.

"There is a pace beyond which it is inexpedient and unsafe to press business, or a horse. I owned a horse once, which I bought when it was twelve years old, and which would travel at the rate of twelve miles an hour without distress or failure. Push it to exceed that rate for a single mile and its ability to make the twelve miles an hour would be destroyed. It would go to pieces. We must find out the gait at which we can safely travel as a nation, and stick to it."

AS TO REDUCTION OF REVENUE.

"Do you look for a considerable reduction of the revenue by Congress at the present session?"

"I am inclined to believe, from what I hear of the disposition of the Congress, that the internal revenue taxes will be reduced to the extent recommended by the President. It is true that an inclination to go further was manifested at one time, but just now it appears that the conviction is strong that prudence will restrain the Congress from ordering a reduction so great as to embarrass the Administration while it is still meeting the expenses of government in the Philippines and the West Indies."

"The Congress is asked to meet many expenditures to satisfy the desires for public improvements and for claims preferred by hundreds of applicants for relief. Do you look for drafts on the Treasury to meet these expectations?"

"I am unable to say. Without being advised, I am inclined to believe that considerations of economy and prudence will restrain the Congress in its appropriations. I believe it has always been the rule that greater appropriations were asked for than were expected or obtained. It is safe to rely upon the patriotism of Congress to grant as well as to regulate expenditures.

"No; I do not look for legislation at this session to perfect the good work achieved by the last session of Congress in the passage of the currency bill of March 14. The subject is one to which attention should be given; but it is evident that the Congress is too busy with work that is imperative to complete the currency legislation so well begun."

The National Balance Sheet.

Written for The New York Times

By Maurice L. Muhleman,

Deputy Assistant United States Treasurer.

At the close of the year it is well to look at our balance sheets and see what has been done during the twelve-month. The Times to-day will be full of statistics from the balance sheet of the Nation; but there are certain points to be deduced from this array of figures which may escape the notice, for the moment, of those who comment upon them.

We ask the world to look upon our marvelous showing in the growth of our foreign trade, now exceeding $2,200,000,000 a year, but we may direct attention with even greater self-satisfaction to our domestic trade, involving the feeding, housing, clothing, and otherwise providing for, a Nation of which the census tells us there are 77,000,000, consuming more per capita than any other people on the face of the earth. This trade, it is estimated, amounts to eighteen or nineteen times the amount of our foreign, aggregating thus probably more than $36,000,000,000.

After feeding ourselves we contribute largely to the food of other people; for we produce half the cereals of the world, the total being in bushels 3,600,000,000; we provide them with more than 2,000,000,000 pounds of meat products; we not only provide more than three-fourths of the raw cotton used in the world, but are now seeding millions of yards of cotton goods abroad as well.

With our mineral products, aggregating in value over $800,000,000, we last year led the world in gold, (the Transvaal supply being cut off,) in silver, in iron and steel, in coal, in copper.

Notwithstanding our tremendous slaughter of food animals, we have still some 39,000,000 swine, 28,000,000 steers, 40,000,000 sheep; our horses number 14,000,000 and our cows 16,000,000.

It is estimated that our wealth now amounts to $90,000,000,000, an increase in ten years of $25,000,000,000, and an average per capita of $1,170; it is perhaps unnecessary to say that no other people show so large a per capita of wealth.

What have we done to improve the general conditions of the world's inhabitants with these forces? Have they been directed to accomplish the best results?

We have not fallen behind the rest of the world in the industrial arts; our Patent Office record shows for the year some 26,000 new inventions and improvements, which we are utilizing to the practical advantage in our industries. As illustrating the bearing of this we have converted the product of our iron mines into finished material at so great a reduction in cost that, for example, steel rails which in 1870 sold at over $100 per ton, and in 1880 at $67.50, were recently sold at less than $18 per ton. This has proved an important factor to our transportation facilities, which cover nearly 170,000 miles of railway, operated with 40,000 locomotives and 1,300,000 cars, carrying 1,000,000,000 tons of freight and employing 1,000,000 men. We have reduced the cost of carrying wheat to the seaboard from 33 cents per bushel in 1870 to less than 11 cents, and of flour from about $1 to 37 cents. The rest of the world has thus gained cheaper food for millions of its people.

But our industrial evolution has not alone reduced the cost of transport; prices of necessaries have been reduced otherwise as well. Thus, pork, which in the seventies cost 10 cents the pound, fell to less than 6; flour from $6 the barrel to about $4; cotton from 15 cents the pound to 5½, and that great aid to enlightenment, petroleum, from 17 cents the gallon to less than 6.

While this showing is one which is incomparable, it behooves us to ask what we are doing in lines other than the material. We have, it is true, 22,000 newspapers and periodicals; we spend nearly $120,000,000 for our postal business and nearly $200,000,000 for education; but it seems, nevertheless, that we are taxing ourselves something like $200,000,000 on account of crime and misdemeanor, and nearly the same amount goes annually for drink, while fully as much has been spent in a year in pursuing the art of war. Our Church work is increasing, and the money spent in that field is growing annually; but we have more homicides, which exceed 10,000 annually, and more suicides, though the rate per capita is probably about stationary.

Uncle Sam still receives annually several hundred thousand foreigners, with more or less open arms, and while he does not offer them all farms, he still almost gives away 6,000,000 acres of his public land a year. But the foreigners coming are poorer than formerly; most of them do not care for the "farm," and, locating in cities, they are making the good old Uncle's problem of amalgamating them all into a nation much more difficult.

Philanthropic work, both public and private, has increased materially, but there seems an enormous amount of it still to be done; not merely by way of help to unfortunates, but in the lines of education, intellectual and moral.

The picture has its light and its dark side; the latter perhaps more sombre because of the brilliancy of the former. Rapid industrial evolution such as we have seen is necessarily accompanied by trying conditions for a large number of individuals. Never before has the world seen the spectacle which the work of this Nation presents; particularly noteworthy is the revival since the "hard times" years following 1893. The enormous productive capacity has not been strained in making the showing; the results are real, tangible. What shall we do with it all? Manifestly we are not doing the best we can with the fruits of our tremendous activity; but that is largely due to the fact that we are at the work of securing it; the transition is sure to come in time; the princely donations to philanthropic objects from private purses, reaching $50,000,000 to $70,000,000 a year, are but the indicators—the forerunners of another evolution; one which will deal with the questions which when correctly answered and the problems which when properly solved, will place this Nation beyond all question at the head, not only in material lines, but in intellectual, moral, political, as well.

Let us not lose faith in our ideals; let us believe that American hearts and American minds still hold to the patriotic and humanitarian precepts which inspired our greatest men; let us be patient while working out our destiny, and in due time the new era—the child of the twentieth century—will arrive "out of the hurly-burly."

Our Greatest Agricultural Need.

Specialists Wanted to Aid Scientifically in the Practical Development of Our Resources.

Dictated to The New York Times

By JAMES WILSON,

Secretary of Agriculture of the United States.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—The nineteenth century has been a great one for agriculture," said Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, "and the last twenty-five years have been the best of the hundred. Our statistics tell the story of development so far as the increase of our productive power is concerned, but it is not until you come to analyze the later developments and ascertain the tendencies that the real greatness, that carries the promise of the greater future, begins to assert itself.

"There is no use in worrying about our ability to go on increasing our productions of agricultural and other domestic supplies that can be sold at home and abroad. But the time is approaching, and we can see it coming, when the necessity for closer study of conditions, for greater specialization in agriculture, must be admitted and acted upon. It is not the mere matter of adding some thousands of acres to tilled acres that must be looked after. By and by the available area will be taken up, and the necessity will be forced upon the people of more scientific cultivation of the soil.

"Greater specialization," said the Secretary, "must be the tendency in agriculture as it promises to be in commercial business. It is unavoidable. Humboldt was a wise man in his day. Possibly he knew more about everything than any other man, and a great deal more about some things than any man of his time. But if Humboldt were alive to-day his knowledge of agriculture could not be comprehensive enough to grasp all the details known since his day. Right here in this department we look at agriculture from sixteen different sides. Every side is important. Yet the man who is proficient in one of the bureaus and its interests cannot extend his knowledge usefully and undertake to follow investigation in any other branch of scientific agriculture.

"The developments of scientific agriculture are slow, but they are sure and permanently advantageous. Take the matter of meat production. The meat animal has been doubled in weight by study of the habits of the animal and of its needs to make it answer better to our needs. We have managed to get sheep that are better both for mutton and for wool. Formerly we had wool sheep that were poor for food and food sheep that were worth little for shearing. We have bettered our horses, making over the English runner into a trotter, and improving the quality of European draught horses by scientific cultivation of the best qualities of the speed and draught stock. That has created a better demand for American horses abroad, and it will go on in spite of bicycles and locomobiles and electric motors very much as if those conveniences had never been thought of.

"We are devoting attention to the study of soils. It is a most fascinating and important branch of agricultural knowledge, demanding the trained skill of many physicists. We don't know enough about soil conditions and the science of improving and restoring them. The need of recruits in this field is great. We find it difficult to recruit our forces to carry on the work contemplated in the department."

"Is it not possible to obtained trained physicists from the agricultural colleges maintained in part by the United States all over the country?" was asked.

"What a natural question that is," answered Secretary Wilson. "The fact is," he went on, "the demand for men well equipped is so great and growing that the supply is always exhausted. Very recently there has come to us information that for some reason not yet fully understood great areas in the lower Salt Lake Valley that have been under cultivation with irrigation have not shown a tendency to fertility. The causes must be looked into. There may be conjecture about it, some impression that irrigation has developed some qualities prejudicial to fertility, and this can be ascertained only by special investigation. Similar indications are reported from the Yellowstone Valley, cultivated under similar conditions.

"We must meet our needs at home, and I am led to believe, from investigation, that we shall fully meet our own needs. A man whom I sent abroad to report on the conditions found in the agricultural departments of Europe tells me that we have little to learn from them. They are none of them so well equipped as we are to take up special studies. This only increases my belief that a broad education may be secured by an American in his own country, and, as for agriculture, there is too much to be learned in any one branch of it to make it possible for a student of it to acquire great special knowledge if he permits himself to indulge in the hopeless task of grasping the whole subject.

"We are studying carefully the question of meat production. That has become necessary in consequence of the failing of the range production. The day has passed when great herds and vast fortunes are to be made from the pastures of the arid region. We must get our meats from the rainy belt, and I have no doubt whatever that when the producing capacity of that belt is understood we shall find that it will produce more abundantly than ever before.

"Are our dairy interests flourishing? Yes. But they need cultivation. We have a position to regain in that business, and we shall reach it when our producers have come to understand the needs of foreign markets better and are prepared to meet them intelligently. The practice has become so common, among foreign producers of dairy products, of Government certification of quality that we shall have to adopt the same plan in order to inspire confidence. The requirement that butter shall be certified to be of high quality would prevent the sending abroad of butter of poor quality, to injure our reputation and prospects for increased trade. The sending of poor grades of cheese to England has deprived us of a market there, and some of our efforts to extend our reputation for dairy products have been counteracted by shipments of inferior goods represented to be of good quality. We can only overcome such unprincipled trading by adopting a policy of business honesty.

"The future is bright for agriculture. As I have shown, it is not to be an easy pathway, but one in which success is to be achieved by recognition of the necessity for specialization that must be deeper and more careful as time goes on. Such results as our success in growing tobacco with Sumatra qualities, or leaf that from North Carolina fields secured more points of excellence at Paris than the choice cigarette tobaccos of Egypt, suggest a few of the possibilities of faithful study of the science of cultivation. But there is to be no more phenomenal success with haphazard farming. That day is over with the coming of the new century."

By James H. Eckels,

President of the Commercial National Bank of Chicago and former Controller of the Currency.

The financial situation in the West at the close of the year is thoroughly satisfactory. Bank deposits are large, the demand for money active, and interest rates fairly good. The growth in the strength of country institutions has been phenomenal. The only difficulty which they now experience is to find local use for the money at their disposal.

I look for a continuance of prosperous conditions. Thus far the country has not overtraded, and speculation, while large, has been on conservative lines and in a class of investment railway stocks which do not jeopardize the buyers through violent fluctuations in market value.

The railway management of the country is to-day of so high a grade as to warrant the belief that wherever dividends are now paid they will be continued. The saving in operating expenses will make up for a loss occasionally sustained because of a crop failure.

This country's future promises more wealth and wider influence in the world's greatest financial undertakings than heretofore the most sanguine have ever dreamed of. The American people have abundant wealth, great opportunities and the knowledge of how to use the one and avail themselves of the benefit of the other.

JAMES H. ECKELS.

A Good Year for the Farmer.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—"This has been a good year for the farmer," said John Hyde, Statistician of the Department of Agriculture. "We have not yet made up our statistics in full, but we have given the estimates of the leading crops, and by and by we shall give the farm values, as ascertained by collecting prices all over the country and giving the average as of Dec. 1. But we know that for many of the crops advanced prices have been obtained, and, while the bureau does not feel justified in making computations upon the incomplete facts, such computations can be made in a way to show approximately, at least, whether the farmers of the United States are better off on Jan. 1, 1901, than they were on Jan. 1, 1900."

Following the suggestions of the Bureau of Statistics, it is found that the farmers are evidently richer at this time than they were a year ago by $247,000,000, in returns for the "principal" crops. This does not account fully for their incomes. Figures are procurable to show how they have fared for raising some agricultural crops, but to their gains from these are to be added their profits from meat production; from wool, from fruits, and from others for which there are yet no statistics that can be used here. Even in agricultural crops they have not always gained. The net gain of $247,000,000 accounted for in this article was derived from wheat, corn, hay and cotton. There were comparative losses in oats, barley, rye, buckwheat, and potatoes, but even with apparent losses on these items there are circumstances that are comforting. The gains and comparative losses are shown herewith:

Corn	629,210,110	757,836,985	128,626,875
Hay	411,926,187	439,472,645	27,540,458
Oats	$198,167,975	$178,007,117	*$20,160,858
Barley ...	29,594,254	26,516,625	*3,077,629
Rye.	12,214,118	11,038,125	*1,175,993
B'kwheat	6,163,675	5,740,179	*443,496

*Decrease.

The corn crop was a great one, one of the largest ever gathered in this country. It was larger than that of 1899, but not so large as the crops of 1896 or 1880. But while smaller in quantity than the crop of 1896, it was worth to the farmer more than $266,000,000 over that of the larger crop of the earlier year, prices having greatly improved. The prices that are given below, by the way, are approximate only, and have been ascertained by taking such averages as are procurable now, before the complete averages have been made up. The production, price, and farm value of the corn crop for six years are given for purposes of comparison:

1899	2,078,143,933	30.3	629,210,110

The wheat crop was smaller than that of the year preceding, but the enhanced price at which it was sold gives the farmers nearly $50,000,000 more than they received for the crop of 1899. As compared with five preceding years, wheat is shown in the table, for production, price and farm value of the crop:

1900	522,229,505	70.0	365,560,653

Only once before, in 1895, has there been an oat crop exceeding in bushels the crop of 1900. Only the corn crop was greater. But, according to the promise for Dec. 1, it looks as though the farmer would not do so well by his oats as last year, with a smaller crop and a higher market price for it. The comparative quantities and value of oats since 1895 are shown:

1895	824,443,537	10.9	$163,655,068

The barley crop was small in 1900, the yield being the least in one year since 1887, when it was 56,812,000 bushels. Barley quotations favor an average farm value of 45 cents, an advance upon last year's price. Comparisons for six years are given:

1896	69,685,223	32.3	22,491,241

The rye crop for 1900 was small, and the prices received appear to have averaged lower than in the preceding year, so that the farmers are not so well off in earnings from that crop as in 1899. The six years ending 1900 compare as follows as to crops and their values:

1896	24,389,047	40.9	9,960,789

The crop of buckwheat was smaller than it has been in any year since 1883, when it was far below the yield before and since. The buckwheat crop has decreased a good deal since 1866, when it was 22,700,000 bushels. The price was better then than it is now. Buckwheat statistics are slow and imperfect until late, and the Government statisticians admit the difficulty of finding a safe average price on the farm at this time. The price given is regarded as below, rather than above, the farm price:

1896	14,089,783	39.2	5,522,339
1897	14,997,451	42.1	6,319,188
1899	11,094,473	55.7	6,183,675

Potatoes were not a large crop, as compared with that of the preceding year, but it was above the average, and the farm price appears to have been slightly higher than last year. The crops, prices, and values for six years are given:

1896	252,234,540	28.6	72,182,350
1897	164,015,964	54.7	89,643,059

Hay was a short crop, but it was sold at a good price, the crop being the smallest since 1895, and the price the highest since 1887. The farmers received more for the shorter crop of 1900 than they did for the crop of 1899. The production and values of hay for six years are shown:

1898	66,376,920	6.00	398,060,647
1900	50,110,906	8.77	439,472,645

Cotton has been a source of wealth to the producer as well as the manufacturer for the last two years. The crop of 1898-9 brought to the producers about $27,000,000 more than the crop of the year before, although the later crop was the smaller. The crop for the year just ended, for which the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture has just issued a preliminary estimate, is not only larger than the crop preceding it, but is being sold at higher prices, so that the farmers may get something like $125,000,000 more for the cotton raised in 1900 than for that produced in 1899. The cotton figures for the last six years are most interesting:

1896	8,532,705	6.6	291,811,564
1897	10,897,857	6.6	319,491,412
1898	11,189,205	5.7	305,467,041

To the value to the farmer of these principal crops must be added a large number of others, including tobacco, rice, flax, wool, dairy products, and meats, for all of which the figures have yet to be procured by the Department of Agriculture for the calendar year, the statistics for the department being made up in that way, instead of by the fiscal year.

MIDDLE WEST PROSPERING.

The close of the year 1900 and the ushering in of the twentieth century finds the Middle Western States in a healthy and prosperous condition, probably to a greater extent than at any previous period in the country's history. The agriculturist has prospered with bounteous crops, which have found a ready market at good prices, and as the products of the soil must be the source of all material wealth, the merchant and manufacturer have prospered with the tiller of the soil and the miner, and so have transportation companies, both land and water, maintained good safe earnings through the handling of a rapidly moving commerce to meet the requirements of a prosperous and happy people.

There is nothing visible at this moment in the commercial or financial horizon that threatens to obscure the abundance of the West and the prosperity of its people for the year 1901. HOMER H. PETERS,

MONEY PLENTY IN THE WEST.

The banking business for 1900 has been generally satisfactory and fairly profitable. Western banks have had plenty of money. Many of those in small localities had more than they could find legitimate use for at home, and have had to go to the large financial centres for investment. Competition is keen, the margin of profit is small, but the volume of business is large.

The outlook for 1901 is good, and I anticipate a large business with satisfactory results for the year. JAMES B. FORGAN, President First National Bank.

Trade Conditions Throughout the World.

A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW FROM LONDON OF THE PAST YEAR WITH AN OUTLOOK FOR 1901 IN COMMERCE, INDUSTRY, AND FINANCE.

By Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES
By A. J. WILSON,
Our London Financial Correspondent.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—One aspect of Europe's industrial position deserves prominence, namely, the effect of the greatly increased state of expenditure upon the consuming power of the various peoples as distinct from their Governments. Putting out of sight altogether the abnormal outlays induced by actual war, there has been going on for many years past a race among the great powers of Europe as to which could spend the most on fighting services. The English Government now draws more than twice as much from the nation for the navy as it did ten years ago, and Germany, France, Russia, and Italy, not to speak of water-logged Spain, are all emulous of her example. That is but one branch of the increased outlay. Every department of the public services in all countries shows a steady expansion in sums annually required from the taxpayer for maintenance. The annual budget of France, for example, amounts now to almost twice the highest total reached before the war of 1870. One, therefore, cannot help feeling that not only France, but all of the old debt-incumbered nations of Europe are progressing toward a point when the demands of State will so cripple the spending capacity of the nation as to restrict domestic markets and to produce afflicting economic crises. It is possible that some among the old nations are at that point now.

COTTON INDUSTRY.

This apart, business throughout Europe is fairly good, and in the British Isles it was excellent in the early half of last year; and yet, when every branch of industry was fully employed, when wages were rising and prices were well maintained, either at the level of 1899 or at still higher points reached early in the past year, there were abundant indications that the crested wave was about to break, and already the reaction has everywhere made considerable progress.

Our cotton industry is now suffering from the effects of the recent excessive price for the raw material, from restriction of consumption and demand in India due to the famine, and from the confusion that has overtaken the Chinese markets, as well as from the beginnings of a decline in home demand till lately good.

As yet our spinners and weavers in Lancashire have borne the adverse circumstances with remarkable fortitude, but unless a change for the better takes place soon, I fear we must look for numerous failures in that part of the kingdom. Our woolen and worsted industries, on the other hand, have been more or less bad throughout the year, partly from the disorganization of the Eastern and African markets, also from the effect of what is called "the overproduction of 1899." I cannot see the immediate prospect of recovery in this branch of our industry, although wool is now quite 15 per cent. cheaper than it was six months ago, and 50 per cent. below the highest recent prices. Even jute has suffered, but the causes of its troubles are, as yet, quite a local matter of labor more than of markets.

TEXTILE PRODUCTIONS.

In all branches of textile production competition between nations is becoming keener every year. As far as I can learn in manufacturing circles, this competition has not as yet come from your side to any formidable extent in neutral markets, unless perhaps in China and Japan, but Holland, Belgium, Germany, France, and Spain are all increasingly effective competitors against England, and our Consular reports are full of admonitions to the British producer to be up and doing lest he find himself eclipsed and altogether supplanted. Even Russia is making considerable progress in textile industries, and may be regarded as a future competitor of no mean power, if not in Western Europe, at least in the markets of China.

Were this all Europe had to fear we might contemplate the future with a certain equanimity because it is impossible for all nations to attain a high measure of civilization if merely self-contained. The conquest of new industries brings into being new wants, and out of these arises fresh developments of business; industries shift, but the volume of commodities exchanged, on the whole, tends to expand. I fear, however, that all this straining after industrial expansion is destined to produce a formidable financial recoil in some nations not overburdened with available capital.

IRON, STEEL AND COAL.

In the iron and steel trades there can be no question that England has entered upon a trying time. Prices are still high for most descriptions of iron and steel, and the manufactures thereof may be compared with those of 1898, or even with those of the middle of 1899, but they have fallen materially from the highest points, and business for six months back has been increasingly unprofitable, owing mainly to the excessive price of coal. Dear coal, in fact, has been like a canker at the root of all our industries, and will affect the profits of the past year in every direction.

Notwithstanding the heavy outlay upon our navy our imports in iron and steel for the past year have been but little higher than for 1899, but these imports have one remarkable feature. You have in recent months sent us a heavier proportion of total than usual, and have for the first time become an important and, perhaps, an abiding factor in our iron trade. Probably the fall in prices, now well begun, may temporarily check your sales, but I think that the United States must remain at least a strong competitor against us with other countries in supplying their demands. Every year our position becomes weaker economically in this all-important department of industrial production. If you, with your richer coal measures and more scientific method of extraction, can supply fuel to your furnaces at a lower price than England, and, when I say England, I mean all Europe in this respect, since every iron-production country on this side of the Atlantic is more or less dependent upon English coal, the world's metal markets must ultimately fall into your hands.

But must not British coal fall again in prices much lower than have ruled during 1900? It must, and for a brief period when the industrial disorganization now threatening has made progress, we might see quotations go back to the figures of two years ago, but no such relapse can be regarded as more than transitory. The constant tendency must be toward dearness, and, because of this, my estimate for the future of European iron and steel industries is not sanguine.

THE WORLD OF FINANCE.

For the year now entered upon I feel sure that prospects are everywhere unsatisfactory for reasons which partly lie in finance. No greater contrast could be imagined than the relative positions of countries like England, France, and Germany as against the United States of ten years ago and now. Ten years ago, what American banker would have entertained the idea of subscribing to a part of the British Government loan or seen a chance of profit in the purchase of German Treasury paper! We all looked upon the United States as the world's debtor until a much later period, but now, while you revel in uncounted wealth, Europe begins to feel the pinch of poverty. Superficially, however, financial affairs wear a better aspect now, to even a greater degree than they did twelve months ago.

England has just reached the end of the year with a 5 per cent. bank rate; Germany with a 6 per cent. rate, and France is piling up gold in the vaults of her State bank under a 3 per cent. rate, as against 4½ per cent. at the beginning of last year. Under the surface, however, there is a strain, and no small strain. Both France and Germany have rushed ahead too fast with electricity. The result is that both at the present time are clogged with swarms of enterprises in a half-developed state, which their banking institutions are compelled to carry whether they like it or not. What the issue of this position will be I cannot as yet forecast, but at the very best it implies some years of recoil, and the pace will have to be slow to avoid a complete upset.

THE OUTLOOK IN ENGLAND.

In England other conditions have prevailed equally hurtful to our industrial recuperative power should any disastrous set-back occur, as seems all too possible. We see these conditions in the fate of the public emissions for 1900. These are variously estimated at from £166,000,000 to £180,000,000; and as the nominal amount, I think the latter figure is nearest the true one. A third of that great sum, however, might as well be written off as mere promoters' fluff, which the public has never risked a penny in. There remains upward of £50,000,000 solidly borrowed by the Government, £12,000,000 to £15,000,000 raised openly or secretly by municipalities and county authorities, some £12,000,000 absorbed by the railways; and between £20,000,000 and £30,000,000 representing the capital of manufacturing, engineering, coal, iron, steel, and other businesses joint stocked. The total is not formidable, although close to the maximum reached in 1898, but it has come upon a market impoverished, and our banks have had to assist to an unusual degree in carrying even the very best of the new securities, because the nation either could not or would not absorb the stock. Thus our position is on all fours with that of France and Germany, and I really do not know how the end of the year would have been got over, either here or in Berlin, but for the way you have come to our assistance.

EUROPE AND THE UNITED STATES.

Your wealth has been displayed not merely by investments in European Government securities, but by the capacity to absorb your own railway securities, quite as vigorously as that displayed in the end of 1898 and the beginning of 1899. By in this way canceling a part of Europe's debt, as you have, on account of its food supplies, raw cotton, &c., the strain that otherwise might have been unbearable has been lessened, and, although by no means out of danger, both these markets have passed the end of the year without a crisis. But for some time to come, if we in England are to escape disaster, we also must curtail our new immobilisations of capital and proceed with the utmost caution.

Such being our position in Europe, and especially in England and Germany, you must not look for strong stock markets. Ours at least will continue to dwindle with occasional rallies and occasional bad smashes, probably, throughout this year, and much the same must be said of our neighbors across the Channel, where the scope for gambling in all new enterprises is seriously curtailed.

Money promises to be dearer this year than the last, for at least the first six months, and in the proportion that it is dearer, it acts as a corroding acid in eating away the profits and in wearing down in many directions the capital locked up. In short, we are at the beginning of more difficult times, financially, throughout Europe.

LONDON FINANCE LAST WEEK.

The course of our money market, now that a 5 per cent. bank rate has been established, proves that the Directors were prudent in not moving up earlier. Both money and discount rates are just about where they were before an advance was announced. Remitted bills of all dates can be melted at 4 to 4¼, and the bankers can only get 3% for seven-day money. Accordingly, unless this is soon remedied, we shall have our money people suffering from a dearness of credit where the bank rate governs transactions, and our market, as a whole, be as helpless as ever to prevent exports of gold.

How the market and bank are to be brought together I cannot guess. In present circumstances there is no sure way open, except to issue another war loan, for perhaps £50,000,000, consolidate the present inconvenient floating debt, and provide further means for the war.

The floating debt, including Treasury bills and advances from the Bank, is now some £30,000,000. But for heavy Treasury payments the Bank would be bound to get control of the market this quarter through the revenue collection, which generally doubles the Government balances between the end of December and the beginning of April. This year we cannot expect much accumulation, and the Bank must borrow floating credit from time to time, if it means to make the rate effective. Even then I doubt whether 5 per cent. could do more than stop the gold exports.

A considerable gulf of insolvency has been opened by the recent financial smash on the Stock Exchange, and members are very nervous. All our domestic markets are therefore dead, and activity reigns in your shares alone, which more of our habitual speculation is now playing with. Old holders continue to sell, but the gamble unquestionably widens, and last week ended with one of the most uncontrollable outbursts in buying yet witnessed. The impulse, nevertheless, comes from your side, and I must repeat that you cannot count on us to keep anything we buy. Want of means will prevent that for many months to come. Poverty, however, frequently augments recklessness in speculation.

A. J. WILSON.

Our Growth as an Exporting Nation.

By Charles R. Flint.

The last year in the nineteenth century was the most interesting one in the export trade. For the first time it dawned upon the American people that, commercially speaking, the world was their inheritance, and that with proper patience, time, and labor there are few markets in which they cannot enter. Up to a recent period the attitude of most manufacturers toward the export trade was that it served as an outlet for surplus production at a low price, but they have now learned that a vast trade can be carried on in which the profits are large and the opportunities for expansion unlimited.

One of the most remarkable developments in the export trade has been the awakening of the United States to the fact that its coal supply is superior to that of any other country, and that in spite of the distance of the mines from the seaboard, conditions have arisen under which we can ship coal to all the world. The European mines have been developed to their full extent, and the increased consumption there is leaving little for export. The only country to which buyers can turn is the United States. While the door for the expansion of the coal business in foreign markets is wide open, the facilities for transportation are imperfect. In the United States the domestic demand has grown very rapidly and has consumed the surplus production of our mines, but many of the mine owners are now turning their attention to the foreign markets.

A great difficulty in the exportation of coal is the question of ocean transport. This involves a convenient loading of vessels at the export ports and suitable tonnage. Both of these aids to coal export are being created, and it is reasonable to believe that the United States, which today mines more coal than any other country, will, within a few years, export more coal than any other country.

To-day every manufacturer of steel on the Continent of Europe watches with the greatest care American quotations. England, which formerly feared Germany as a rival in the trade, now fears the United States. Germany was exultantly moving on, confident of its ability to undersell the rest of the world, until the United States took its proper position as an exporting Nation. As a result of this situation, today American steel manufacturers are full of orders and at prices which pay excellent profits, and are willing, out of these profits, to pay the high wages of the last year, while English and German manufacturers are cutting prices from day to day, reducing wages, and end the century with gloomy forebodings of the future of their industry. To-day Glasgow is buying in the United States a large proportion of the plates that go into the ships built at that point, and the Glasgow shipbuilders are recognizing that before long, instead of sending the plates abroad, we will send the ships.

Immense amounts of steel are exported in the form of plates, rails, girders, &c., and a very large quantity in the form of billets is sold to European manufacturers, yet trade in the higher forms of articles manufactured from steel is perhaps growing faster than any other. American machinery has been for long considered superior to that of other countries, both in effectiveness and finish. It is now sold at lower prices, so that the United States is offering a better article for less money than any other country.

A very important development in the export trade has been the exportation of articles manufactured from foreign raw materials. These raw materials are many of them brought many thousands of miles, elaborated in American factories, and the finished product sent back to the very market from which the raw material came.

In foreign trade one of the most important elements is that of ocean transportation; just as in the railways, the substitution of the fifty-ton car for the old twenty-ton car has increased the carrying capacity, and greatly reduced the cost of railway transportation, so the substitution of larger ships for the smaller ones has acted upon the sea. How far this increase may extend it is difficult to say, but already freight is carried with a profit at prices that would have seemed impossible ten years ago. When the American system of ocean transportation becomes as highly organized and as thoroughly perfected as the system of production and land transportation, the supremacy of the United States will be unquestioned by any other country. That this is likely to occur within the first decade of the century is not an unreasonable prophecy.

Danger Threatening in "Community of Interest" Plans.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES
By Archer Brown.
Of Rogers, Brown & Co., Pig Iron and Coke.

"There is difference of opinion as to the ultimate effect of arrangements through large banking houses in this city for the control of great railroad and coal interests to prevent competition and yield larger returns to stockholders. These moves appear to be more popular in Wall Street than in industrial circles.

We are in the midst of efforts on a colossal scale to regulate competition and control prices. A group of the greatest financiers in the Nation have recently been using their power in this direction. The fields chosen are chiefly the railroads and the coal trades. The great railroads keep on absorbing the small ones, and the managers of systems that have hitherto been rivals are learning how to work together as one family. Through the agency of powerful banking houses in New York, ownership is crossed and interlaced until it can almost be said that eight or ten men have the railroad situation of the country in their grasp.

Something of the same sort is going on in the anthracite coal trade, and there are strong intimations that even the vast and widely scattered bituminous coal fields will in due time be under "control." There seems to be no good reason why the movement should stop with railroads and coal. Why not iron, for instance? The industry has already been classified, and each of the leading departments is practically dominated by one huge combination. Nothing more is needed but to tie together these interests at the top to bring a half billion dollars of iron and steel annual products into one harmonious family. If it works in railroads, coal, and iron, then why not in all other great lines of industry?

The motives of the bankers and financiers who are bringing about these far-reaching changes are doubtless the best. Rates have been cut to a point which has seriously interfered with the earning power of railroad properties, and stockholders have suffered. Unrestricted competition in coal has brought prices so low as to be unprofitable to many. The owners of a railroad or industrial property are entitled to a good and reliable return on their investment. What more natural, therefore, than, when the power exists or can be created to remedy these evils, it should be applied? Certain it is that the press and public of this community, at least, look upon these moves with unmixed favor.

There are those, however, who look on with grave concern. Is the principle right? Will it work good or ill to the larger community, on whom, after all, rests the whole industrial structure? It would work well, without doubt, if each arrangement for control carried with it a reduction in the price of the commodity or in the rates of transportation. Such reductions might be made through more centralization and scientific management of great interests. But it doesn't work that way. Human nature is the same old thing, and it is not in human nature to forbear taking a better profit if one is in sight. And so we hear that carrying rates—already materially advanced and giving the roads phenomenal earnings—are to be put up further, and that higher prices of coal may be expected for an indefinite time.

But how far can we go in pyramiding the top without digging out the foundations from the bottom? The American public has a great capacity for absorption of the principal staples of manufacture, but it will balk when crowded too far. The iron trade is just emerging from a bitter experience in proof of this. Under an abnormal demand in 1899, prices were pushed higher than the public was willing to follow, and in a day, almost, just as manufacturers were making preparations for still greater outputs, the demand was cut off short, as if with a knife. New buying ceased in January, 1900, and was not resumed until October. It astonished even veteran manufacturers to find how completely the American buyer could quit when he wanted to. The buyer of barbed wire on the Western plains stopped buying. The farmers' wives heard that iron was up and stopped buying stoves. The farmers needed no more mowers and binders when it was found that they cost 10 to 20 per cent. more. Cities postponed indefinitely water works improvements because cast-iron water pipe and engines were too high. And so on through the list. In one suburban town near New York twenty-six expensive houses had been planned, and when it was found how high the estimates ran, every one of them was indefinitely postponed. In railroad equipment it was different, for the roads had allowed rolling stock to run down until they could not handle the traffic that was offered.

In the iron trade we learn to watch what might be called the ultimate consumer. The construction of manufacturing plant, the equipment of railroads, &c., are only means to an end. In times of activity such interests employ labor and consume vast quantities of material. For the moment they may seem to make markets. But they collapse very quickly when the final consumer—the man who drives the nails, uses the wire, machinery, stoves, engines, &c.—for any reason ceases to buy. Then the great mills run short time, the railroads complain of lack of traffic, rates are cut, and stockholders growl.

Low prices stimulate consumption. High prices check it. We may ignore this law for a time when things are booming, but sooner or later we get back to it. We are fast becoming masters of the world's trade solely because by cheap fuel, cheap transportation, modern plants, and good management we can produce cheaper than our competitors. There has been unrestricted competition in the making, carrying, and selling of our products. This has brought prices very low at times, and manufacturers and railroads have complained of thin profits. But in the main, they have done well. And the great lesson we have learned is that the lower we can reduce our costs the further we can crowd our products to the markets of the world. America will in ten years produce half of the iron and steel of the world, if she can make it cheaply. But if the two essentials, transportation and fuel, are so controlled "that $2 or 15 per cent. is added to cost, the volume of output will be curtailed, as sure as fate.

The owners of great properties which lie near the foundations of our industries should look far ahead, and not at the immediate future. Combinations and "fix-ups" that protect stockholders while lowering prices will broaden demand and pay the longest, if not the largest, dividends. Those that commence by marking up rates and prices will simply defeat their own end, no matter how ably they may be engineered.

Railroad Development.

Views of President J. J. Hill of the Great Northern Railroad as to Future Needs and Policies in Railway Management.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 2.—President J. J. Hill of the Great Northern, acknowledged to be one of the ablest of our railroad managers, has given this expression of his views regarding the railroad situation of the country, present and future:

"The year just closed has been noticeable for advanced ideas of financiers—a broadening of views and a deeper insight into the future of all enterprises with which they are connected. They are beginning to realize that the great industries of the country have interests in common, and that they must work in harmony to achieve the end for which they came into existence.

"The year 1901 marks a turning point in our commercial affairs. With economical administration the manufacturing industries, the transportation lines on the continent, and those on both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans should grow into magnificent investments.

"The 'community of interest' idea is growing in favor and into practice. Small lines of railroad, with few exceptions, cannot grow and develop, so it is much better for them to join interests with strong lines. The time is coming when the community of interest will be so perfected that small lines of road will be so cut off from connecting traffic as to make business unprofitable. It is not necessary that the roads should combine or consolidate, though in many instances a more economical administration could undoubtedly be obtained by such a course.

"It is not likely that the so-called transcontinental lines, with rumors of which the papers have been filled lately, will ever materialize. There is no necessity for them. In fact, it would be detrimental if such gigantic undertakings could be effected. The varying conditions of the country through which the roads operate would mitigate against their practicability.

"The building of trunk lines of railroad has almost ceased, and such roads in the future will be made up by a merging of the small roads already in existence. The present facilities are adequate for handling a greater amount of business than will come to them, with the possible exception of a few, within the present generation. Until a railroad has reached the limit of its capacity to transport the traffic that comes to it, it has not served its purpose or reached the height of its earning power.

"Of course it will be necessary for all roads to make extensions, owing to varying conditions—the demands which are brought about by the growth of new communities or the development of new industries that offer a profitable traffic as a compensation. This is one of the business propositions connected with railroad operation. There are enough cross-country roads now to serve for a long time, and it is doubtful if investors will not profit by the past and ask assurances of a profitable return upon their capital before undertaking to finance any new schemes.

"Concentration of capital and management is becoming imperative. The consolidation of railroads by one method or another is the policy of the times in railroads as well as industries. The largest and longest haul of freight is the most profitable because the proportionate expense is minimized. Everything must necessarily be of large proportions—the ships that carry the freight to other lands, the cars, the locomotives, the roadbed, track, and bridges must be of the most enduring kind to meet the requirements of the traffic. Such changes mean economy in operation, and this is the fundamental principle of the transportation problem.

"There are large systems of railroad in the Central and Southern States whose territory crosses or touches nearly all of the so-called transcontinental lines, and the traffic of these lines could not be adjusted for an equitable exchange of business. There are, however, so many connections now between the East and the West roads that they practically amount to ocean to ocean systems.

"Western railroads have had a year of unprecedented prosperity. Their affairs are better administered, they are getting larger returns than ever, and the prospect is for a continuance of this prosperity. The West is receiving a large emigration and it will be much larger from year to year. New settlers develop the country and create business for the railroads. There is room for hundreds of thousands more, and an increasing traffic for all the roads.

"These Western roads are still, however, in their infancy so far as tonnage is concerned. The development of commercial relations with Oriental lands will give an impetus to Western railroad traffic such as the roads of this or any other country have never experienced. Whether this commerce will develop during the coming year to this extent, or whether it will require years of time, is somewhat problematical.

"Terminal facilities will be a factor in controlling the future of railroad construction. The need for better facilities for handling freight at terminal points is more apparent every year."

Mr. Hill's attention is especially directed at the present time to building up and developing the country along the Great Northern, and a letter just issued by his authority thus discourses on his methods:

"As a business proposition it is best in line with J. J. Hill's skirmish forecasting. His road differs materially from others. It is operated and controlled largely by one man, and is conducted on his model conduct a private business. He knows that when the country along his road is settled up he will have valuable business. If an improvement must be added to the permanent of the million of acres of land in the Great Northern it might be a good many years before the traffic of the road was equal to its facilities.

"The only way to make any business pay is to work it to its full capacity, and nowhere is this more apparent than in railroading. If twenty trains can find work where now only one is operated, the proportionate increase in revenue will be more than twenty times as great, and the production of revenue is the fundamental and final object in operating a railroad. All the traffic it can handle is none too much.

"That is evidently Mr. Hill's object in settling up the vacant lands. He is long-headed enough to see that by sacrificing a few dollars in railway fares now he will reap thousands in the near future through the industry of these same homeseekers and the development of the country.

"Ordinary methods would be too slow. There are long stretches on the Great Northern, as there are on all of the transcontinental roads, where there is no business whatever for the road. There are sections that, if they could be separated from the system, would show great loss. Many miles of unprofitable trackage is often represented in a district which, as a whole, returns a profit, and there is no way to make every mile profitable except by increasing the traffic. The traffic can only be increased by settlement and cultivation.

"The growth of the great West may go on for a century. Its vacant lands may all be taken up in twenty years, or they may be absorbed in five years, depending upon the energy displayed in settlement; but if the land is brought under cultivation in five years, instead of twenty years, it is quite apparent that the railroads will have the advantage of fifteen years of increased traffic, every year increasing over the other, and, with the diversity of interests represented, decreasing the liability to crop failures.

"This is what the Great Northern proposes to do, and this is what other roads will do if the management can ever see beyond the immediate returns of revenue and adopt a more liberal policy."

General Trade Outlook.

Views of President King of the Merchants' Association of New York.

Touching the general outlook in trade for the coming year, Mr. William F. King, President of the Merchants' Association of New York, has this to say:

"This country closes the nineteenth century in a blaze of commercial prosperity. The outlook for the immediate future is very bright. Unless we as a Nation make serious mistakes that prosperity ought to continue for a long period of time.

"In all its commercial history the United States was never in better condition than it is to-day. Factories have been running on full time and surplus manufactured products, which heretofore have caused a glut in the market, are now being absorbed by the markets of the world. Instead of closing each fiscal year as a debtor Nation with a large balance of trade against us, we are now selling more than we buy, with the result that we have more than offset the money sent abroad for interest payments and for tourists' expenses, so that there is a heavy balance of trade in our favor, making for us a large credit in Europe. In fact, some things have already been accomplished which had they been predicted a few years ago would have been looked upon as far beyond the bounds of possibilities. For instance, we are shipping steel rails to Europe, into the very home of ore-producing and ore-smelting countries; we are delivering the manufactured steel product in plates for ship building direct to England; we are furnishing Russia and other nations with locomotives and general railway equipments; we are building bridges of our own manufactured material in British colonies; we are sending cotton goods into markets of the world which, until recently, were considered strictly European areas of distribution, and, in fact, because of improved methods, we are competing successfully with the large plants and cheap labor of England, Germany, France, Belgium, Spain, and other large manufacturing nations.

"If we awake fully to the situation which has developed throughout the world and show ourselves able to hold the commercial vantage points which we have seized there is no telling how extensive our export trade may become. We are surely and rapidly turning the tables. Europe has awakened to this fact. Even now, when this country is merely on the threshold of the era of expansion of its export trade, men of affairs in commercial matters in Europe are studying the conditions in this country more closely than ever before. If, as I have said, we are able to hold the advantage already gained in this matter and from that position move forward as we ought, it will not be long before many extensive manufacturing plants in Europe will be compelled to move to this country in order to be nearer the base of supply of the raw material. Otherwise the capital so invested will be unable to compete successfully with capital more advantageously located.

"Agricultural and mineral resources we have in abundance. In their development we have but scraped the surface, as it were, and as this development grows, economic laws will compel the manufacturing of this raw material into the finished product to be done here instead of abroad, and will enable this country to seek and successfully compete in the markets of the world. The inevitable result of this expansion of trade will be the development of New York as the financial centre of the world, being situated, as it is, at the gateway of this great and as yet only partly developed continent.

"Our domestic commerce is in splendid condition. The purchasing power of the people has been better for the last few years than for a long period of time. This enlarged buying power has steadily increased the absorption of products for domestic consumption. From 1892, which was the banner year in crops, up to 1896 came the years of bad crops and commercial depression, which curtailed the buying power and which overstocked the domestic markets because of the piling up of factory products for which there was little sale either here or elsewhere in the world. In 1896 crops improved again and prices of cereals commenced to advance. From that time to the present, our crops in general have been bountiful. Farmers have realized more for their labor. They have to a large extent paid off their mortgages and other obligations; local storekeepers in turn have liquidated their obligations to the larger jobbing centres, and again, in turn, obligations have been discharged at such centres and at factories. Combination of good crops and the maintenance of good prices for them have created this condition and have caused a general restocking of farm materials, household furniture, and luxuries as well as necessities.

"If our manufacturers guard against the danger of overproduction, so as to prevent that increasing production from exceeding the increasing demand, the prices of those products for domestic consumption will remain normal. If, however, by working overtime, or in other words, by rushing the capacity of their factories to the fullest extent, they pile up a surplus of manufactured products until the market is glutted, prices will surely fall, and there will be stagnation in manufacturing districts. As I have said before, the business wheel for this is to be found in an increased export trade, but the increase in production must bear a proper proportion to the increase in that export trade."

Gold Movement in 1900.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES
By George E. Roberts,
Director of the United States Mint.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—For the first time in ten years the output of gold in the world for a calendar year falls below that of the previous year. From 1890, when the world's product was $118,000,000, to 1899, when it had risen to $306,000,000, the yield increased year after year by the steady, uninterrupted development of great ore deposits in the United States, Australia, and South Africa. The product of the United States in 1890 was $33,000,000, of Australia $30,000,000, and of Africa $9,000,000. In 1899 the product of the United States was $71,000,000, of Australasia $79,000,000, and of Africa $73,000,000.

The falling off in 1900 was directly due to the war in the Transvaal, which practically closed the great mines of that country and cut off a stream of gold, which at the outbreak of hostilities was flowing out to the markets of the world at the rate of $8,000,000 per month. The gold output for 1900 is about $250,000,000. Australia has not increased its product over 1899, the United States and Canada have gained about $12,000,000, and other fields aside from the Transvaal have probably made no great changes.

The sudden cutting off of the Transvaal shipments might be expected to have some noticeable effects in the central markets where trade balances are settled and great enterprises calling for capital find support. The business calculations and arrangements of the time were based upon the supplies of money in sight, and prices, credits, and bank reserves adjusted to conditions which were either directly or indirectly affected by the accustomed replenishment of monetary stocks from these mines.

For example, the United States in the Fall of 1899 unquestionably had a heavy trade balance due from Europe, and in the natural order of things might expect a considerable movement of gold to this side. But the outbreak of the Transvaal war cut off a supply which Europe had become accustomed to receive and upon which it depended to meet its remittances. Instead of receiving gold from South Africa, London was forced to make heavy shipments of coin to that destination to make the disbursements of the British armies. So sharp was the stringency thus occasioned in London and on the Continent that money rates were forced to figures that attracted gold from New York at the very time when New York had adjusted its affairs to receive gold from Europe. The December crisis of 1899 was the result.

Throughout the past year the United States has been in position by reason of its credit balances to draw heavily on the gold stocks of Europe and money markets abroad have been on their guard constantly against such a movement. The foreign banks have kept up their discount rates, and have been aided in their efforts to hold their gold by the amendments to our National banking law, which have caused a net increase of over $90,000,000 in our paper currency during the year. The United States has increased its paper money over $90,000,000 and made a net gain of over $90,000,000, and about the same amount in gold, during the year 1900. Besides its own gold production it has gained over $20,000,000 from Canadian territory, including the Klondike, and received over $22,000,000 in Australian sovereigns at the San Francisco Mint for recoinage, but there was a considerable excess of exports over imports at the Port of New York.

The Bank of France has increased its gold reserve during the year by about $33,000,000, that country and the United States having secured the bulk of the year's production.

All depends, for this year, on the Transvaal situation. There has been no resumption of operations there yet, and will not be while the war continues, but with the restoration of peace will come a speedy renewal of exports. The Transvaal output will probably not reach its old record short of six months after the field is reopened, but from that time it will go steadily to unprecedented figures. The United States and Northwest Canada have produced over $100,000,000 in 1900, and will go to higher figures each year for an indefinite time. Alaska and the Upper Yukon district have reached a production of probably $28,000,000 or $30,000,000 in 1900, as against about $2,500,000 four years ago, and gold is found in so many widely separated districts as to justify the conclusion that the region is destined to be a large producer for many years to come.

A large part of the increased output of gold in the last ten years has been absorbed in rehabilitating the monetary systems of certain countries that had been using inconvertible paper. The increase of the next ten years must make a striking showing in the bank reserves of the important commercial nations, and there operate as a direct stimulus to commercial enterprise. When $300,000,000 per year is added to these resources and the basis of credit is broadened at that rate, an era of expansion and speculation of extraordinary possibilities will be opened. The present period of expansion has now run about three years in the United States, and in the natural order, as experienced in the past, a reaction might be expected, but the tendency in that direction is likely to be overcome and postponed several years by the loosening and stimulating influence of the new gold supplies. Of course, no possible rate of increase can keep up with the anticipations and debt creation of a boom period, and it is therefore only a question of time when speculation will outrun legitimate expansion and end in collapse. Position of Iron and Steel, and the Outlook in 1901.

By James C. Bayles, M. E., Phm. D.

The course of the iron and steel markets during 1900 would be scarcely intelligible if the events which made 1899 the most memorable year in their history were not recalled. The great and general revival after long-continued and, at times, extreme depression which took place during the last half of that year, occurring simultaneously on both sides of the Atlantic, confused statistics and silenced prophecy. It was so unexpected and so difficult of comprehension by a generation of iron masters who had never known a buoyant market, for the reason that there had been none within their experience, that they did not recognize it. As a consequence, they willingly loaded themselves with orders early in the second half of 1899, at relatively low prices, thus booking the greater part of their production in the first six months of 1900, and in many instances neglecting to cover themselves by equivalent orders for raw materials until an important advance in the prices of ore and coke was established. A comparison of pig iron prices, seaboard delivery, at the beginning and end of 1899, showed that, with the exception of low phosphorus pig, the average advance had been nearly 110 per cent. The staple forms of manufactured iron—plates, refined bars, and angles had not quite doubled in price. This condition was unprecedented.

Everything at the beginning of 1900 warranted the prognosis of a year as memorable as 1899. So it was, but in a very different way from that which was prophesied and expected. Its astounding shrinkage of consumption, its rapid and almost uniform decline in prices, and its unheralded improvement in the closing weeks of December, are events calculated to make the conscientious statistician extremely prudent in venturing any forecast of the future. The great advance of 1899 was unexpected by those in the business, and few manufacturers were in a position to profit by it, having loaded up with orders at very little above the 1899 average. Equally unexpected was the sharp curtailment of consumption through the first nine months of 1900, and the stolid indifference of buyers to the clearest demonstrations that they needed large supplies and could make money by purchasing. They would not buy to meet immediate requirements, and could not be impressed by arguments showing that sharp advances were imminent and inevitable. The course of iron and steel prices is influenced very much more by sentiment than by business considerations. The moods of Wall Street, and the judgment of bankers as to what is or is not at the moment a "banking proposition," are necessarily reflected in the stimulation or retardation of enterprises and undertakings which are the largest consumers of iron and steel. For these reasons a forecast of the future is an equation of unknown quantities.

THE BLAST FURNACE SITUATION.

The statistical position of pig iron at the beginning of 1901 is very satisfactory. Production is increasing and stocks are shrinking. On the 1st of December 211 furnaces were in blast, with a weekly capacity of 228,846 gross tons. As this number includes few, if any, of the obsolete "blast pots" which were galvanized into temporary vitality by the boom, the changes during December have not been important. Stocks in first hands on Dec. 1, including those held by steel companies operating their own furnaces, were 556,636 tons, showing a shrinkage of nearly 100,000 tons during the preceding thirty days. The total pig iron production of the year 1900 cannot be accurately known until about the middle of January, but may be very closely estimated at 14,142,000 gross tons. The stock at the end of the year will be found to have been about 450,000 gross tons. This is not more than is needed to steady the market under existing conditions.

From this it will be seen that the statistical position of pig iron is sound and satisfactory. As to the outlook for the furnace industry, a good deal depends upon the agreement of the Lake Superior mining companies as to the price of ore for 1901 deliveries. Of course, all furnaces are not dependent upon Lake Superior ores; but as these advance or decline the ore market fluctuates. A meeting is called at Cleveland for the 25th of January, to fix the prices of ores, and a great many large consumers of pig iron seem disposed to defer the placing of their 1901 orders, to see what agreement will be reached. The ores seems to have gained ground that the price of ores will be from $1 to $1.50 per ton below the 1900 average, and that the furnacemen will give their customers the advantage of any saving thus effected in the cost of pig iron. This was much more likely to have happened under the conditions prevailing up to Dec. 1 than it is under those now existing. That the ore miners will make any greater concessions than they need to is improbable, and their position seems to be gaining strength every week. The ore industry is controlled by men of sound business judgment, who are not likely to make any serious mistake in policy. It is probable that ore-mining operations will this year be conducted on a larger scale than in 1900. The increase will be chiefly in the Minnesota range, as the Michigan companies are already working very near their limit. This means that furnace managers will have to use larger proportions of Mesaba ore in their mixtures than they would care to do if they could have things quite their own way. The judgment of those best informed is that about the only advantage likely to be enjoyed by ore consumers this year over last will be in cheaper lake freights, which are expected to run 50 to 60 cents under the 1900 rates. The representatives of the Federal Steel Company, who have been exploring for new sources of supply in the Menominee Range, have been less successful than was expected. The same is true of the extensive explorations in the Vermillion Range. This means that the Bessemer ore supplies are better controlled than those who desire to be Independent had supposed.

As to prices of pig iron in 1901, the opinion obtains that the extreme range above or below present prices will be within narrow margins—say, $2 per ton either way. The consumption seems to be increasing at a rate which will take care of production. The export demand is expected to consume not less than a million tons of iron and steel which, in whatever shape shipped, first passes through the pig iron stage and gives employment to the blast furnaces. This, however, is no great matter. The home market is, and must long remain, the chief reliance of the furnace interest, and for this the outlook is now exceptionally bright. The current production of about 1,000,000 tons per month is not accumulating on furnace banks, and if stocks should increase it is believed the makers are strong enough to hold the market steady.

In the West the outlook for 1901 is much more satisfactory than at the beginning of 1900. Enterprises which will consume immense quantities of material are being pushed vigorously, and new ones are taking shape. The general prosperity of the agricultural interests favors many plans of internal improvement which have been postponed for years.

The coke market is not likely to show any weakness under present conditions, and the price of furnace fuel will probably be well sustained. The large contracts which have already been placed with the Connellsville cokemakers have not required any shading of prices below $1.75 per net ton at the ovens.

MANUFACTURED STEEL AND IRON.

The generally sound condition of business of all kinds furnishes the best possible basis for the expectation of a busy and prosperous year for manufacturers. There are, of course, elements of uncertainty in the situation which may contradict all predictions; but that was always true, and always will be. The great steel combinations have settled the labor question better than was expected by convincing organized labor that while able to conduct any kind of conflict which may be forced upon them, they mean to treat their workmen fairly. The existing scales have been continued, and this insures peace and quietness for another year at least. Fighting great consolidations by means of strikes is very serious business, and those who manage labor affairs are not likely to engage in it lightly. On the other hand, the interests of organized and combined capital are best assured by treating labor liberally, and not pressing for every momentary advantage which offers.

The rail mills are credited with orders for about 1,750,000 tons for 1901 delivery, and the intention is announced of advancing prices $1 to $2 per ton at the next meeting of manufacturers. This means a very satisfactory profit even for those not in a position to meet the lowest prices which could be made without loss by their more fortunate competitors. The orders booked for structural material are very large—enough, it is believed, to run everything full for three months at least, and in some instances to five or six months. A conservative estimate of the business in sight warrants the belief that when additional orders are needed they can be had for the asking. It would be impossible to catalogue the orders which, already booked, must be many times repeated before work in hand can be finished. This is true not only of the East, but equally of the West. No one line of products could be singled out as furnishing a conspicuous exception to the conditions which make the market for finished products exceedingly strong. The great consolidations controlling steel products other than rails and structural shapes, are well supplied with orders, and enter the New Year in very satisfactory shape. As a general fact, it may be said that the mills which have not booked orders for three to five months ahead, have deemed it good business policy not to do so.

IRON AND STEEL EXPORTS.

The export movement of iron and steel and other manufactures, though restricted by high ocean freights and the scarcity of charters, has been of great volume, and of immense importance to the producers of this country. The Treasury Department figures for 1899 are not yet completed, but those at hand, covering the ten months ended with October, warrant the estimate that the year's exports of iron and steel and their manufactures will have reached $100,000,000 in value. The South has had the advantage of the foreign pig iron demand, and will probably continue to hold it, owing to the cheapness of its product. The exports of pig iron for the fiscal year 1900 were 160,000 tons, valued at $3,124,853. In the calendar year they will be much larger. In steel rails the year's export will probably aggregate $12,000,000 in value. About $1,000,000 of this total goes to Europe, an equal amount to Mexico, about $2,000,000 to South America, $4,000,000 to British North America, and $2,000,000 to Asia and Oceanica. Locomotives to the value of about $5,000,000 have followed the rails; also cars to the value of about $4,000,000. The total exports of railway materials in the year will probably be found to have reached a total of $25,000,000. The rail exports reach a total of about 60,000 tons. There has also been a considerable movement of bridge material, and, indeed, of pretty much everything made of iron and steel. That the large exports of 1900 will be continued through 1901 is altogether improbable. The conditions abroad are changing rapidly.

Very little remains of the European "boom" of 1898-99. Its subsidence is so complete as to occasion no little disquietude, especially in Germany. The phenomenal development of the iron and steel industries of the German Empire has been somewhat too abruptly checked. Very little of this is due to lack of coal. Such scarcity as now exists is largely artificial, as may be judged from the fact that the Westphalia mine owners, constituting one of the powerful German fuel syndicates, have lately decided to restrict production as a means of sustaining coal prices. The general condition of Germany is such as to attract much attention and excite serious apprehension. It need not be supposed, however, that its thoroughly syndicated industries are incapable of a vigorous fight for the defense of their markets against easy capture by foreign makers. The position of the iron and steel industries of Great Britain seems to be sounder, but their immediate outlook is not bright. They have been menaced with ruin by American competition ad nauseam, and will die hard if die they must—which, indeed, is not, at all likely. With the shrinkage of the European demand, prices are falling and costs are being readjusted on a basis which makes export orders much less attractive than they were six months ago. European makers are not now so well supplied with orders that they will let anything pass which can be taken, and what progress we make in the conquest of European markets, or those hitherto supplied from Europe, we shall have to fight for. Only in specialties will the profit be as satisfactory as can be realized at home on sales for prompt delivery. It is not likely that domestic consumers will be satisfied to see a large surplus exported without profit, merely to sustain prices at home. The announcement that makers were doing this would be a danger signal, and would lead to a sharp contraction of domestic business. We learned from experience during the last half of 1900 with what patience consumers can wait for a readjustment of prices on a basis satisfactory to themselves. For example, it is known that some, at least, of the large mills could sell steel rails at $17 and not lose money. Should they do so on export orders, while holding the price to American buyers firm at $28 to $28, the amount of business they could get from the trunk lines and large buyers would not amount to much. Our public objects less to large profits legitimately earned than to anything which savors of unfair discrimination.

Very few foreign inquiries are now reported, and for some time no important export orders have been taken. The current shipments represent deliveries on orders taken early last year, and from the statistical point of view are water which has passed the mill.

THE GREAT IRON AND STEEL CONSOLIDATIONS.

The one element of uncertainty in the conditions which will shape the immediate future of the iron and steel trades, is the relation likely to be maintained between the great consolidations which now control the business in practically every department. Their wise management demands a high order of executive ability, and it has been shrewdly remarked that the number of positions calling for great captains of industry is much larger than the number of men capable of filling them. How true this may be we shall know better when the navigation of the consolidations is more perilous than it has been at any time since they were formed. That under present conditions they are likely to fall to quarreling or engage unnecessarily in a cut-throat competition is not probable. The time for that will come when the pressure of intense competition is more seriously felt and when orders have to be scrambled for.

The consolidations are in business to make money, and their eagerness to do this while the opportunity lasts is calculated to aid powerfully in keeping the peace between them. They are heavily capitalized and have unusual burdens of operating expenses and fixed charges to carry. Their securities are not yet so firmly established in public confidence that a policy of management destructive of earnings would not send them down many points in much less time than would be needed to restore them to their present somewhat precarious level of curbstone valuations. Wall Street is becoming keenly critical in the matter of industrials, large and small, and to keep their common stock in the market a conservative policy is necessary. An illustration of this was furnished by the business pyrotechnics of Mr. John W. Gates in the management of American Steel and Wire, which dropped the common stock from 59⅞ to 28½, and the best results of subsequent efforts at rebuilding have been to make it touch 47½, with a very slight tenure. Even the consolidations managed with great care and discretion were unable to pass through the ordeal of 1900 without serious shrinkage in the value of their securities. Of fourteen leading consolidations in the iron and steel trades the common stock of three is quoted under 25; that of three under 50; that of eight under 75. The investor will naturally ask himself: "If this is a fair measure of their value, with more or less artificial support, under present conditions, what would they be worth through a period of seven lean years?" This inquiry is especially significant when applied to the preferred stock. It would not take much foolishness in their councils to make some of these great inflations candidates for the ministrations of the receiver. That this can happen to consolidations of very great properties under impractical management is shown in the case of some great combines which, in their brief history, have illustrated what the late Roscoe Conkling described as "the bright beginning and the bitter end of a halcyon and vociferous proceeding."

Fortunately for all in interest there is very little disposition manifested in the management of the iron and steel consolidations to invite disaster. They have the wholesome respect for one another which is felt among the great military powers; but if they ever fall to quarreling we shall witness a battle of giants and Titans. It is not likely that 1901 will necessitate any serious cutting of prices to capture business, and until this becomes necessary or seems desirable there need be no grave apprehensions of destructive competition.

Since its reorganization, the Carnegie interest seems to have been, in a sense, "bound over to keep the peace," having largely passed under the management of young men who have more to lose than to gain by an aggressive policy. While undoubtedly able to make a great deal of trouble for others, they are not likely to find it presently to their interest to do so. The control of the future of iron and steel is to a great extent in the hands of the consolidations, which are, fortunately, not monopolies. If exercised with wisdom and prudence, it is believed they will be able to hold things fairly steady for three or four years to come.

IRON OUTLOOK AT PITTSBURG.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Jan. 5.—The iron and steel industry for 1901 is in a healthier condition than it was at the close of 1899. Then an apparent boom was on, but at the core conditions were bad. Business had a semblance of being sound, and the public was led to believe that the output of every furnace and plant in the country was being taxed to its utmost; but in reality the furnaces were stacking piles of pig iron, and the mills working out contracts made during the boom of 1899. No new orders were coming in. The facts were concealed until about March of 1900. About that time an inkling of the true condition began to be known, and a violent attack on the stocks of industrial concerns almost precipitated a panic.

It was at this point that the foreign market served to keep many expensive plants in running order at low-priced contracts. After repeated efforts to shake off the feeling of dread in the United States, manufacturers sent their agents abroad in search of orders, and these were taken at any price so as to keep the mills going. As conditions improve in the United States efforts to secure foreign contracts are being relaxed, and an order for rails from abroad was actually refused at the close of the year because the price was not equal to that paid by consumers at home.

The combinations that control the major portion of the steel industry have worked in harmony during the year. There has been no serious attempt at price cutting, and each has respected the particular field the other has occupied. Even the Carnegie Steel Company has refrained from entering into competition with any of the combinations. This was expected. It is frequently being breathed that the Pittsburg concern will build a sheet plant to compete with the American Sheet Steel Company because the latter concern, it is alleged, refuses to place its steel bar contracts with the Carnegie Company.

One of the important features to resurrect the steel trade during the trying months of the year was the enormous increase in shipbuilding. The quantity of steel plates and structural shapes used in shipbuilding during 1900 broke all previous records, and it has done much to increase the tonnage of the United States in rolled steel over that of 1899. It was the common belief that the record of 1899 would stand out as a leader for many years, but 1900 will probably lead it by about 1,000,000 gross tons.

The plate output will be increased considerably. Not only will the home market be supplied, but the shipyards of Great Britain have contracted for over 200,000 tons of plates from the United States. British steel makers seem unable to turn this invasion. German plate makers sought to compete with Americans in Great Britain. While the quality of their products has been unassailable, yet they could not reduce the price to compete with the American product. Many of the steel mills of Great Britain are closing down as a result of this competition.

No building of any consequence is being put up to-day without the aid of steel. The tonnage of structural shapes will be far greater than that of 1899, when the price of shapes leaped to $45 per ton; whereas, the price during 1900 has not been over $30 per ton. So much steel is being used in small structures that the aggregate amount used is something enormous. It is doubtful if the mills now in existence can take care of much more business in steel shapes.

This is not the case with steel plates. The mills equipped to make plates can make almost one-fourth more material than they are now turning out. There are no new plates nor structural mills being built to take care of any increased consumption.

It was thought early last year that the rail trade for 1901 would prove a failure. Many railroad managers said early in 1900 that they would not purchase any quantity of rails at $28 per ton. Here, again, the foreign market helped the railmakers out of a difficulty. By taking contracts from abroad at cost, and less, the domestic consumers were brought into line, one by one. Many of the largest roads have not ordered their quota for 1901, and it is possible they will remain out of the market, but about 1,100,000 tons of rails are said to have been ordered for the coming year. This is more than the rail mills had booked during the latter part of 1899. But it is a far cry from the amount ordered to the 2,500,000 tons which the rail mills hope to make. To scare the railroads into buying, a rumor has recently been published to the effect that rails will be advanced in price to $28 or $30 per ton. Such moves have been made before, but there is nothing in conditions to warrant such an advance.

Labor will probably be reduced in many instances during the year. Coke is selling at least $2 per ton less than in 1899 and 1900, and ore freight rates have been reduced. The iron ore mine operators are fighting a reduction in price, but it is fairly assured that lake freight rates on ore for 1901 will not be as high as they were during 1900. If the Rockefeller interests had not tied up a fleet of their vessels for the season, there would not have been any dollar rates on the lakes. The most that can be expected by lake shippers next year will be 60 cents per ton.

The three products using up the greatest tonnage of steel practically rule the market. Tin plate, sheets, hoops, and wire worked up from steel billets do not affect the output as do the heavier products. Take the products of wire, for instance. With all the mills operating seven months in the year they can turn out more than enough to supply the demand, with plenty to spare. The tin plate mills might work nine or ten months at double turn and produce enough to supply, not only all that is consumed of the domestic product, but of the imported as well. The sheet output is in about the same state.

The pig iron situation is in an alarming condition. There seems to be no future for the Northern furnaces, and the Eastern stacks were recently saved from being wiped out of existence by a timely reduction in coke freights. None of the furnaces of any extensive capacity can be operated successfully without the use of Connellsville coke. Southern plants find a good substitute in Alabama and Tennessee coke, while the West Virginia product answers as a mixer, but the furnaces using the Connellsville product exclusively have the upper hand where freight rates will permit. The big combinations are buying and building their own furnaces to an extent that will eventually wipe the independent furnace out of existence. This is not the case with furnaces making a specialty of foundry irons, but as the furnaces on Bessemer grades are being deprived of their markets, they are put on foundry iron and mill iron. The increased use of malleable iron is aiding the furnaces making a lower grade of Bessemer, but this is not enough to offset the loss of trade due to concentration of the steel industries.

The output of open-hearth steel will show a remarkable increase during 1900 and 1901. There are building, and about ready to be put in operation to-day, open-hearth furnaces capable of a capacity of 1,200 gross tons per day in the Pittsburg district alone. As these plants operate twenty-four hours a day the whole year, the increased output added to that already in existence will show an enormous aggregate gain. That open-hearth steel will eventually supplant Bessemer steel there can be no doubt.

The increase in the open-hearth process has increased the value of scrap steel fully 150 per cent. It will continue to increase the price, and the question is arising, where is enough scrap material to be had to supply the demand? Under new processes the molten metal is being poured into open-hearth furnaces instead of the cold pigiron. This increases the output and decreases the cost and brings it nearer the value of Bessemer.

The year 1901 will show a remarkable increase in production. Every one of the combines will have healthy competition before the closing of the year. Half a dozen sheet mills are being projected. Rod mills are being built and operating independent of the American Steel and Wire Company to almost supply half of the product consumed in the United States. The American Tin Plate Company, it is said, has subsidized nearly all the roll turning and tinplate making machine works in the country, but in spite of this many new tin plate mills are projected. The pipe and tube industry is threatened with competition, but none has actually shown itself. The National Tube Company and the Shelby Steel Tube Company will have a war on seamless tubes for boilers until they can be brought together through some amicable arrangement. The rail pool, structural steel pool, and the steel plate pool are not being molested. It requires so much money, and such extra precautions have to be made to secure raw material for these weighty products, that the average promoter shuns the prospects of facing an examining committee on these points.

The Carnegie Company is, and will be for 1901 at least, the greatest producer of steel in the world. The fact that this company controls the best coking coal in the world, that it is the only concern having a surplus of Bessemer ore, which is running very low in the Lake Superior region, and as it controls its own railroads and ships, it cannot be distanced in the race for supremacy for some time to come. Should all the combines now holding forth in the Battery Park Building unite they would not begin to assume the proportions of the Carnegie Company, with all the smaller concerns of the same character in the country thrown in.

Imports and Exports.

LARGE INCREASE IN THE SHIPMENTS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—When the Government reports of a year ago showed the trade of that year to have been the largest in the history of the United States, with a total just rising above $2,000,000,000 it was considered so gratifying a figure that if it had not been exceeded in the following year there would have been no surprise. But the year 1900 has surpassed the preceding year in its total of trade for the United States, the footings for the calendar year showing a trade of $2,200,000,000, with the promise that the record will be retained for the fiscal year.

There are many particulars in which the figures for the year are satisfactory. For the first time, the exports, which reach the prodigious total of $1,465,000,000, exceed the imports by $640,000,000. That is $25,000,000 in excess of the best year on record. In the matter of manufactured goods, our exports of which have steadily increased, the enormous total of $445,000,000 has been reached, a gain of $164,000,000 over 1899.

In the table given below, the figures for eleven months were as reported by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics. The figures for December have been estimated, and the official report may show some gains upon them, as the estimates have been conservatively made. A slight increase of exports in December may advance the total of exports. The exports for the calendar year are double those of 1888, three times as large as those of 1872, four times those of 1869, and five times as great as those of 1860. The imports, showing our ability to buy as well as sell, are only $15,000,000 more than they were in the year 1892 the year of the highest record of imports.

The imports and exports of the calendar years 1899 and 1900 are given below:

*Estimated for December.

The detailed figures show that there was a large increase in the demand for goods from abroad upon which duty had to be paid, but which are classified as goods partly manufactured. But the group of imports dutiable that is the largest and that shows the greatest increase during the year is that of "articles manufactured for consumption." There was a small increase in the importations of "articles of voluntary use, luxuries, &c." the assumption being that we could have got along without those articles if so disposed.

The percentage of manufactures exported continues to advance, and promises to reach 33 1-3 per cent. before long, if the tendency of the world's buyers to prefer American machinery and manufactures of all kinds continues.

Some of the items of importation seem interesting in view of the obstacles thrown in the way of importing by the customs laws. There was an increase of something like $7,000,000 in the importation of cotton manufactures, an industry to which much American capital is attracted. There was an increased importation of pig iron, scrap iron, and ingots, but a decided falling off in railway bar importations—the tide being in the other direction. But the totals show that more than five millions more of iron in one form or another was imported in 1900 than in 1899.

There was a falling off in the importations of diamonds, and a decline of all sorts of jewelry of about $8,000,000 in the year. While we dropped something like $2,000,000 in our imports of raw silk from China, the decline in importations of raw silk from Japan was fully $7,000,000. At the same time we increased our importations of manufactures of silk. France secured most of the increase. There was a falling off of imports of sugar of about $15,000,000 in the year.

There was an increased importation in the year of about $1,000,000 in wood pulp, about half of the whole quantity imported coming from British North America. Notwithstanding the high duty on wool, the imports increased about $9,000,000, the imports of woolen goods, however, advancing very little. The exports of horses increased about $5,000,000, and of mules more than $3,000,000, the war in South Africa affecting the trade in both horses and mules, but most notably the latter. About $2,000,000 worth of horses went to Africa during the year. Only $11,000 were sent to that country in 1899.

The cycle trade has weakened during the year, our exports having decreased about $1,500,000 as compared with 1899. Of cars and carriages we increased our exports about $3,000,000. The coal exports increased about $6,000,000. British North America was our best coal customer, taking about $14,000,000, an increase of $3,000,000. The exports of cotton are about $110,000,000 in excess of those of last year. We lost in exports of cotton cloths about $5,000,000. Of this loss we suffered to the extent of about $4,000,000 in our trade with the Chinese Empire. The exports of steel rails were $5,000,000 larger in 1900 than in 1899, the exportation for 1900 being about $11,000,000.

According to the figures, we lost of butter exports about $2,200,000 during the year. We gained a little more in exports of cheese, the gain being chiefly in the United Kingdom. Tobacco fell off about $3,000,000. Lumber exports increased about $4,000,000.

The great increase of exports over 1899 was made up of moderate advances all along the line. The decline in exports of leather is considerable, attributable, in the opinion of manufacturers, to the disadvantage of the tax on hides to the tanners of the United States. The rebate does not seem to check the backward tendency.

Among the large importations was that of nearly 500,000 foreigners, 100000 each from Austria-Hungary, Italy, and Russia, and the remainder from temperate countries. The observation of Government officers on duty in the tropics is that there is no tendency of tropical populations to seek a colder climate, the total offerings from tropical countries in the year being about 5,000, or about 1 per cent. of the whole immigration.

The trade of Great Britain, as compared with that of the United States, according to the latest procurable figures, shows that the imports of the United Kingdom in eleven months were $2,322,663,000, as compared with $2,162,577,000 for a corresponding period in 1899. The exports were $1,303,440,000, as compared with $1,180,720,000. For a like period the imports of the United States were $760,451,507, as against $728,233,577; the exports were $1,308,929,330, as compared with $1,131,537,910 in 1899. Our exports in the later period exceed those of the United Kingdom.

Problem of Trade Balances.

By
C. Schumacher of C. Schumacher & Co.

The course of exchange in the markets of any one country generally indicates how that country's accounts stand with the rest of the world. There are cases, however, where exchange may be influenced by other causes than the mere state of, say, our account with Europe. One such cause was the fear of disturbance in our monetary system several years ago. Wars and political disturbances at home and abroad will also temporarily cause irregularities and deviations from the natural course. The natural course, all things being even, is primarily the result of the state of our trade relations with the rest of the world, viz., the amount of our exports as compared to our imports of merchandise. The differences between imports and exports are bound to influence the money markets at home and abroad, and these money markets must in their turn effect the course of exchange.

Of an aggregate of $1,400,000,000 in trade balances in our favor accumulated during the past three years, nearly $500,000,000 fell upon the year 1900. While during the first two years Europe stood the strain without showing any noticeable ill effects, it has become evident that during the year 1900 Europe had begun to feel the pinch more or less severely, particularly England and Germany—the two principal trading nations of Europe.

In England the pinch was further aggravated by its war in South Africa and the consequent loss of the product of the rich gold mines of that district, which would have amounted to over $100,000,000 since the war commenced. Not having this gold with which to pay for our breadstuffs, cotton, and other products, England had to pay for these in the American railroad and other bonds and stocks bought of us as an investment in former years.

Under natural conditions, when our exports largely exceed the imports in any one year, exchange is bound to be low, and when the contrary takes place exchange must be high. So it also happens that in Autumn and Winter every year, when the export season is at its height, exchange rules at its lowest, while during the Spring and the Summer months, when the export season is over, exchange always reaches the highest point of the year.

During the year 1900, although our exports were the largest ever known, exchange, owing to the constant return flow of our securities from abroad, never reached the extremely low figures seen so often in former years, nor did it go to extremely high figures when, during the Summer, Europe was swarming with American tourists attracted by the Paris Exposition. The result was a very moderate gold export movement in Summer and a like moderate gold import movement this Autumn.

On the whole, including the gold imports from Australia via California, the imports show but little difference as compared to the exports of gold.

One thing above all others which goes to show the enormous gain which the country has made this year is in the fact that for the first time in our history our surplus has been such as to enable our capitalists and financial institutions to subscribe and to pay for a number of foreign Government loans offered during the year to an amount probably aggregating over eighty million dollars.

One other gain of incalculable value to this country is in the progress made in the markets of the world by our coal and our iron. The progress made so far is so pronounced as to leave no doubt that in a very few years our coal and our iron will have wrested the supremacy from those who now hold the world's market.

The gains made by this country during the year opens the question how long our European customers will be able to stand the drain. It might be well for our legislators to remember that it would hardly pay to kill our customers, and that it would be wiser to change our present prohibitive trade policy to a more liberal system under which our customers may live to continue to contribute to our wealth ever after.

Railroad Conditions and Prospects for the Future.

From a Western Viewpoint.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES

By Warren G. Purdy,

The past year has been a prosperous one for the Western roads, and prospects indicate that the coming year will end as well. Our fiscal year does not end until March 31, but conditions of which I speak are current. There has been considerable construction work by the Western lines, particularly in the Southwest. We are building a line from Liberal, Kan., to a connection with the El Paso and Northeastern, and the latter is extending on the Southwest. The great West is being developed rapidly now, and I look for the progress to continue. The Southwest, particularly Mexico, I think is a desirable field for railroads. There is much in Mexico to be developed. That country is making rapid strides. The progress made there during the past year or two is remarkable.

We did not buy as much new equipment last year as we did the year before, but there would be nothing in that fact to indicate conditions of traffic, that is, it would not be conclusive evidence that business was light. We are well equipped now, and do not need so much new rolling stock.

Railroad Prospects Are Bright.

By S. R. Callaway,

President New York Central Railroad.

Taking the conditions existing in the year just past as a basis, and assuming that there will be no unexpected calamity, the outlook for the coming year for Eastern transportation interests seems to be excellent. There is no reason to believe that the great and general prosperity of the last two years will receive a check for at least a few years to come; on the contrary, both the export and import markets are exceedingly active, and the reports from the agricultural and industrial sections of the country continue most favorable. Of course, railroad prosperity depends largely on the prosperity of the rest of the country, but even with an unexpected falling off in commercial activity, conditions of former depressions would hardly be repeated, inasmuch as the railroad capitalization has been brought down to bed rock, while the earning capacity has steadily been increased. The improvements of enormous extent which have been carried on by the various roads are responsible for increased earnings to a large degree. These improvements, which are not only in maintenance of way, but in conducting transportation, will continue and will result in still greater economies. The latest methods of loading cars last year resulted in gains in tons of freight per train mile of 15 per cent. over the year 1898, and the end of these improvements is not yet.

Another factor which will contribute to the continued prosperity of the railroads is the improvement in the rate situation, both as regards passenger and freight rates. Indirectly the "community of ownership," meaning the advent of the same dominating interests into various railroad properties, has no doubt had much to do with the better maintenance of rates, and surely guarantees that the same efforts at stability will be continued. It is better to have rates maintained at a perhaps slightly lower basis than to have high rates on paper, but without any stability, because of frequent cutting. I believe, therefore, that published tariffs will be more strictly adhered to than ever before, and that they will be still better maintained than during the past year.

Taking all the various elements into consideration which go to make up the prosperity of a railroad, I should say that there is every indication that the coming year will be a prosperous one, and that if it should, perchance, not exceed the record of the year just ended, it will not fall behind its figures. I may say that I anticipate increased earnings, and that the question which will concern the railroad officials most will not be the maintenance of the tonnage, but rather the ability of the roads, even with their increasing facilities, to handle expeditiously the volume of business offered and to take advantage of it.

Sensible Legislation Needed.

By E. P. Ripley,

Every one knows in a general way that the year 1900 has been one of unexampled prosperity all over the United States. With few exceptions the crops have been bountiful, and these are, of course, the foundation of everything. We have had the world for a customer not only for our surplus crops, but to a greater extent than ever before for the product of our mines and our manufacturers. In this prosperity the railroads have necessarily shared, though probably not to the same proportional extent as the producers and manufacturers, which latter did not hesitate to advance prices, while the railroads, with few and trifling exceptions, made no advances in rates, though compelled to pay higher prices for everything that enters into cost of transportation. It may be said, therefore, that the benefits accruing to the railroads came wholly from increased volume of business, and not from any increase in rates.

So far as can now be foreseen the prospects for 1901 are good. For most of the roads there is probably more business "in sight" than there was a year ago, but no man can do more than conjecture what the future has in store. There has been no abatement of the useless waste of money caused by senseless laws which seek to foster unlimited and unbridled competition, and if the money so thrown away could be saved, the public could be better served at lower rates with gratifying results to all concerned. When the public sees this, as it some day will, and when laws permit the regulation of competition and the elimination of the army of middlemen who now prey alike on the railroads and those who use them, we shall have at least a more solid foundation for railroad prosperity. Meantime the attitude of our lawmakers in refusing to common carriers the right to combine for their own protection and that of the public, is rapidly bringing about consolidations which will ultimately result in lodging all railroad management in few hands—a result which may excite alarm in the public mind, but which is not to be deplored, because it will result in no higher charges to the general public and will add to the security of that very large section of it which holds railroad securities as investments. So far as we can now see, the coming year promises well, but it is too much to expect the present prosperous conditions to last indefinitely.

Coal-Carrying Situation.

Thomas P. Fowler, President of the New York, Ontario and Western Railway Company, speaking of the prospects of the anthracite coal roads, says:

"The past year has been a most favorable one for the anthracite coal roads, in spite of some disadvantageous occurrences such as the miners' strike during the Fall, which affected their earnings. At the close of the year, the coal-road situation is better than heretofore, and the outlook is equally bright. If the prosperity of the country increases the consumption of anthracite coal must increase at a like ratio. The market is broadening every year. Whereas formerly it was chiefly confined to the Middle and Eastern States, the market has been gradually extended to the Western and Southwestern States and other sections of the country, as well as throughout Canada. The increased consumption of bituminous coal is also a factor affecting the anthracite coal trade favorably. Another great factor in the increased prosperity of the coal roads will be the consolidation and concentration of interests which will enable those who control the anthracite properties to regulate the output so as to meet the requirements of consumers and to deal with labor organizations and strike situations to better advantage. The concentration of 400 or 500 interests into a dozen, more or less, will make it possible to reach a quicker solution of pending questions. It should enable mine owners to consider all questions fairly, and should bring them in closer contact with the miner, thereby making it possible to deal with his status more readily. Economies that may be introduced through these consolidations of interests will also result favorably to the mine worker, the carrying company, and to the consumer.

"Freight rates should be more stable and better maintained than they have been in the past, and the outlook for general freight and passenger business is satisfactory.

"Taking the whole situation at a glance, I should say that if present conditions ever warrant a forecast of the future they do to-day point to increased prosperity in every direction, and I consider the outlook more favorable than it has been for at least a decade."

Railroads in the West.

M. E. Ingalls, President of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad, has this to say regarding the condition of the railroads in the Central West:

"There is an old adage that 'happy is that country which has no history,' and the same may be said of the railways in this part of the country to-day. Tariffs are reasonable and well maintained; business is good, and the public appears to be satisfied, except that in some cases shippers are seriously incommoded by the failure of the railways to furnish cars to move the traffic, which it is impossible to do on account of the large increase of business and the crowding of terminals. All of the railways seem to be improving their facilities, building sidetracks, and purchasing freight and passenger equipment. There are no quarrels and there seems to be a general era of good feeling among the railway officials. If the present condition of affairs continues for a year or two it will be fortunate for the railway investors and for the public—for investors, for it will insure a continuance of interest payments and dividends, and for the public, because it will enable the railways to provide facilities for taking care of their business and serving the public as it should be served."

Shipments From Lake Ports.

An Increase of More than a Million Tons Last Year—Few New Mines Have Been Located.

DULUTH, Minn., Jan. 5.—There was an increase of iron ore shipments from the Lake Superior region for the year 1900 of about 1,000,000 tons over the last, or any preceding, season. The business of the year has amounted to 19,330,948 gross tons.

There is no similar freight movement in the world. Both in point of magnitude and in methode of handling, the iron ore traffic of the Minnesota and Michigan fields well represents the progress of the United States in transportation. The Spanish mines produce about half as much as those of Lake Superior, and with them alone is there any possible comparison in point of tonnage moved. Most of the Spanish ores are conveyed aboard ship to England, most of the lake ores by vessel to lower lake ports. The iron masters of Germany have recently made such contracts with mining concerns of Gellivara, Northern Sweden, as will enable them to carry 3,000,000 tons a year to German furnaces. In order to do this, they are sending their engineers to Lake Superior and following out lake methods as closely as possible. Compared with the total railway tonnage moved one mile in the United States, this ore movement by water is nearly one-seventh as large. The mines of Lake Superior lie from 15 to 100 miles from lake ports, and the business of conveying this ore to the lake requires the concentrated effort of eight railways, each equipped with the heaviest of rolling stock and motive power. Several of the roads have been built primarily and almost exclusively for this ore trade. It is now estimated that there is an investment of almost $300,000,000 in mines, railways, ore-carrying ships, terminal facilities, &c., for the ore trade of Lake Superior. This vast investment is growing marvelously year by year, and is not yet at its maximum. There are now on the upper lakes, nearly all on Superior, twenty-four shipping docks, representing an investment of about $5,000,000, useful for iron ore shipments only. They have an annual capacity for handling not less than 25,000,000 tons of ore in the short lake season of from seven to eight months.

The ore shipments to furnaces in 1900 were double those of so recent a period as 1896. In fact, seven individual mines sent down more ore than did the entire eighty-two that were in operation in 1896. Since 1895 this business has doubled every five years.

FEW NEW ORE FIELDS.

The policy of the large steel-making interests of the country is to control, not alone the manufacture of steel, but the ore in the ground. That policy has been emphasized in every step in the transition process from mine to mill during the year, and has been extended in every possible way. As fast as new mines have been found they have been secured by the big interests, either for smelting or as a reserve for transportation in later years. As fast as there has come information of new discoveries in new fields these interests have been on the ground, examining with care every indication, and ready to put any amount of money into any favorable proposition.

But the new mines of the year have been very scarce. On the old ranges of the lake there have been almost none discovered, and those on the Mesaba have been few. Considering the amount of expert search and the million dollars or so spent in this inquiry, the results have been startlingly meagre. This fact, indeed, has been the most significant and important of the year. It has served notice on the lake operators that they are not likely to increase their reserves in old ground; that the ore of the Mesaba is pretty well found, and that the annual output of Michigan ranges has about reached its maximum. With the continued increased demand from steel makers, the growth in the trade of the country and its consumption of iron per capita, this is a fact of prime importance.

There are vast ore reserves on the Mesaba range, and perhaps elsewhere in Minnesota. In consequence that State will hereafter lead in the production of ore, and the proportion of Mesaba ores consumed in the furnaces of the country will grow very materially in the immediate future. So important is a raw material at low cost, and so necessary to low cost is water transportation that seekers for ore have not as yet separated themselves by any considerable distance from the great lakes. With this in mind the chief search of new ore fields has been on the Canadian side of the lake. This has been of extreme importance, and may result in the discovery of ore districts that will rival those of the south side of the lake. At the east end of the lake there has been traced an ore-bearing formation of the Michipicoten district for more than thirty miles, and one mine and several ore bodies that may later be mines have been found. The company owning most of this range has built a standard gauge railway to the mine, erected a village and built docks, &c., and during this, its first season, was able to ship 62,000 tons of merchantable ore. Another year and it will send to market, both in Canada and the United States, from 500,000 to 600,000 tons of ore. It will be able, by reason of a short rail and lake haul, and by easily mined ore, to compete with the mines of the States, though the ore must pay a duty of 40 cents per ton. There is, notwithstanding this new Canadian field, no effort in progress or contemplated for an increase in the duty, as American iron masters are glad to welcome any addition to the list of workable mines. The volume of ore that can come from Canada will be insignificant in comparison with that produced in the States for some time to come.

Aside from the new Michipicoten fields are the Atikokan ores, magnetites rich in iron and low in phosphorus, though said to be troubled by an excess of other injurious elements. These fields are now being explored by steel makers of wealth, and a railroad is under construction that will in a few months open them to the miner.

Elsewhere along the iron-bearing formations north of Lake Superior extensive explorations have been carried on and are still in progress by the leading steel-making interests of the United States. So far there has been little of value discovered.

STATISTICS OF SHIPMENTS.

Seven mines of Lake Superior have won more than 750,000 tons each during the year. This is more for each of them than was ever produced by any mine up to 1892, and not more than one mine was able to reach such a total till four years ago. Now there are seven. Two mined more than 1,000,000 tons each. These big mines are as follows:

Fayal, in Minnesota	1,253,000
Mountain Iron, in Minnesota	1,001,000
Chapin, in Michigan	926,000
Biwabik, in Minnesota	925,000
Mahoning, in Minnesota	911,000
Norrie, in Michigan	907,000
Adams, in Minnesota	777,000

The record of shipments from Minnesota lake ports and ranges for the years 1899 and 1900 were:

	1900.	1899.
Two Harbors, Mesaba and Vermillion ores	4,007,294	3,077,733
Duluth, Mesaba ores	3,888,986	3,509,965
Escanaba, Menominee, and Marquette ores	3,436,734	3,720,218
Marquette, Marquette ores	2,760,494	2,733,596
Ashland, Gogebic ores	2,633,687	2,703,447
Superior, Mesaba ores	1,522,898	878,942
Gladstone, Menominee ores	418,854	381,457
Michipicoten, Michipicoten ores	62,000
Total shipped by lake	18,730,948	17,901,358
Roll shipments, estimated	600,000	350,446

The iron ore traffic furnishes three-fifths of the tonnage moved either way on Lake Superior. It is the backbone and mainstay of the lake marine. There are now building at lake shipyards about thirty steel ships of an average capacity of 6,500 tons a trip, a fleet capable of carrying next year almost 4,000,000 tons of ore. These ships represent an investment of about $7,500,000. That capital can be found to construct such a fleet is an indication of the faith many men of money have as to the growth of the lake ore and other traffic during the coming year, a faith that, for the immediate future at least, is not fully shared by all.

DWIGHT E. WOODBRIDGE.

Growing Importance of Corn.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES

By Oscar K. Lyle,

Member New York Produce Exchange.

The official estimate of the corn crop of the United States for 1900 was recently declared by the Department of Agriculture to be 2,105,000,000 bushels from 83,300,000 acres. In the amount produced it has been but three times exceeded in the history of the country. In yield per acre it has frequently been surpassed. At a glance the crop appears sufficiently large for all probable requirements. But this is questionable, as I will proceed to show.

The corn crop of the United States is one of its most important ones. No crop has so many uses, and none is so convertible on the farms, where about three-fourths of its consumption takes place. There are not so many who are fully aware of the extended use of this cereal in comparatively a few years. In this country is produced 75 per cent. of the corn in the entire world. Until within a few years the amount entering export was inconsiderable. In the space of two decades discoveries have increased the uses to which it is put, while American enterprise is fast succeeding in lessening an inexplicable prejudice in Europe and increasing our exports.

But it is in figures rather than in words the situation is most apparent. For this purpose a comparison of the crops and their distribution in the five years of 1890 to 1894, inclusive, with the five years succeeding affords sufficient evidence of corn's increasing popularity and importance. I take it that the distribution of a crop is in the calendar year following its harvest. This is practically true. Hence the crops of 1890 to 1894, inclusive, supplied the demands of 1891 to 1895, inclusive. In reverting to the past, I find the crops of 1888 and 1889 were so large that a reserve, approximately 500,000 bushels, is properly to be added to the crop of 1890. With this reserve and the crops of five years, 1890 to 1894, inclusive, the supply was roundly 8,511,000,000 bushels. A short crop in 1894 exhausted all the corn when the crop of 1895 was entered on, just as in 1900 there was no old corn remaining from the crop of 1899. The distribution of the stated 8,511,000,000 bushels was, in exports, 272,519,000 bushels, and an average annual consumption of 1,647,000,000 bushels. This consumption approximated 1,750,000,000 bushels in 1895, when we began the second term of five years without reserves. It will be noticed that not much in excess of 3 per cent. entered export and measured our foreign demand in natural corn and corn meal.

In the second term of five years, 1895 to 1899, inclusive, the production amounted to 10,340,000,000 bushels, and was all distributed in 1896 to 1900, inclusive. This period began and ended without reserves. We find that exports took 940,000,000 bushels, and the average annual consumption at home 1,880,000,000. The consumption in 1896 was approximately 1,780,000,000 bushels, and has been increasing about 50,000,000 bushels a year, until in 1900 the amount consumed can be said to be about 1,980,000,000 bushels. We have progressed to that point that it takes about 2,000,000,000 bushels to meet our home demands, if we have the corn and the price is not too dear. It will be noted that our exports are taking over 9 per cent. of larger crops than in the first five years. More than trebling our exports in so short a time tells how Europe is increasing its demand for this cereal. Now we are confronted with a consumption and exports in 1901 for more than the crop of 1900. There must be some abridging of demand to render the supply adequate. This abridgment is more apt to come from enhancing price than from any other cause. The animal census of the country has lessened so far that cheap meats from an overabundance is not probable within a year or so. This means much to the price of corn, as its greatest use is in meat production on the farms. The exports I have used do not include any corn that has gone abroad in converted forms, such as meats, lard, glucose, whisky, &c. A table lately produced enumerated some forty uses to which corn can be put. Its change on the farm from bushels of grain to pounds of meat is a great source of income to the farmer. The larger quantity leaving the country is a great increase of revenue to our railways. In the past five years they have transported an average of 130,000,000 bushels over the average in the five years preceding. In its production this country has practically a monopoly, while the value of corn has increased from its enlarged uses, and there is practically no substitute.

From a commercial point of view the conditions for a better price than has obtained for a number of years are excellent. The crop of 1900 was considered so promising that the crib corn in the country was all disposed of in the expectation of replenishing out of the crop. The price, and the good demand that is making the price, is making such replenishing very questionable. For this reason the corn moving from the farms will more generously reach the markets. On the other hand, the speculative interest for higher prices is not handicapped by large lines of crib corn carried on "hedges." The scarcity of old corn has made unusual demands on the crop and much decreased the supply available for the requirements of 1901.

Corn is not yet dear, and can advance materially without enforcing economy in its use. It is by far the most important American crop, and brings most wealth to the country. A short crop would be a calamity. That the area available for its production is not so very large, I note that over 60 per cent. of our entire crop is raised in seven States, and that within them there cannot be great extension of it without encroaching upon lands devoted to other crops. Outside of these seven States the new area that may be placed in corn is not apt to be greater than the needs of our rapidly-growing population. In five years domestic consumption has risen 14 per cent., and exports 245 per cent.

OSCAR K. LYLE.

Cotton Trade Prospects.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES

By Charles D. Freeman,

Member of the New York Cotton Exchange.

The cotton trade of the world has rarely been so puzzled over the probable outcome of the American cotton crop, for any year after Jan. 1, since careful statistics of the acreage, movement, and consumption have been recorded, as they are at the beginning of the twentieth century.

In analyzing the situation as an economic proposition, the first two factors to consider are the supply and demand. The crop of the United States makes the price of cotton for the world. The supplies from India, Egypt, and elsewhere figure only as a greater or less addition to what is produced in this country. The crop of the United States was planted under unfavorable conditions, and during its term of germination unfavorable weather prevailed, followed during the latter part of its growth by weather which was generally regarded as favorable. In the Southeastern and Gulf portions of the cotton belt a new growth appeared in districts where a part of the crop had been abandoned, and in the southwestern part of the belt the plant was in such a condition that it improved rapidly, and it is generally conceded that the growth there exceeded earlier expectations. On the 9th day of November general frosts destroyed the new growth in the Southeast, and served to hasten to maturity the promising crop of the Southwest. The area devoted to the production of cotton this season was 2,000,000 acres more than it was in the preceding crop year. Just how much the increased acreage will contribute to a larger crop than last year, which was 9,100,000 bales, (grown,) the receipts henceforth can alone determine. The consensus of opinion is that the crop will be about 10,000,000 bales.

In Egypt the low Nile caused a poor start for the crop, and the probabilities are that the yield in that country will be considerably less than it was last season.

In India the monsoon broke early and conditions were so improved there that it was possible to plant a large crop, and the indications now are that India will be able to export to the Continent of Europe in the neighborhood of 750,000 bales.

With these facts before us, I assume that the approximate world's production of cotton will be as follows, in bales of 500 pounds net:

United States, say	10,000,000
India	2,100,000
Egypt	1,000,000
Brazil and elsewhere, available for Europe	300,000
Total	13,400,000

The price of cotton at present is comparatively a high price. It is a maxim that higher prices for raw material overcome deficiencies in the supply, mainly through the influence which such high prices have in reducing the consumption; and many people maintain that the price this year will largely curtail the consumption of cotton. In reference to this matter, it will be well to call attention to the fact that during the past fifteen years the consumption each year has been the same or greater in volume than the preceding year, excepting in 1892 and 1893, when it was reduced about 300,000 bales as compared with the previous year by reason of the prolonged strike in Great Britain.

The actual cotton consumption of the world last year was 13,860,000 bales, taking into account the large surplus from previous years, and with the increase in the number of spindles throughout the world, estimated at 105,200,000, as compared with 103,200,000 a year ago, the conclusion seems justified that the consumption will be but slightly smaller this year than it was last, unless short supplies advance the market to prohibitive prices for the raw cotton.

Last year the consumers of the world had a surplus from the two previous large crops of American cotton to begin with, which they are without this year, the surplus having been consumed by reason of the reduced yield of the crop of 1899 and 1900.

It is a fair question to ask, What will be the effect of all this on the American cotton industry, in which three factors figure:

First—The domestic demand for manufactured goods.

Second—The possibilities of a decrease in the requirements of China.

Third—The usual demand for raw material for export.

In the matter of domestic conditions we have the general prosperity of the country, which is a factor affecting favorably the price of all raw and manufactured goods. Under this condition raw cotton and goods have advanced, and with a good margin of profit, not alone to the manufacturer, but to the producer, and thus the increased capacity to buy, will insure the continuance of this margin of profit.

Besides being a productive territory, the South has become a manufacturing one, and there has been a large increase in the number of cotton mills in the Southern States this year, and it is probable that the mills of North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia will in reasonable time consume the entire cotton product of these States.

As to the Chinese question, that is now a matter for diplomatic settlement. The conclusion is that trade there will be resumed shortly, notwithstanding the very large stocks of manufactured cotton goods now stored in Shanghai—the largest on record. The hesitancy in trade there is due now more to the local uprisings which check the movement of manufactured goods to the interior than to the situation resulting from the fear of an international complication. It is apparent that the merchants in China expect an early revival of trade. This is shown by the recent orders they have placed with Southern mills and in Manchester. These orders, while not as large as they were last year, are large enough to indicate that business conditions in China are becoming more settled.

As a result of the shortage in the supply of cotton from America last year, the visible and invisible supply in Great Britain and on the Continent were practically exhausted, and naturally the first efforts of spinners at the beginning of the present movement of American cotton were to overcome this deficiency, and they have imported so far this season largely in excess of the quantity of cotton imported to the same date last year; and the present indications are that the requirements of American cotton in Great Britain and on the Continent will be larger than they were last year, as spinners carried over no reserve stocks into the current year.

This brings us to the inquiry, Are present prices for the raw material too high to maintain the ratio of consumption as indicated above? Under prevailing economic conditions, I do not think 10 cents for spots and 9½ for May delivery in New York should be regarded as an abnormally high price. It is a fair conclusion that, with the advance in the prices of raw material of every nature throughout the world, being the adjustment of values on a gold basis, cotton will be consumed at present prices no less than iron, copper, tin, and similar productions, at their advanced prices as compared with the prices of three years ago.

CHARLES D. FREEMAN.

A Great Cotton Year.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES

By S. P. Walmsley,

President of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange.

The year and the century close on the most prosperous conditions in the cotton belt since the war.

The ideal of the Southern economist that cotton should be made a surplus crop has been more nearly approximated than ever before, and with prices averaging up to the most sanguine expectations, the results to our people have been of the happiest character.

Admitting that the present crop reaches the Government's estimate of 10,100,000 bales, (which is doubted by some of the most careful investigators of this section,) the outlook is that it will all be consumed, leaving the world's supply at the close of the current season at the famine point, where it stood at the end of the last cotton year. This allows for a million bales' decrease in consumption, compared with last season. If the price is relatively high, the supply is relatively scarce and offsetting the other, and, barring unforeseen circumstances, not connected with the ordinary questions of supply and demand, there is every reason for the assertion that cotton is in a strong position.

Thus far the South has marketed about 6,500,000 bales of last year's production, generally of a superior grade and description, for which outside figures have been obtained. We have received upward of $300,000,000 for this 6,500,000 bales, more by about $20,000,000 than we obtained for the entire 11,275,000 bales of the crop of 1898-9.

On a basis of 9½ cents per pound average for the season, which is a fair assumption, the value of the present crop on the Government's estimate of 10,100,000 bales, will be in round numbers about $480,000,000, or nearly $100,000,000 more than we received for the crop of 1898-9, which was about 1,200,000 bales greater. These are striking facts and figures. This and the last crop of cotton bringing to us about $850,000,000, nearly all of which will have remained in our Southern country, readily accounts for the signs of prosperity witnessed on every hand south of Mason & Dixon's line.

No people can be truly successful until they have learned to help themselves, and this the South has done. Practically unaided, we struggled through the years of gloom and depression which succeeded the great civil strife until at last success has been reached.

From now on our progress will be on the higher plane of prosperity and greater independence. Outside capital has aided us to a certain extent and is cordially welcomed, but the upbuilding of our factories and workshops has mostly resulted from investment of our own local accumulations. We have fought our own fight and the dawn of the new century finds us a happy and contented people, well fed and well clothed, abundantly able to care for ourselves, with arms extended in brotherly love toward other sections, proud of their kinship and the part the Almighty has enabled us to assume in upbuilding the grandest Nation on the globe.

The Wheat Outlook.

By Henry B. Hebert,

Member of the New York Produce Exchange.

In the economy of things that pertain to the forces of nature and which involve the production of food for the maintenance of the inhabitants of the earth, there prevails in these days a surety that each season in the rounds of time will furnish enough for man's wants and something to spare. There is no chance for a recurrence of the famine of Joseph's time, for if an impairment or failure of crop happens in one part of the world, the deficiency is more than made good from the harvest of some other section. The only factor to be considered is the question of price.

To forecast in regard to the wheat harvest for 1901 one must have more than ordinary courage to make a prediction, inasmuch as in some sections of the globe the land is not yet prepared for seeding, but on the assumption that conditions will favor agriculturists, I venture to state that, under such conditions, the present level of prices for wheat would seem too high.

Yet, while this may be true as to wheat values in September next, there should be some hesitancy about discounting current figures, for there are elements to be considered that may somewhat account for present values, and we have not very far to go for them. It will be remembered that during late May and June there was a protracted drought, and which was severely felt in the wheat-growing sections of this country. Dry weather and hot winds at a period when wheat is yet in the milk shrivels the berry and reduces the quantity. The drought was so disastrous that in the July report the Agricultural Department at Washington abandoned 5,000,0000 acres planted in wheat that had been included in the crop report of December previous. This meant that the farmers had plowed up so many acres sown in wheat because the plant had been killed for want of moisture. A large area of that which remained was more or less injured from the same cause. At the time the outlook was very serious, and it was considered doubtful if rains would materially improve the situation. Later rain fell and some sort of a wheat harvest semed probable. Rain became too much of a good thing, for it fell so copiously and so long that a new danger threatened the already impaired crop. In many sections wheat cut and stacked became field damaged. The Spring wheat sections suffered most. Choice qualities of old crop Spring wheat, such as millers of Minnehaha at the Falls of St. Anthony delight to grind, was purchased and held in reserve, and little if any of this grade is now available for export, because of the high prices obtainable in this country.

However, the entire wheat crop of the States had not gone to destruction. There was, of course, a fairly large percentage of good wheat secured from the crop of 1900. Nor were all the agricultural sections of the country treated so badly as was the Northwest, for wheat was harvested in perfection and abundance south of New York, from the land of Pocahontas to where the alfalfa and sunflowers grow west of the Mississippi, covering probably an area of [illegible] miles in width by 1,200 miles in [illegible] the eastern section of this [illegible] and Philadelphia have had [illegible] Kansas, in the extreme Western part of this belt or country, grew an immense crop of choice quality. From her overflowing garners wheat not only found its way into almost every important milling centre of the States, but has furnished the bulk of the wheat exports since harvest. This prairie State is the bright and shining star in the agricultural firmament of 1900.

Competition from other countries that have surplus wheat for export influences values in America. Just now Argentina is held up as a bear card, but from all we can learn, the exporting surplus from that country will be 20,000,000 bushels less this year and the quality of the wheat inferior to that of the old crop.

We may possibly have forgotten that in June last, on the 25th day of that month, December contract wheat in New York sold at 93¾ cents, owing to unfavorable crop reports. Since that time December wheat has sold as low as 70 cents. With the completion of harvest, possibly some of the conditions affecting values prior to June may have become somewhat modified, but still there remains evidence of the injury done. Speculation in wheat is almost nil at the present time, but should it become a feature later, notwithstanding whatever may be the outlook for the crop of 1901, prices will materially advance.

The Winter wheat now in the ground is reported in excellent condition, without material change of acreage, but it needs a blanket of snow to protect it. As wheat grown in the Dakotas, Minnesota, and Manitoba is planted in the Spring, nothing can yet be said of it.

Considering the mishaps that befel the wheat crop of 1900, a bountiful harvest is due in 1901. This mode of reasoning is not altogether infallible, however, but if the fine Winter thus far experienced is any precursor of the weather that is to come, we may be sure that 1901 will be a year of plenty.

By Frederick Hobart,

Editor of The Engineering and Mining Journal.

In the year just closed the mines of the United States produced metals, other than iron and steel, of a total value of $255,000,000, in round figures. Of this total gold furnished $76,000,000, silver $35,000,000, copper $105,000,000, lead $21,000,000, and zinc $10,000,000, the remaining $8,000,000 being made up by the minor metals, such as quicksilver, aluminium, antimony, nickel, and others.

This statement applies only to metals produced from ores mined in the United States, and does not measura the output of our metallurgical works. The value of the metals smelted and refined by them from foreign ores, mattes, and bullion reached a further total of $81,000,000, of which $31,000,000 was gold, $26,000,000 silver, $8,000,000 lead, $10,000,000 copper, and the remsinder nickel and the minor metals. These ores came from Mexico chiefly, but also from Cansda, Chile, Australasia, and even Japan.

To begin with the precious metals, our production of gold reached a total of $76,000,000, or $5,900,000 more than in 1899. A very considerable part of this gain was from Alaska. The production of that Territory ran up last year to at least $7,500,000, the Nome district furnishing some $2,500,000—far less than was anticipated—while the American Yukon yielded $1,500,000 more. The leading gold producer was Colorado, which increased its output by fully $3,000,000, to a total of $29,500,000. The mines of Cripple Creek and Leadville supplied much of the increase, but there was a gain in nearly all the gold mining districts of the State. California showed an increase, to $15,500,000, while Utah, Arizona, and South Dakota all furnish favorable returns. Montana, Idaho, and Washington, in the North, held their own, while Oregon made a considerable gain. The gold miner everywhere has prospered.

Silver production, on the other hand, showed a slight decrease, the total in 1900 being 55,500,000 ounces, or 1,600,000 ounces less than in 1899. The decrease was due to a smaller production from the dry ores of Montana and Idaho, and a diminished output from the Butte mines, where silver is obtained in connection with copper. There was an increase from the silver-lead mines of Idaho and Colorado. The returns obtained by the miners were larger than for several years, however, the average price of silver having advanced, owing chiefly to the strong demand for the metal from the East.

With our own production and the silver which our smelters refine from foreign ores the United States now practically controls the silver markets of the world. Last year 85 per cent. of all the silver which passed through the London market was sent from New York, and the exports from San Francisco direct to the East reached a very large total. Practically all of the great quantity of silver which goes to India and China passes through American hands, with the exception of the silver from the Broken Hill mines in Australia, most of which goes to China direct.

It is in copper that the United States leads the world, and this fact is now generally recognized. The copper market is practically controlled by American dealers, and the fluctuations of the London market, which were once all important, are now of small account to our producers. The United States produces three-fifths of the copper supply of the world, and is the country from which the main part of any future increase is expected. The year just closed has been one of strong demand and high prices throughout. The activity in shipbuilding and in the manufacture of war material, and, above all, the great extension of electrical work here and in Europe, aided in enlarging the consumption of copper to a point where it was difficult for producers to meet the demands upon them.

The production of copper in the United States in 1900 was 270,639 long tons (of 2,240 pounds) in metallic form, to which must be added 4,900 tons for copper used in the manufacture of copper sulphate, making a total of 274,939 tons. In 1899 the total was 250,517 tons, so that the increase last year was 15,422 tons, or about 6 per cent. For fully ten years past the average, or normal, increase has been about 8 per cent. a year, so that the small gain is a little disappointing. It may be, however, easily accounted for. In 1899 nearly all the old mines were worked "for all they were worth." Very few of the new mines started on the boom in copper are yet producers. Some of them, of course, never will be, but even where the properties are valuable, it takes two years to make a copper mine. The opening year will probably see a much greater gain in production.

The copper mines of the Lake Superior region last year fully maintained their production, and those of Arizona increased it. The great mines of the Butte district, in Montana, however, showed some falling off. The complicated litigation in which some of the leading mines are involved has prevented proper development work, while in some of the older mines the ore is undoubtedly growing poorer as greater depth is attained. Unfortunately, some of the chief mines of Butte have fallen under the control of managers who believe that their interests are best served by withholding information, and far less is known publicly about the condition of those mines than should be the case.

We not only lead the world in the production of copper, but in copper metallurgy. Our refiners are able to do better and cheaper work than any others. During the past two years there have been several consignments of Chile bars sent here from London to be refined. The latest proof has been found in the closing of a contract by which all the copper from the noted Mount Lyell Mines, in Tasmania, is sent here as blister copper, to be converted into electrolytic or refined copper. The ownership of the Mount Lyell is entirely British, but could not help recognizing the better terms which our people were able to offer. Nearly all the copper produced in Mexico is also refined in this country.

Our lead production in 1900 was 230,000 tons, or 15,000 tons more than in 1899. The restoration of law and order in the Coeur d'Alenes permitted the active working of the great silver-lead mines of that region, while the mines of Montana and Colorado did their full share, and the soft lead region of Southeastern Missouri made substantial progress. Besides treating our own ores, our smelters refined some 80,000 tons from Mexican and Canadian ores and base bullion. Practically all of this imported material was refined here in bond and re-exported.

The production of zinc, which ran up to 129,675 tons in 1899, dropped back to 115,253 tons in 1900. It is the only metallic production which showed a serious decrease, and the reason is not hard to find. The large output of 1899 outran the consumption and left stocks on hand so great that the smelters were alarmed, and many of them closed down in part for several months of the year. The reduced production restored the equilibrium, especially as we exported last year about 24,000 tons of zinc to Europe. There has been disappointment, however, among the New England investors, who, in the boom of 1899, bought the stock of Joplin Zinc Companies capitalized at from five to twenty times their real value.

The report on tin continues unchanged. No tin is mined in the United States. Some discoveries reported in Colorado turned out on examination to be wolfram ore. An attempt has been made to start another excitement in the Black Hills, in South Dakota, but there is reason to believe that it has no more foundation than the notorious Harvey Peak affair of some years ago. Nothing more has been heard of the [illegible] notorious Temescal Mine, in California.

The year 1900 showed a strong demand for quicksilver all over the world, in part from the extension of gold mining operations where quicksilver is used for amalgamating the precious metal, and in part for industrial uses. The old mines of Spain and Austria failed to respond to the demand, but the United States showed an increase. The production is measured in flasks of seventy-six and a half pounds each, and the total in 1900 was 31,316 flasks, of which 30,365 came from the California mines, and 950 from the new mines of Marfa, in Presidio County, Texas.

The quantity of aluminium produced last year in the United States was 7,150,000 pounds, or only 650,000 pounds more than in 1899. The metal is turned out by a single producer, the Pittsburg Reduction Company, from its works at Niagara Falls. The high price of copper during the past two years offered an opportunity for the substitution of aluminium in electrical work, of which the makers have not taken advantage. Aluminium can now be made at a price which, allowing for the comparative bulk of equal weights of the two metals, makes it actually cheaper than copper; but the supply has been too limited to permit any extended use of the metal in this direction.

The production of nickel from ores mined in the United States was very small, amounting only to 18,500 pounds. There was, however, an output of about 8,000,000 pounds of nickel—nearly the same as in 1899—from ores and matte brought from the Sudbury district of Ontario and refined in our works. Our Canadian neighbors are very jealous of this disposition of their raw material, and have threatened various measures to compel the removal of the refining works to Canadian soil, including the imposition of an export duty on the ores. Diligent prospecting has failed to find any nickel mines in the United States which will pay to work.

In addition to the more important metals referred to above, there are some minor metallic products which have an appreciable value, though their quantity is not sufficient to make them of commercial importance. Thus, of the semi-precious metals there were recovered last year 172 ounces of platinum and 8 ounces of iridium, both found in connection with gold in Shasta and Trinity Counties, in California. For several years past the demand for platinum has exceeded the supply, which comes from Russia and from Colombia, and the metal is now nearly as costly as gold. It is interesting to note that there is a prospect of new and abundant supplies from Alaska and the Canadian Yukon.

In the other minor metals there were included last year 2,250,000 pounds of antimony, from ores found chiefly in California, Idaho, and Utah; 45,000 pounds of tungsten and 32,000 pounds of molybdenum, both used in steel making and obtained as by-products in mining other ores in Colorado and Arizona, and 11,200 pounds of cobalt, which is marketed as cobalt oxide. Some of these industries, notably the production of tungsten and molybdenum, are capable of great expansion, should other uses be found for the metals, which is altogether possible.

FREDERICK HOBART.

Coal Trade Prospects.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES

by F. E. Saward,

Editor of The Coal Trade Journal.

A review of the coal trade of the United States for the year 1900 shows concentration of interests which have been more pronounced than in many years preceding. The process may be said to have been going on for quite a time in the anthracite branch, for surely the parties so largely in control have not been idle since the year of the failure of the so-called "combine" of 1892. The capitalized interests are of such vast amount that it is found necessary to be at all times on the alert and to assume the offensive, if necessary, to prevent the invasion of their vested interests. The past year has been one of the most momentous in the history of this important industry; there has been much of interest in the coal business, the tonnage and values have been above those of the preceding year, and an important feature is the growth of the export trade, for our coal has gone to many places during the past season where it was new to the recipient, and it has had an effect upon the coal trade of the world beyond compare so far as the mere tonnage is to be reckoned.

In the anthracite trade the shipments have been about 2,000,000 tons short of the quantity sent forward during 1899, when the total was 47,665,201 gross tons, but even with this loss we have made a new record of monthly tonnages, as the following schedule of the largest months will show:

Month and Years.	Long Tons.	Month and Years.	Long Tons.
January, 1900.	4,445,000	July, 1899.	4,170,900
Febr'y, 1892.	3,216,973	August, 1900.	4,919,000
March, 1900.	4,136,000	Sept'ber, 1899.	4,365,649
April, 1894.	3,284,659	October, 1897.	5,120,893
June, 1894.	5,112,359	Dec'ber, 1900.	5,000,000

There would have been other records broken had it not been for the idleness at the mines which lasted from Sept. 17 to Oct. 20; but while this apparently caused a loss of tonnage, yet the general effect thereof was good. The anthracite coal business will show considerably better profit to those concerned than it has for many years preceding, even if the tonnage is not so great. Perhaps it was largely due to this latter fact that the first was achieved. The tonnage forwarded from the mines was held pretty well in hand after the first quarter of the year, which showed an increase over the quantity for a similar period for any other year; during the third quarter, anticipating the idleness at the mines, there was a large tonnage done, and this was a fortunate circumstance, as the idleness was of much longer duration than had been expected would be the case, and in consequence there was an elimination of about 5,000,000 tons from the usual product of the period under consideration. This quantity was not regained, in spite of the great activity which occurred after the resumption of work, although the shortage was reduced to some 2,000,000 tons as above stated.

The course of prices was an upward one throughout the year, and this is best shown by a schedule of the rates obtained at the New York Harbor loading ports. The main feature is the slow, gradual advancement after early months; the fact that chestnut is right alongside of stove, and the increased price of the small sizes, thus bringing up the average net result to very much better figures on the coal as a whole.

Broken	$3.21	$3.20	$3.20	$3.45
Egg	3.59	3.36	3.45	3.75
Stove	3.99	3.66	3.70	4.40
Chestnut	3.99	3.69	3.70	4.40
Pea	2.46	2.37	2.25	2.40
Buckwheat	1.89	1.80	1.84	2.00

During the "strike" period there were quotations of $5 and $6 per ton for the various sizes of anthracite at wholesale in New York on coal held by speculators; this was during what might be called the acute period, when no coal was being mined. But even at the end of the year the best grades of stove coal commanded $4.50 per ton, tree on board, for prompt delivery, so that the year closed in very much better shape, so far as demand and supply and prices realized are concerned, than did many of its more recent predecessors.

An important feature in connection with the anthracite industry is the gradual elimination of the individual operator; this has been going on more extensively during the last year or so than ever before. With the formation of the Temple Iron Company in 1899, much of the strongest individual element was taken up, and with purchases or leases by the Ontario and Western and the Delaware and Hudson during 1900, there were more of these "put out of the way." This, however, did not decrease the activity of these interests, for there was a project to build a new line to tidewater with the help of the Pennsylvania Coal Company, which it was hoped would have given the individual a less rate of toll, and therefore a better net price at the mines; but upon the purchase of the interests of that company by the Erie, this last effort was abandoned.

The remaining independent operators are to enter into a contract with the coal-carrying roads to take charge of their coal, for which they agree to pay 65 per cent. of the selling price at tidewater. Advances of 5 per cent. will be made on pea and buckwheat. This will bring the rate up to 45 per cent. for pea and 37 per cent. for buckwheat. This advance will be offset, so far as the companies are concerned, by a generally better rate obtained for the coal at tidewater, resulting, no doubt, in a more remunerative toll than prevailed heretofore on the individual coal.

One may well consider the advantage all this concentration will mean to the coal carriers, such as the Erie, Ontario and Western, Philadelphia and Reading, Lehigh Valley, Central Railroad of New Jersey, and others. There will, no doubt, be more uniformity of values; more equitable distribution of the supply over the several months of the year, an adjustment by which the buyer who purchases in the Spring will be protected by gradually rising prices, so that he has no cause to repent in the Fall, as he did in 1898 or 1899, and might have in 1900 had it not been for the "strike"; there will be a fair price for anthracite in order not to check its use and distribution, but the earnings of mine-carrying companies will be much increased.

The soft coal trade of our country amounts to 190,000,000 net tons annually, and from its varied uses and ramifications this important branch of the industry is worthy of consideration. The State of Pennsylvania alone produces 75,000,000 tons a year, with West Virginia and Illinois second and third at about 24,000,000 tons each; the yearly receipts at the Atlantic Coast amount to 20,000,000 tons of soft coal annually.

There has also been a concentration of interests in the soft coal carrying roads, working between the mines in Pennsylvania and West Virginia and tidewater, and rates received have been more evenly maintained and there is no longer the complaint in the trade that this or that concern is cutting prices in order to effect sales. The rates of freight will be increased next Spring on any soft coal to tidewater by the carrying companies, and this will add to their earnings. The rate there will be $1.25 per net ton from mines in West Virginia to Hampton Roads, while the Baltimore and Ohio gets $1.18 from Maryland to Baltimore, and the Pennsylvania gets $1.10 to Philadelphia.

An important feature of this trade is the possible demand for higher wages at the convention of miners and operators to be held in the latter part of January. It would seem that the market conditions do not warrant any such action, for prices are not what they were a year ago, when the ruling rates to be paid for mining were made.

We use 30,000,000 tons of coal to make coke, and this yields 18,000,000 tons. The principal source of supply is Pennsylvania. There are hopes for a margin of higher prices, though not so good as at the opening of last year. In the Connelsville district there is reported a total of 20,960 ovens, of which 15,517 are in blast and 5,442 are idle. The total estimated production of the region for a week is 165,000 tons. The average running time of the region is better than it has been for months, about half the works working six days a week.

The trade in soft coal abroad is growing at a very fair pace to all parts of the world. The shipments do not rival those of Great Britain to Continental ports, but they are increasing to the West Indies, to Mexico, to South America, and to some parts of Europe. In ten months last year the exports—including Canada—amounted to 5,170,000 tons of soft coal, as against 220,000 tons in 1880. Our coal sells at an average of $2.50, free on board at Atlantic Coast ports, while last quotations of best Cardiff are $4.50 to $4.80. It is largely a matter of freights, if we do an increased trade to European ports.

It is recognized that in order to make a permanent market for American coal in peninsular Europe—and it is in the peninsular countries, from France to Turkey, that the most assured market is offered—American producers must equip themselves with docks, vessels, banking connections, and all the other facilities that will enable them to handle the coal direct from mine to consumer. It is thought that European agents will not, from the relations they have with their own countrymen, and through reciprocity of business, push American coals to the detriment of the producing syndicates there. American tonnage would, therefore, be minimized as compared with what it might, with American energy and methods, attain. Moreover, it is felt that by having their own docks, agents, &c., any price that the European producers might establish will but yield the higher profit for American producers, and therefore justify larger enterprises than it would be prudent to undertake with selling agencies established through those agencies that have been and are now handling coal from European countries.

F. E. SAWARD.

UNFAVORABLE MILLING YEAR.

Short Wheat Crops in the Northwest Made Flour Milling Unprofitable —Conditions That Operate Against Exports.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 5.—Short crops in the great Spring wheat belt in the Northwestern States, the tremendous yield in Kansas, with the resulting aggressive competition between those sections; ravages of the Hessian fly in Michigan, Indiana, and Ohio; unsatisfactory traffic rates, and a small export trade all served to lower the flour millers' profits in 1900, until complaints are made that no year in the past two decades has been less bountsous. Still, flour men have been favored by better conditions since the close of the crop season, Sept. 1, and the calendar year of 1900 closed without appreciable deficits.

Many difficulties beset the millers in Minneapolis, Duluth, and Superior, handling the crop of Minnesota and the Dakotas. When it should have rained to insure an open germination of seed, prolonged drought set in, and when dry weather would have favored the maturing wheat, there were excessive rains, and the wheat crop in that northwestern section was short some 75,000,000 bushels. This shortage was most severely felt in the hard-wheat territory of Minnesota and North Dakota, along the Red River Valley, though the unseasonable weather also reduced the yield in Southern Minnesota and South Dakota. As a result, many mills in the Northwest were short of wheat, and little or nothing was attempted outside of home trade.

Kansas enjoyed one of those bounteous years which come to that State spasmodically. The wheat was of the best quality. It took well on the markets. Its flour sold rapidly. Every mill in the State was pressed into use, and so profitable was the season that the end of the calendar year finds every one of them with the best possible equipment.

With the Northwest's yield 75,000,000 bushels under the normal, the supply for the mills in that section was curtailed, the demand became great, and prices advanced to a point relatively very high. When the flour was pushed on the market it was impossible to ask a price that would leave a comfortable profit. Millstuffs commanding a high price did much to help the millers in the Northwest. While offal brought the miller a margin, this was in most cases absorbed by selling flour at a relatively lower figure. On the whole, a slight balance was left on the right side of the ledgers; but to secure this the strictest economy and closest attention to details were needed.

Since the close of the crop season, Sept. 1, conditions have somewhat improved for millers in the Northwest. The high quality of the Kansas product resulted in its ready sale, and to-day little of the raw material is obtainable, which makes it more favorable for millers to the north.

Minneapolis's flour output for 1900 was 15,010,725 barrels, against 14,291,780 for 1899; her export shipments were 4,052,205, against 4,009,135 for 1899.

Conditions were unfavorable to a prosperous year for the millers at Superior and Duluth. The flour production was below the normal. There was a consolidation of companies, which curtailed the production; but it is probable that had the local mills been free to run, their supply would not have admitted of a large output, because of the short crop in the Northwestern States. The expansion in the grain elevator capacity was a noticeable feature of the year at Duluth and Superior, the greatest addition being made by Peavy of Minneapolis, who built at Duluth the largest concrete elevator in the world. Others will build during the coming year.

Milwaukee has been doing much in milling during the past year, and correspondents there report that when the figures for the flour production of the country for 1900 are compiled the output, which was some 1,900,000 barrels, will show her as next to the largest producer of flour in the world. Conditions there were favorable, and the outlook is bright.

Michigan met with a second crop failure. In 1899 there was a good reserve to draw from. In 1900 there was none. As a result many mills were forced to shut down, and many others operated only a part of the time. But there has been a steady increase in the demand for soft wheat, which offsets the failure of the Michigan millers to secure raw material in hard. The successive failures of crops, caused in large part by the Hessian fly, have caused the acreage to be reduced and largely taken up for sugar beets and rye. The outlook for the flour industry in that State is not bright.

Millers at Buffalo report that the business of the past year has been unsatisfactory and unprofitable. One reason assigned is the competition of such Northwestern mills as have warehouses in Buffalo and are able to meet the New England trade as well as the Buffalo flour men. Practically no export business was done during 1900 from Buffalo.

In the extreme Northwest, Washington and Oregon millers were very successful during 1900. Local trade increased, and a new field was opened in Alaska. With the exception of a slight falling off in exports to China, the foreign trade from Tacoma has been good. American wheat is becoming better known abroad, especially in the Far East, and the market is gradually growing. Flour exports from Puget Sound amounted in 1900 to about 1,200,000 barrels. This was an increase of about 100 per cent. over exports of the previous year.

Small profits are reported from the Valley of the Ohio. The 1900 crop was poor, and Kentucky, of the States in that section, was able to tide over the year because of an abundant crop in the previous year. Indiana and Ohio, having small crops in 1899 and in 1900, were compelled to go into Missouri and Southern Illinois for raw material, making the millers' condition in those States poor. Tennessee, having a light crop in 1899 and 1900, was compelled to draw from the West, making an unprofitable year.

Oklahoma had a prosperous year, with an abundant crop of excellent quality. Railroad facilities are becoming more adequate every year, and there are few towns of any considerable size that do not have grain elevators and mills. The condition of the Oklahoma miller is becoming better every year. During 1900 there was an appreciable increase in foreign shipments.

The export trade has, on the whole, been less satisfactory than the millers had anticipated at the opening of the year. This is said to have resulted in part from a discrimination in freight rates, which favored wheat as against flour. In this foreign millers were aided. They were supplied with raw material at a rate that made it possible for them to compete successfully in markets that otherwise would have been doubtful. The Northwestern Miller, the foremost publication of the flour industry in the United States, discussing this problem, states its conviction that because of its lack of equity, this condition cannot endure. "Looking into the future," says The Miller, "with a full knowledge of the power of the American miller, it does not seem too much to expect the exports of wheat gradually to decrease and those of flour proportionately to increase, until no American wheat is ground in foreign mills."

Our Dry Goods Market.

Mistakes of Manufacturers and Merchants that Point to Needed Reforms in the New Century.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES

By S. H. Ditchett,

Managing Editor Dry Goods Economist.

Nineteen hundred has by no means been a year of unalloyed prosperity to the dry goods trade. Forces both within and from without have contributed to the result. Those of the former character could have been controlled by manufacturers and distributors, and it is highly desirable that the lessons which the year's development have inculcated be applied to future effort, with a view to avoiding a repetition of the untoward conditions which a thoughtless follow-my-leader policy has called into existence.

Inability to properly market his merchandise often causes the producer to dispose of his goods at figures which do not bring an adequate return for his outlay of time, money, and effort. Result—lower prices, not only for himself, but for his competitors, since the sale of a few pieces may affect values generally. Inability to gauge fashion tendencies causes the production of merchandise for which no active demand exists, followed again by injury to the market. In addition, machinery is unduly concentrated on a few salient kinds of fabrics. If a class of goods is brought out that "takes," about every manufacturer, large and small, puts his looms on it. In many cases the popularity of the material incites the thoughtless producer to increase his machinery. An oversupply quickly ensues, and again the value of the entire produce is decreased. Then an additional turn of the screw is given. The unscrupulous manufacturer must meet the market and yet make a profit. He lessens the value of his product, making it by some means look as good as the genuine. Thus the article loses its reputation, and in some cases falls so low from its originally high estate as to become a drug.

Originality and diversification, and, if necessary, restriction of product, guided by careful study of the demand, are the cure for these evils. To-day no manufacturer will stop his looms, even though he knows his product is declining in price, and that every piece he turns out further tends to break the market. He "has got to run," even at a loss.

Another feature—the wild-cat manufacturer. This is the weaver, blessed with enterprise, but devoid of experience, who rents a small factory, obtains a stock of raw material on credit, puts in a few looms—also on credit—and proceeds to turn out goods. Very soon he is hard up. He is compelled to market his product at any price, in order to pay rent and wages. Another blow to the already overstrained, ill-treated market.

The way to overcome these difficulties is to borrow some ideas from our European friends and competitors. We need co-operation, as well as rivalry. We need dissemination of the information on which all can act. We need to sustain prices, rather than to continually hammer them. No trust or combination is necessary or advocated, but the adoption of saner, broader, more businesslike, more manlike methods.

This policy should be further extended to the handling of raw material, since wide fluctuations in price are extremely detrimental to manufacturing profits. Manufacturers should do what they can to prevent the cornering of supplies or the letting loose of large stocks at one time.

All the dangerous and unsatisfactory conditions above outlined have been only too conspicuous in the silk industry during the latter part of the year, with the result that sensational articles have appeared in certain quarters, claiming that silk manufacture in the United States is "on its last legs," that "the bottom has fallen out of it," &c. And this at a time when the high price of raw cotton has given an additional opportunity to silk by bringing the cost of cotton fabrics nearer to those of the richer material, as well as lessening the supply of the former.

The cotton goods industry has profited by this latter condition. The manufacturers in that branch have shown a commendable conservatism and level-headedness. They have recognized the fact that higher cost means lessened consumption, and have done all in their power to keep values "where they belong." Like the English spinners, they have held aloof from speculation in raw material and have assisted in preventing its reaching an artificial level. Thus, although the exportation of cotton cloths to China has been almost wholly suspended, the industry, thanks to the assistance of exceptional raw material conditions, is in a very healthy state.

The women's dress goods industry has suffered from the continued favor shown by fashion to plain materials, as well as by the cheapness of silks. Nor is there any prospect of an early return to the use of figured fabrics and other "fancy" weaves which by their variety and novelty tend to increase demand.

Before touching upon other lines of merchandise, let us briefly glance at the retail business of the year. Here, too, we shall find something still has to be learned. With all his enterprise, the American dry goods retailer is largely lacking in originality. His favorite card seems to be to note what his competitor does and go him one better. The result is a constant forcing process. The opening of seasons becomes earlier and earlier every year. The effect is not so ill, under favorable circumstances, but when, as was the case this Fall, climatic conditions are against the forcing process, the results are apt to be disastrous. Fortunately, merchants had only recently received a severe lesson. In the busy times of 1899 they had been led by the pushing, hustling wholesaler and his road men to load up with unduly large quantities of merchandise. These were mostly worked off when the Fall buying time came around again, and the retail trade bought at that time with a sparingness which really marks a new era in American commercial methods. Hence stocks were small, and, though sales were lost, accumulations were not sufficiently great to be dangerous.

But the business done this Fall has emphasized the need of more careful study of and adaptation to the weather conditions of the present day. The opening of Winter goods, instead of being made in September, should be deferred to the beginning of December, and instead of bringing forward heavy fabrics and garments, the merchant should concentrate his efforts on those which are suited to the pleasant, mild days characteristic of the Fall in most sections of the United States at the present time. Manufacturers of cloaks, suits, waists, and garments, who co-operate with the retailer in this direction, will find the losses which ten frequently result from this attempt to "rush the season" transformed into profits. Furthermore, there should be a lessened production of very heavy garments, except in the case of outer wraps. The average dwelling, office, theatre, or church of to-day is heated, even in the coldest days of Winter, to nearly Summer temperature. Except for certain classes of our population, there is no need for massive woolen underwear, thick skirts, and heavy waists. The body should be protected out-of-doors by warmth-creating coats and other wraps. The medium-weight articles which should replace those described would find a market during the greater portion of the year; stocks would be lessened, and the profit-destroyed clearance sale would be largely eliminated.

The failure to take advantage of the opportunities offered during the Fall season through the vain efforts to create trade on Winter goods has been greatly offset by the remarkably lavish celebration of the Christmas season. Never was there such present giving, so much buying, so great throngs in the stores. From every section of this broad and prosperous land comes the same tale, and, for the retailer, the last year of the century passes out in a blaze of glory.

In certain lines of dry goods the year has proved an exceptionally profitable one. All kinds of laces and embroideries have experienced a phenomenal demand. Fads—those producers of business at good prices—have been rife, and never has woman's costume been so rich, so ornate, so diversified. So far as actual requirement of merchandise by the consumer is concerned, and putting errors in production and their ill-effects on one side, no line of dry goods has been unfortunate, with the single exception of ribbons. These beautiful accessories of dress and millinery—apart from velvet and gold ribbons—have been hardly used by fashion, to the consequent injury of their manufacturers. But even here the clouds seem to be lifting, and there is reason to hope that the first season of the twentieth century has much better things in store for this important but particularly risky branch of the silk industry.

As to that industry as a whole, let it be said emphatically that it offers us ground for pessimism. It will emerge from its present shadows stronger than ever. The men who have beaten the old-established European manufacturers at their own game will find a way out of their difficulties and will place on a firmer basis this bright jewel in America's crown of manufacturing effort. A condition which strongly favors any work in this direction is the growing popularity of velvets. Already accepted by the highest society of the United States, this royal fabric is destined to prove one of the most profitable and widely used materials in 1901.

The outlook for the entire trade is bright with promise. It only needs the tempering of the abullient energy of American producers and distributers with the intelligence and discretion which have been brought to a finer point in the Old World to make the opening year of the new century an epoch-making one in this great progressive branch of industry and commerce. The increased provision for technical and commercial education which has formed so gratifying and important a feature of the last few years is a further earnest of the strides which the American textile manufacturer will make in the near future. Export trade, too, will receive greater and greater attention, until our country shall become as great in supplying the world dry goods as it now is in the field of iron and steel manufactures.

Conditions and Outlook in Various Industries.

Shoe and Leather Trade.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES
By Frederick F. Purdy,
Editor of The Shoe and Leather Reporter.

The movement in shoes and leather during the past year has been generally satisfactory in volume, notwithstanding the dullness of several months of the year. The advance in prices last Winter culminated in January. Values had been steadily rising, and while the advance was closely contested, buyers of shoes gradually succumbed and eventually began to anticipate their wants, believing that a greater and a more extended appreciation was to ensue than really took place. Consequently, the heavy stocks of shoes which were purchased for last Winter's sale acted as a drag on the market for many months during the early part of 1900. Dealers, furthermore, carried over extensive stocks of rubbers, which, owing to the mild weather, were unsalable. Between both of these discouraging conditions, the distributors of shoes were not at all disposed to place orders for shoes beyond their immediate needs at the approach of the Summer season. Trade halted and dragged while dealers gradually worked off their surplus stocks. Orders were given nearer to actual requirements than ever before in the history of the trade, for every one was tired of having so much surplus capital tied up in stocks of goods on the shelves. A general spirit of conservatism prevailed throughout the entire trade. Tanners curtailed their production of leather to a considerable degree, partly from choice and partly from necessity, owing to the restricted supplies of hides and skins, the tanners of glazed kid decreasing their production during the Summer fully 50 per cent.

With the approach of Autumn a revival of trade was apparent, notwithstanding the progress of a political campaign, the effect of which on the shoe trade is generally overestimated. Retailers of shoes throughout the country had worked down their stocks to manageable proportions and were prepared to place orders for shoes for Fall and Winter. The effect upon the jobbing trade was instantaneous, and while there was no disposition to repeat the experience of the previous year, the regular business of anticipating the season's requirements to a certain extent was sufficient to insure a good volume of trade. The curtailment in production of various kinds of leather began to have its effect, prices gradually rose, and stocks of most kinds were at a minimum, the receipts being absorbed as soon as they were delivered at the warehouses.

The shoe factories at present are actively running on orders, with perhaps work enough in hand, on the average, to last them a couple of months. Prices of leather are steady, though the trade at the holiday season is not as active as it will be in a few days, when shoe manufacturers start up their factories after their shut-down for inventory and begin to more fully acquaint themselves with their needs of various kinds of material.

The shipments of shoes from Boston for the year showed a decrease of nearly 500,000 cases, which demonstrates the extent of the over-stock with which dealers loaded themselves last year. With that experience fresh in their minds, there is little danger of a repetition of it, and a steady, healthful business is in progress and a general feeling of confidence and cheerfulness pervades the entire trade.

The general conservatism throughout the shoe and leather trade is illustrated by the weakness in prices of hides. Under inflated and rising prices of shoes and leather, hides are stimulated to such an extent that tanners who buy them are frequent losers when they sell the leather tanned from them at quotations current six months afterward, but with all branches of the trade operating as closely as possible to actual necessities and avoiding speculation, the prices of hides are finding a level more nearly equivalent to present values of shoes and leather.

The export trade is progressing steadily. There appears to be little further chance for expansion in our leather business abroad, but the shoe trade is moving forward to greater conquests in foreign lands. The past year has been marked by a large increase in exports of shoes, and our manufacturers are taking a greater degree of interest in this business than ever before. Hundreds of them are now exporters, where five years ago they could be counted by the dozen.

Savings Banks Conditions.

By James McMahon,
President of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank.

So far as I can see, business in this great and growing country of ours is in a healthy state. The recent election has secured us for several years to come stability in our currency based on the gold standard; our wonderful progress and superiority in manufacturing is exciting the admiration—and envy—of the older European States, and I look with confidence to a bright future.

My confidence in our continued prosperity is also based on the remarkably steady progress of our savings institutions. Founded as they were for the benevolent purpose of preventing pauperism by teaching and encouraging thrift and industry, they are doing an immense amount of good, and they have been particularly successful in our Empire State, where they stand a monument to the frugality, care, and industry of the people, the wisdom of our Legislature, and the practical altruism of the Trustees devoting their time and abilities to their success. Of the $2,400,000,000 representing the total savings in the savings banks of the United States, over $1,000,000,000 are in the banks of this State, on which the dividend declared on the 1st of January will amount to about $15,000,000 for the past six months. This dividend is earned by the depositors without care or exertion on their part, and practically at cost, as the only expenses of the savings banks are for rent, clerk hire, and office expenses, the Trustees giving their services gratuitously.

The rate of dividend at present is about 3½ per cent. per annum. Exceptionally a few of the older banks pay temporarily a little more, say 4 per cent., for special reasons, but 3½ per cent. is all that may be earned at the present period, if the banks desire to keep up their safety or surplus fund. The tendency of interest is by no means upward, but, on the contrary, downward for such first-class securities as our savings banks may invest in. There can be no doubt that safety is the first consideration in savings, and this must be ever present in the minds of those intrusted with their investments. The rate of interest, important as it is to the depositors, must necessarily remain the second consideration.

Loans on bond and mortgage for 50 per cent. of value	400,210,574
Stocks and bonds, (United States, States, municipal, and railroad)	502,265,621
Real estate	15,705,164
Loans on securities	4,892,701
Interest due and other assets	10,513,305
Total	$1,000,209,099

Where can a stronger and finer list of investments be found? These assets are due as follows: $887,480,650 is due to depositors; $808,150 for sundries, and $111,920,299 represents the surplus fund held for the security and benefit of depositors, making a total of $1,000,209,099.

I have no hesitancy in saying that the New York savings banks, with their present investments and surplus fund, are the strongest and safest financial institutions in the world. Long may they live and flourish, widening their usefulness and successfully carrying out the benevolent purposes to which they owe their existence.

The only cloud at present on the horizon is the constant endeavor of interested parties to influence the Legislature to unduly inflate the list of securities permitted to be invested in by savings banks, and also the occasional attempt to tax their assets. But I have confidence in the wisdom of our legislators, who, I am sure, will protect these useful and benevolent institutions from any attempts to weaken them or interfere with their growing usefulness. Our Savings Bank Association is ever watchful on behalf of the depositors, and we may rely on the efforts of our present excellent Superintendent of Banking to use his utmost endeavors to protect their interests before the Legislature.

JAMES McMAHON.

Progress in Electrical Industries.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES
By Thomas Commerford Martin,
Editor of The Electrical World and Engineer.

There have been perhaps more active years in electrical development than 1900—as in the great trolley boom—but none more prosperous, none in which enterprise has been so varied. Electrical industries in this country date only from the second quarter of the century, but the "securities" created in them during the period of sixty years represent not less than, and probably far above, $3,000,000,000. In electrical railways alone, the enumerated bonds, stocks, and funded debt reach close upon two billions of dollars, and the rate of growth on account of new roads and extensions is about $150,000,000 a year. During 1900, a new era began in the opening of a third-rail cross-country road between Albany and Hudson, at a cost of three or four millions. This is an innovation in dealing with rural transportation, and already is being extensively imitated as the present century begins. In the field of electric transportation must also be mentioned as a promising novelty the art of telpherage, or carrying freight, mail, &c., in small quantities along an aerial wire which feeds the current to the haulage motor traveling on it. Already such lines are being built here, and an inquiry has come from the Russian Government for twenty miles of it.

Electric lighting has been unusually active, the demands for current being largely increased from offices, mills, factories, &c., working overtime, and this in turn demanding more lamps, carbons, motors, and general supplies. The consolidation of local companies has gone on apace, the latest instance being Boston, where the Edison and Brush interests have competed for twenty years, but now go together logically, the properties representing $7,000,000 as they stand, but the stock selling at $240. A feature of the year has been the grouping of several scattered local companies under one central control, and this has been done also with trolley systems; while a further movement has begun which combines the electric light, gas, and trolley interests in any given section under one management. This may go far.

Great industrial advances in the year have been those connected with electro-chemistry, electro-metallurgy, and power transmission. Three-quarters of American produced copper is now extracted electrolytically—say 200,000 tons; and the quantity of aluminium, a metal now beginning to rival copper, has reached 2,500 tons here. Of such a new electrical production as carborundum, a substitute for emery, &c., the production is about 800 tons. One plant to make calcium carbide at Niagara is reputed to turn out 100 tons a day. In power transmission, the most notable stride has been in the establishment of the generating plants right at the coal pit's mouth. Such plants are increasing rapidly, Colorado and the Cripple Creek region particularly furnishing successful instances.

Telegraphy stands pretty much where it did, but is holding its own. A good deal of "wireless work" was done during the year, but in this country very little on a commercial basis, although the preliminary steps to exploitation have all been taken. American submarine cable makers have meantime done some of their heaviest work, and are now figuring on the Pacific cable. In telephony growth has been very fast, due largely to the stimulating effect of the "independent" competition, which has already run up a list of 5,000 exchanges, or twice as many as the Bell, though few of the later comers can compete with the pioneers as to solid investment and excellent equipment. The investment values in telephony, now reaching between $300,000,- 000 and $400,000,000, are expected to double within the next five years. Throughout the country the tendency in 1900 was to abandon the flat rate subscription for a measured service basis.

Automobilism is a progressive new branch of electricity, but is reaching perfection slowly. As an industry it advanced very well in 1900, but financially it met with one or two setbacks, due to rash speculation or over-capitalization. But the investment in the art is steadily going on, as witness the million-dollar plant just getting into operation in this city on Eighth Avenue and Forty-ninth Street—a wonderful example of ingenuity, courage, and persistence, and without any kind of a rival anywhere in the world.

Most satisfactory to electrical people has been the remarkable growth of export trade in 1900. It began some years ago with telegraph supplies, and a few arc lamps, but it now covers every conceivable electrical appliance, and is running up into millions and millions. England and her colonies were most generous in 1900 of their appreciation for our electrical engineers and manufactures alike, importing men and material in large quantities.

For the future—the aim and the desire are to get greater economy out of existing plants, to give cheaper service with key, telephone, motor, and lamp, to get light without heat, and electrical energy direct from the combustible.

The Brewing Trade.

The continuation of what the brewing trade considers an exorbitant war tax, with the competition which it serves to aggravate, are factors that have combined to seriously affect the prosperity of the brewing industry, and have left little cause for satisfaction with the results of the year's business, although its volume showed a great increase. The aggregate sales of lager beer and ale in the United States and Territories during the internal revenue year ended June 30, 1900, amounted to 39,330,849 barrels, (31½ gallons,) a net increase, as compared with the preceding fiscal year, of 2,749,735 barrels. The sales of brewers in New York State for the revenue year to June 30, 1900, amounted to 9,923,108 barrels, and in New York City (Greater New York) the sales were 7,303,133 barrels. No account is taken in these figures of the large quantity of malt liquors imported from other States and from foreign countries that finds a market in New York City and State.

A popular idea prevails that the brewing business is highly remunerative. This was at one time true, very large amounts of money having been made by brewers. But the profits have by no means kept pace with the phenomenal growth of the industry. Nowadays, with the prevailing high price of labor, the increasing cost of materials, the extremely low price for which a barrel of beer is sold, and the tax levied by the Government, brewers' profits have been reduced to a minimum, in spite of the increasing demand for their product.

The exports of lager beer and ale from the United States to foreign countries showed continued increase during the past year, and there was also an increased demand abroad for American brewery apparatus and machinery. Japan, Mexico, Cuba, South Africa, and other countries have new breweries built from plans furnished by American architects and equipped with American appliances.

Important progress in the processes of brewing was recorded during the year, the result of co-operative effort on the part of the scientist, the technical expert, and the inventive mechanic. The improvements thus accomplished exercise a significant effect on the purity and wholesomeness of the brewers' product.

The flourishing state of the country's finances, commerce, and manufactures, insures a prosperous opening of the new century, and justifies the expectation that, in spite of Government taxation, the brewers will reap their share of benefit from these fortunate conditions.

A. E. J. TOVEY,

Tobacco Trade Flourishes.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES
By John Bain, Jr.,

Publisher of The New York Tobacco Leaf.

To summarize the situation in the tobacco industry, the past year has been a fortunate one for the trade. An enormous business has been done, and failures have been singularly rare. Probably never before has the industry been in so solvent and flourishing a condition, and it is with the highest of expectations for a continuance of this that I cordially welcomed the new year.

Diversified, conflicting even, as are the interests of the industry, 1900 is generally deemed to have been a very satisfactory year. Its dawn was heralded as propitious and results have proved that the sanguine expectations even of the most optimistic were amply justified. The revenues which the Government derives from tobacco, in addition to the import taxation, are a fair measure of the prosperity of the trade. Since the passing of the War Revenue act it has yielded on an average something like $60,000,000 per annum.

The apportionment of this additional burden was satisfactorily arranged in the matter of manufactured tobacco through a readjustment of statutory packages, but in the main the cigar and cigarette makers had themselves to shoulder it. However, the bill which is now before Congress is expected to relieve cigar manufacturers of the extra 60 cents, reducing the tax to the old one of $3 per thousand. It is reported from Washington also that an effort will be made to secure a reduction on snuff and manufactured tobacco.

Enormous sums of money are profitably invested in the various branches of the tobacco industry and giant strides are being made in the more important of them.

In this respect cigars are by a long way in the lead. Government returns show that for the eleven months ended Nov. 30 there were turned out for home consumption no fewer than 5,067,575,712 cigars, an excess in production of 430,633,832 as compared with the full twelve months of the preceding year. In the same period all tobacco cigarettes were turned out to the number of 627,669,140, compared with 347,963,930 in 1899.

Against this great increase in home demand it may appear rather odd that there has been no appreciable increase in the cigar export trade. Special laws have been passed by Congress to encourage the industry, for goods so manufactured are not only free from internal taxation, but manufacturers are privileged to claim rebate on duties paid on the foreign leaf required in such manufacture. This, to the layman, is all the more striking, since in recent years exports of cigarettes and manufactured tobacco have greatly increased. The explanation is not far to seek; it lies in labor. While the hand-made clear Havana domestic cigar—that is, a cigar made wholly of Havana tobacco—may equal in every respect the genuine Cuban article, cost of production in the United States is much higher than in Cuba or in those other great cigar-producing countries, Porto Rico and the Philippines. Thus American manufacturers could hardly compete with the latter in the best markets of Europe. However, the army of cigar manufacturers is being swelled yearly, and in time the American-made cigar may be found taking its place abroad by the side of American-made tobacco and cigarettes.

In the eleven months ended Nov. 30, 1900, there were manufactured 2,394,101,038 paper cigarettes, as compared with 2,718,524,197 in 1899, which, allowing for an average production for December, shows a loss of some 300,000,000. This, however, while indicating a decrease in home consumption, does not necessarily mean a decline in the industry, which, so far as foreign demand is concerned, grows yearly. American interests have a very strong hold on the cigarette markets of the world, three of the largest concerns of the country practically controlling those of Australia, New Zealand, Japan, and the coast of China.

The condition of the manufactured tobacco industry is also highly satisfactory, the output of the year for home consumption being approximately 280,000,000 of pounds against 268,758,952 in 1899. The export trade likewise shows a great advance, the business done with Australia, South Africa, and the United Kingdom having in recent years reached enormous proportions.

Of manufactured tobacco products the only one that shows a serious decline is snuff. Last year the output reached nearly 17,750,000 pounds; this year it is approximately but 13,750,000. That consumption of this article should have so fallen off in one year is surprising, but it is quite possible that there may be some relationship between the decrease in this commodity and the big gains made by manufactured tobacco and by cheaper grades of cigars.

The activity shown throughout the year in the manufacturing branches was fully equaled by that of the leaf market. All grades of tobacco were in strong demand. Prices for domestic were uniformly high, but holders had little difficulty in finding buyers. All old stock is practically now in the hands of manufacturers or has gone into consumption, and the new crops are being eagerly awaited. Imports were heavy, especially of Sumatra, the total being 37,285 bales, against 23,147 in 1899. The outlook for this branch of the leaf business is bright, and even if reports just received from Amsterdam to the effect that the new crop will fall behind the average by 60,000 bales prove true, no serious shortage is anticipated here.

JOHN BAIN, JR.

Chicago's Business.

The year just closing has been one of great and general prosperity among merchants, jobbers, and manufacturers generally, and results, as a rule, are highly satisfactory.

Business pertaining strictly to the Board of Trade has perhaps not participated fully in the unexampled prosperity in other lines, and yet the net results are quite satisfactory. The total amount of grain, including flour, reduced to wheat, received in this market during the past year is, in round numbers, 348,000,000 bushels, as compared with 320,000,000 bushels in 1899. Corresponding shipments are 258,000,000 bushels, compared with 246,000,000 last year.

In spite of the fact that members have had to adapt themselves to numerous changes in the rules governing their daily transactions, the volume of general trading compares quite favorably with the preceding year, as shown by the reports of the Board of Trade Clearing House—daily balances for the year aggregating $61,500,000, against $58,300,000 in 1899, or an increase of about 5 per cent. These figures are certainly very reassuring in view of the fact that since Aug. 1 the public quotation service of our markets has been suspended in the effort to eradicate illegal bucket shop dealings. This evil had become so general as to not only threaten the very existence of the speculative grain markets, but to bring them into discredit and disrepute with the public generally, owing to the disreputable methods employed by the proprietors of these bucket shops, contrary to law in nearly every State, and to all good business ethics everywhere. That the plan which the Board of Trade is working on to throw off this incubus is feasible and practicable is completely demonstrated by the fact that every bucket shop in Chicago except one (which is temporarily protected by injunction) has been closed, so far as grain operations are concerned, by process of law, through the co-operation of the Cleveland Telegraph Company, which distributes the board's market quotations in Chicago. Similar results are attainable everywhere, else as soon as the telegraph companies meet the wishes of the Board of Trade with respect to certain contract stipulations for which the board is contending, and which are necessary to bring about desired results. So soon as this is attained we confidently anticipate a return of old-time activity and prosperity in the grain markets, as in this business above all others speculation is the life of trade, and without it stagnation is the inevitable result.

That the changes in the rules of the organization during the year have been wholesome and beneficial is evidenced by the fact that the value of memberships has increased during the year about 150 per cent. The value of this and similar organizations to the country at large in contributing to the economical distribution of the vast crops of this great country is more generally recognized, I think, than ever before, and as long as the membership continues to stand for a high standard of commercial ethics I predict an increasing degree of prosperity to the institution and usefulness to the public at large. Yours respectfully,

W. S. WARREN,
President Board of Trade.

ST. LOUIS.

Absence of any end of the year data will prevent my giving you any very authentic information.

With this in mind, will simply say that St. Louis has in the year 1900 had a very great measure of prosperity, and all the lines are reporting good business, probably the largest in every respect in her history. There has been no boom, nor has trade enjoyed the advances in merchandise that it experienced in 1899, yet we can safely say the end of the century closes with great satisfaction to our business community.

The Clearing House shows large increase in clearings, and all records have been broken in this direction. Our banks and trust companies have been well supplied with money, ample to take care of all of their customers; the demand last quarter has been good; the rates are a little higher than the balance of the year. No failures in banking circles, and an unusually small percentage of mercantile business difficulties have been observed.

The large volume of business done here has been most noticeable in transportation lines. It has been difficult for railroads to find cars sufficient to handle the volume forced upon them.

On the Merchants' Exchange, among the grain producers, there has been special activity. The territory tributary to St. Louis has been blessed with bountiful harvests, and the Winter wheat crops exceed any other for more than a decade.

More attention has been given to river transportation, and increased facilities in the way of a new barge line, with all modern appliances, will make this waterway a great factor in the future.

The output of tobacco will be something like 2,000,000 pounds in excess of any previous year, a total of 32,000,000 pounds up to July 1.

Our cotton receipts have fallen off somewhat, but this is wholly attributable to the fact that the territory tributary to St. Louis—Arkansas and Texas—happens to be the section which shows the greatest falling off in production.

The demand for army purposes from South Africa has brought a new market to the horse and mule trade of St. Louis and Missouri. Not only has the quantity handled been largely in excess of previous years, but at greatly improved prices as well.

Manufacturers in all lines have been full of orders, and largely increased outputs are reported in stoves and ranges, white lead and paints, boots and shoes, wagons and carriages, chemicals, furniture and all articles which St. Louis is supplying.

Aside from the street railway strike in the Spring, the city has experienced no serious labor trouble.

Some large real estate transactions have taken place, and many new buildings are under contract for erection in 1901. Real estate is firm and in demand. Tenements are reported as being rented up more fully than ever before in the history of the city, showing that there is actually need for further accommodations in this direction.

O. L. WHITELAW,
President Merchants' Exchange.
St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 5, 1901.

OMAHA.

Omaha made decided progress during the last twelve months toward becoming a jobbing market in all lines. Among the houses established was one composed of experienced men in the Western dry goods trade, with large capital and unlimited credit; a hat and cap house and a millinery house, of which the same statement can be made; four new agricultural implement houses, carrying large stocks, and several agricultural implement "transfer" houses were opened, assuring Omaha's position as the second largest distributing point in this line in the world.

In manufacturing, an agricultural implement factory, shoe factory, furnace works, shirt and overall factory, flour and cereal mill, sugar beet syrup factory, and glove and mitten factory were the most important established. A number of minor jobbing houses and smaller factories which promise well for the future also began operations. All Omaha industrial concerns, except the local plants of the American Smelting and Refining Company—formerly the Omaha and Grant Smelting Company, the largest producer of refined gold in the world—and the Linseed Oil Trust employed more men and had larger outputs than during any previous year, and did a highly profitable business.

Close and conservative estimates place the jobbing trade for the year at $62,500,000 and the value of the manufactured output, including smelter and packing-house products, at $110,000,000.

The bank clearings show the largest year's business ever transacted. The figures are: 1898, $317,000,000; 1899, $297,000,000; 1898, $319,000,000. The apparent discrepancy between the statement just made and the figures given is explained by the fact that in 1898 and previous years the immense stockyards and packing-house business of South Omaha went through the Omaha Clearing House. In the Spring of 1899, owing to daily balance interest differences between two of the Clearing House banks of Omaha and the banks at South Omaha, none of which belonged to the association, the larger part of this business was done direct for the balance of that year. During the past year all of the banks have made their exchanges direct, absolutely none going through the Clearing House. On this account comparisons between the clearing reports of this city and other stock-yard and packing-house markets are unfair to Omaha.

In the building of new warehouses, business blocks, public improvements of all kinds, and increased terminal and railway facilities the past year was active, and 1901 opens with the best prospects in the history of the city for her jobbing and manufacturing interests

Omaha, Neb., Jan. 5, 1901.

DULUTH.

Trade conditions at the port of Duluth during the season ending Dec. 31, 1900, have been exceedingly favorable—fully up to former years.

The most conspicuous feature is the growth of the lake commerce, which continues to expand to an extent which would be surprising at any other commercial centre of the age, size and other conditions considered. The number of arrivals and clearances have not been quite up to last year's figures, but the capacity and tonnage of vessels have largely increased in size. Thirty new steel ships of an average capacity of 6,500 tons each, capable of carrying next year, in addition to the present tonnage, over 4,000,000 tons and costing $7,500,000, are now being constructed at ports on the great lakes. Some of our larger steamers during the past year have carried cargoes of 7,600 gross tons of ore and coal, and have also carried cargoes of 250,000 bushels of wheat.

The Soo canals are the accurate measure of the trade and commerce of Lake Superior. The freight tonnage of these two canals during 1900 was 25,643,073 tons, as compared with 25,225,810 tons, in 1899, an increase of 2 per cent. The decrease in the number of vessel passages, however, was 4 per cent., due to the largely increased size of the vessels. The passenger travel through these canals (American and Canadian) for 1900 shows an increase of 19 per cent., being 58,555 passengers, as compared with 49,082 in 1899. A large majority of these passengers come to Duluth. The greatest increase in any commodity carried was in bituminous coal, being 28 per cent., and the increase in iron ore 7 per cent. Of this freight 92 per cent. went through the American canal.

Last year the American canal had a season of open navigation of 231 days and the Canadian canal 239 days. The east-bound freight tonnage amounted to 20,532,493 and the west-bound 5,119,054 tons. Owing to excessive rain in the Northwest during the harvest season there was a large falling off in the wheat crop. The amount of wheat shipped from Duluth was 40,489,302 bushels, and of grain other than wheat, 16,174,059 bushels. There were also 6,760,680 barrels of flour, and of general merchandise, 541,397 tons.

The total number of tons of iron ore shipped out of Lake Superior was 19,330,946. Of this amount the port of Duluth (which includes Two Harbors and Superior) shipped 9,399,179 tons. This all came from the Mesaba and Vermillion Ranges. Other large and extensive bodies of iron ore are now being developed on the north shore of Lake Superior, in Canada and there will be able to ship more or less ore in 1901 into the United States. The railroad haul being very short they will be able to pay the 40 cents per ton duty and compete with the other mines in the American territory. The railroads to these ore deposits are being rapidly constructed.

There have been manufactured in Duluth Harbor during the past year 416,000,000 feet of lumber, and in the Duluth district—estimated—about 650,000,000 feet. The amount of lumber going east through the Soo Canal—manufactured in all the Lake Superior ports—was 909,651,000 feet, and the amount of logs passing over the falls at Sault Ste. Marie amounted to 8,500,000 feet.

The jobbing trade in Duluth has been very large, and continues rapidly to increase as new towns are constantly being opened on the iron ranges and lumber districts. This trade is in the principal staples that enter into domestic consumption, such as groceries, dry goods, boots and shoes, drugs, hardware, machinery, lumber, and mining supplies. A large building is just now being completed to be occupied by the Marshall-Wells Hardware Company, 220 by 200, seven stories high, with an addition of 75 by 220 to be used as an iron house, giving a floor space of over nine acres. With one exception this is the largest hardware building in the United States, and the firm does an immense business all over the Northwestern territory, and as far West as the Pacific Coast.

There were 333 building permits issued during the past year, and about $1,000,000 expended in the construction of mercantile houses and residences. There are very few, if any, desirable residences vacant in the city, and architects are busy making plans for many new buildings of various kinds to be erected in 1901. All our retail merchants report heavy business during the holidays. Our banks say the business for 1900 has been the best they have ever experienced. Thousands of men are now in the woods cutting logs for the coming season, all our railroads, (of which we have nine,) are planning for improvements, extensions, and new buildings. The Northern Pacific is now erecting a freight house about 700 feet long, and part of it two stories high.

The words "hard times" are not mentioned in Duluth, and the business outlook for 1901 is very encouraging.

RAY T. LEWIS,
Duluth, Minn., Jan. 5, 1901.

SEATTLE.

The past year has been one of unparalleled prosperity for the City of Seattle, and the promise for the next year, and many more to come, is that this prosperity will continue.

The population of this city has increased at least 20 per cent. during the past year, and now exceeds 90,000. In another year it will exceed 100,000. Nearly 1,800 dwelling houses have been erected, together with a large number of business blocks, warehouses, wharves, and factories. A water system, with a capacity of 50,000,000 gallons, has just been completed, at a cost of $1,250,000. The water is brought by gravity from the Cedar River, in the Cascade Mountains, twenty-four miles away. The street railways have been greatly improved and extended. There have been no business failures. In mercantile lines there has been an increase of business over last year of from 30 to 50 per cent., in both wholesale and retail trade. In manufacturing there has been an increase of about 50 per cent. in products. The exports, imports, and railroad shipments have nearly doubled.

In 1896 the bank deposits amounted to $2,780,325.14. In 1898 the deposits had increased to $7,761,664.75; in 1899, to $13,575,928.02, and on Dec. 1, 1900, they amounted to $17,714,294.09, an increase of $4,138,391.07 during the past year. The clearances for Seattle banks for the past five years have been as follows:

1898	68,414,635
1899	103,327,617
1900 (estimated)	131,000,000

Wages are high; no one need be unemployed, and every branch of commerce is in a flourishing condition. The conditions here would indicate a boom, were it not for the existence of natural causes which must continue for many years.

There are many reasons for the remarkable growth of the trade of the city, the five leading reasons being as follows:

First.—The opening of the Asiatic ports to our commerce has given a great impetus to the trade of this port. The fact that Seattle possesses one of the finest harbors in the world; that it is two days nearer the Orient than is San Francisco, and at the same time is more than 500 miles nearer the great lakes, has attracted the attention of the great transportation companies, which are now seeking to centralize their business at this point. The transcontinental lines of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific are centred here. The Burlington, Canadian Pacific, and Union Pacific have traffic arrangements by which their trains come in, and the Southern Pacific is negotiating for a similar arrangement. A number of freight and passenger steamships are now regularly engaged in the Oriental trade, and several new ones are being built for that purpose, notably the two 25,000-ton steamships of the Great Northern Railway Company, which will go into service in 1901.

Second.—There are unlimited quantities of coal in this State, and there has been a great increase in its production during the year. Many of the best mines are within a few miles of Seattle. New mines have been opened and old ones greatly extended. The product of our mines in 1898 was about 1,775,000 tons; in 1899, a little over 2,175,000 tons, and in 1900 it reached 2,500,000 tons. The market is chiefly in Oregon, California, Hawaii, and Alaska.

Third.—The great product of Western Washington is lumber. There has been a marked increase in its manufacture during the year. It is estimated that the product will exceed 1,600,000,000 feet for the year 1900. It is estimated that the standing timber of Washington will make 200,000,000,000 feet, or enough to run the mills now in the State for more than 100 years.

Fourth.—The Alaska and Northwest Territory produced more than $30,000,000 of gold in 1900. More than 80 per cent. of the output came to the Seattle banks and Assay Office. The great army of men who produce the gold draw their supplies from Seattle. It requires a vast amount of merchandise to supply the men engaged in the industry, and a great number of vessels for its transportation.

Fifth.—The State of Washington has great agricultural resources. The development of irrigation systems in the eastern part of the State, and the clearing of the forests in the western part, is attracting a large number of farmers from the Eastern States, and the country is being rapidly settled, thereby increasing the trade of the cities.

The present indications are that the increase of trade during the coming year will greatly exceed that of 1900.

J. W. CLISE,
President Chamber of Commerce.
Seattle, Washington, Jan. 5, 1901.

DETROIT.

In order to verify my preconceived notions as to the condition of trade and industry in this city at the close of the present year, and the promise for the coming year, I have taken pains to secure the opinions, by letter, of representatives of the leading lines of industry in this city, including stove, furniture, and agricultural implement manufacturers, car builders, steamship companies, and wholesale dealers in hardware, plumbers' and engineers' supplies, dry goods, groceries, paints, oils and varnishes, drugs and proprietary medicines, lumber, seed, real estate dealers, manufacturers of hot blast apparatus, &c.

Notwithstanding the disturbance created by the Presidential election during the year, and the consequent uncertainty in regard to the financial policy of the Government, and the unusually warm and unseasonable weather during the months of October and November, the results, as a whole, show a most satisfactory condition of trade and industry, and a most promising outlook.

Since election there has been not only a marked increase in business lines, but a marked increase in confidence for the future. The exceptions, if any, pertain to real estate transactions and business dependent upon iron productions.

The hardware trade, at the beginning of the year, was in a prosperous condition. The previous year had been marked with strong markets and rapidly increasing prices. Such prices, however, suffered a decline during the year, and though the volume of business was doubtless as great as in the preceding year, the decline in prices unsettled the market and brought a degree of uncertainty to the trade.

The decline, however, has been checked, with an advance in some lines. Confidence in the future has been established, and with the leveling of prices on many staples, a large increase in building enterprises and those dependent upon iron products is anticipated, and the prospects for the year are unusually bright.

Detroit is an important stove manufacturing centre. The volume of business in this line was greatly affected by the weather, which, during the months of October and November, was the mildest that has been known in many years. This curtailed the volume of the stove business very greatly. The products, however, brought better prices than in the previous years, which, doubtless, made up, to some extent, for the losses occasioned by the mild weather. The changes for the better in the weather, and the settling of the political situation, improved conditions very much, and, with good crops and favorable conditions, a substantial increase and a prosperous year for 1901 are anticipated.

Real estate has been one of the last to respond to the better condition of trade and the general advance in prices. While there have been no dealings of any considerable magnitude, yet there has been a considerable movement in small sales.

With conditions affecting the financial and industrial world settled, it is believed by real estate dealers that the accumulation of capital must, of necessity, find its way into real estate, and that with the coming year there will probably be a period of advancing real estate values, similar to that which took place in 1881, after the panic of 1873.

With these expectations, all lines of business seem to be upon a most satisfactory basis. Confidence is restored, money is plentiful, nearly all lines of business are overwhelmed with orders, and it is believed and anticipated in business circles that the coming year will be one of great activity and prosperity.

C. E. WARNER,
Detroit, Jan. 5, 1901.

CHATTANOOGA.

The closing of the nineteenth century has been the most successful in Chattanooga's history. Not only have there been some thirty new industries added to our list of manufacturing plants, but fully one-half of our old plants have either been enlarged or had their capital increased, preparatory to taking care of their rapidly growing business.

Our manufacturing interests are perhaps more diversified than those of any of the Southern cities, the iron and wood working industries being of equal importance, and during the past four years nine textile manufacturing plants have been added to our list of industries.

With one exception, our foundry interests are larger than those of any city south of the Ohio River, between 400 and 450 tons of pig iron being melted daily by the twenty-four foundries.

Our lumber interests have developed very rapidly during the past year, two large hardwood lumber concerns having located here on account of our favorable shipping facilities. These concerns bring their stock from different points in the South, assembling it in their commodious yards, from which their export orders are filled.

During the past twelve months there has been a very marked increase in our export business, 21 of our 180 plants now shipping a portion of their products to foreign countries.

About $600,000 has been expended in the erection of buildings in the city and suburbs up to the close of the year, these improvements (both factories and residences) being of a much more substantial character than those erected during any previous year.

Twenty-five new mercantile concerns began business during the year, and the total amount involved in failures (embracing all classes) will not exceed $40,000. It is doubtful if there is a city in the United States corresponding in size that can show so small a percentage of failures.

Our bank clearings have steadily increased since the first of the year, there being a gain this month over December, 1899, of 16 per cent. Our total bank deposits amount to $4,842,796.97, as against $4,320,425.18 in December of last year, and showing an increase of $1,642,000 over December, 1895.

Our retail merchants have enjoyed a magnificent holiday trade, and are very hopeful for the coming year; in fact, there is every indication of the opening year of the new century being even more prosperous than the one just closed.

A. S. GLOVER,
Chattanooga, Tenn., Jan. 5, 1901.

CLEVELAND.

Cleveland is the greatest iron ore market in the world. Within the past decade the receipts have practically doubled. In 1890 5,499,080 gross tons of iron ore were received, and in 1899 this had increased to 11,278,611, this latter figure being 61.79 per cent. of the total product of the Lake Superior district during that season. The figures for 1900 are not yet tabulated.

Taking another item of heavy freight which is handled in great quantities in Cleveland, we find a similar condition, the receipts of coal in this city in 1890 having been 1,960,591, while for 1899 these figures had increased to 5,544,815. The figures for 1900 are not yet available, but they will doubtless show an increase over 1899.

Banks show a steady increase in business during the decade, the deposits in the National banks having increased from $15,037,606 in 1890 to $42,517,538 in 1899; while the savings banks show an increase from $36,914,534 in 1890 to $75,115,248 in 1899.

The figures given do not by any means cover the field, but they show a steady growth which can be taken as an index of lines that are not mentioned. For the past year business generally has been excellent. Manufacturers, especially in iron and steel lines, merchants and ship builders, have all had a good year, and are expecting a very good trade in 1901, with undoubtedly an increase over the present year. While in the lumber business the results for the year may not show as well as 1899, the promise for 1901 seems to be excellent, both for the manufacturer and the consumer.

The transportation lines have done a tremendous business during the year, and at the present time the traffic which is being handled is so great as to surprise even the transportation officials, and as yet there seems to be no indications of a reduction of the tonnage.

The general outlook is such as to make it seem certain that during 1901 Cleveland will fully maintain the record for development and progress which has been established during the past twenty years.

RYERSON RITCHIE,
Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 5, 1901.

NEW HAVEN.

Touching the condition of trade and industry in our city at the close of the past year and the promise for the coming year, I would say that the retail trade as a whole has been about normal. The volume of business in the large department stores was very gratifying. The result, in profits, I am informed, has been most satisfactory, and will exceed the expectations of many of the merchants. With the rapid increase of our population from 82,000 in 1890 to 108,000 in 1900, the consumers of the general commodities of life have increased proportionately, from which condition the smaller merchants have also profited. Our merchants were, as a rule, cautious in their purchases, guarding against overstocking, and, prior to Nov. 6, were fully prepared to meet any disturbances in values that might have arisen if a change of the Federal Administration had taken place. Hence the condition of our merchants is an extremely healthy one, with the prospects for the coming year fully equal, if not superior, to those of the present.

Our manufacturing industries have also passed through a prosperous year. The volume of business done by them, with but few exceptions, has been large and profitable. Manufacturers, using a degree of precaution, in the face of the year of the Presidential election, and the consequent fluctuations of prices of supplies during such period, did not make sufficient preparations to meet the demand, which in some instances proved to be much greater than the supply. Under this condition some trade was diverted in other directions.

It is the consensus of opinion that the comiog year will be fully up to if it does not exceed the volume and profitable results of the past one. In consequence of this belief ample preparations are being made to meet a greater demand. Some additional buildings for manufacturing purposes are in course of erection, while several applications from new industries that wish to locate here or to remove here from other places, are under negotiation and consideration.

While capital has been thus prosperous, labor has also profited, and has, in a measure, reaped a portion of the wave of prosperity, as is evidenced by an increase in deposits in the savings banks. And, in this connection, it is gratifying to mention that while the savings banks had under consideration the advisability of reducing the rates of interest on deposits of the year, they have finally decided to continue present rates.

The deposits and balances of our local banks have been quite satisfactory during the year, thus showing the prosperous and healthy condition of our depositors.

In conclusion, I am gratified to be able to state that the outlook for the coming year is a very encouraging one in every direction.

MAX ADLER,
President Chamber of Commerce.
New Haven, Conn., Jan. 5, 1901.

PITTSBURG.

Pittsburg has always been noted for its activity in the manufacturing world, even during depressed conditions, brought about by want of sufficient business to moderately meet the ability of supply, and under most unfavorable circumstances. Owing to the advantages possessed for procuring cheap fuel, which is here supplied at a minimum cost, and which in very many articles produced is the basis of low cost in manufacturing, this city has managed to keep its mills and factories running so nearly to capacity as to astound those manufacturers not so closely situated to the coal centre. The realization of the foregoing truth will emphasize the actual situation that has been the good fortune of the manufacturers located in this district. Mills, factories, and workshops of every kind have had a phenomenal period of prosperity, accompanied by the usual reward for those who earn and are entitled to merit from their knowledge of and their proper application to their affairs. The merchant has not been less happy, for the prosperity of the one must adduce to the advantage of the other—so they have fully and equally shared in the good time which has spread its mantle over our people.

As to promises for the future, prophecy has been recognized as an unwise and injudicious field to enter upon, as it is always fruitful of failure. As far as we may venture, however, this may be foretold: Confidence being upon a stable foundation, and the people of the whole Nation having full faith in its permanency, we may feel assured that the outlook is more encouraging than at any time during our past history. An ever-increasing foreign business, exports not only greater but promising even better things in the future, protected and encouraged by the policy of our Government; shipbuilding expanding by phenomenal bounds; internal improvements projected as never before, and the demands of the hour for constantly better service and facilities, augur well for the creation of requirements for all kinds of material that must bring about and mean as good business prospects as it has been the pleasure of our people to enjoy. Our steel and iron mills are in receipt of orders for immediate use and fulfillment. This has always been reputed, as a criterion, to be absolute assurance of excellent conditions in all lines—hence the present indications for continued prosperity in the new or twentieth century are almost all that can be desired.

JOHN BINDLEY,
Pittsburg, Penn., Jan. 5, 1901.

ATLANTA.

Atlanta has completed a most successful year in all lines of commerce and industry. Possibly the most direct evidence of her progress during the past twelve months may be given in her Clearing House returns. These statistics prove that Atlanta's bank clearings for the twelve months ending Dec. 31 showed an increase of $14,000,000 over the clearings of the previous twelve months. As a further indication of the healthy character of this development, it may be said that Atlanta's Clearing House statistics for 1899 showed an increase of $11,000,000 over the business of the preceding year.

Wholesale business in all lines has been exceptionally good. Undoubtedly the increased worth of cotton has had a very considerable influence upon wholesale trade, but it is true nevertheless that Atlanta is moving forward rapidly in the volume of her wholesale business. A number of new establishments have gone into business during the past twelve months, and all of these report satisfactory trade. Atlanta's wholesale trade for the twelve months just closed aggregates a little more than $34,000,000.

In manufacturing, Atlanta leads all of the Georgia cities by a considerable percentage; this notwithstanding the fact that Atlanta manufactures less in textiles than two other cities in the State—Augusta and Columbus. Her output is made up of diversified lines, including furniture, agricultural implements, engines, and machinery of all kinds, fertilizers, flour, and numerous other lines. The manufactured output of the State of Georgia amounts approximately to $90,000,000 annually; of this, Atlanta turns out $19,000,000.

T. H. MARTIN,
Secretary Chamber of Commerce.
Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 5, 1901.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Portland and the State generally have had a most prosperous year to look back to and a promising future looms in view. As for several years past grain shipments have exceeded those of San Francisco and Puget Sound ports combined, she is a strong second in importance in the shipping business on the Pacific Coast, San Francisco alone surpassing her in the amount of shipments.

Portland, as the commercial centre of Oregon and of that part of Washington and Idaho tributary to the Columbia River, has had an exceptionally prosperous year. Very large quantities of wheat, flour, wool, hops, live stock, salmon, fruit, lumber and its manufactures, (of all of which commodities Oregon and Eastern Washington have never had so bounteous a supply as during the past year,) have passed through her commercial, jobbing, and retail houses. There is no reason, as the present moment indicates, that there should be any change in the immediate future, unless for a much greater improvement in all lines.

Deposits in our banks aggregated $20,000,000, and the clearances this year have exceeded those of any past year.

Trade with the Orient and Siberia has developed in the past year, thirty-seven steam vessels having cleared from here for ports there. A considerable increase in the number is probable for the present year.

Portland's real estate transfers during 1900 aggregate in valuation $3,500,000. A vast amount of new building has been done, including a new United States Custom House and many other fine structures of elegant design and superior construction.

New Companies Incorporated During the Year 1900

The industrial incorporations during the year 1900 were not nearly so heavy as those of 1899, when the record of companies formed reached a magnitude beyond all precedent. Possibly in numbers last year's incorporations equalled its predecessor, but the majority of the companies were on a much lessened basis of capital, and so the total for the year shows a falling of from $4,207,000,000 in 1899 to $2,380,694,000 in 1900. These totals represent only companies of $500,000 capital or more, and were those of a smaller amount included the total in both cases would be considerably larger. The most notable incorporation of the year was the Carnegie Company, with $160,000,000 capital. The American Bridge and the Interoceanic Canal Companies were others of importance.

A remarkable number of companies were organized for mining and development purposes, while much new capital was involved in the formation of electric companies for the furnishing of heat, power, and lighting.

The following list gives the companies of $500,000 or more capital that were incorporated during the past year of which record could be obtained:

FINANCIAL PROSPECTS.

I am pleased to state as my opinion that, barring some unforeseen disaster, the financial and commercial prospects for the coming year are the best we have had in many years. In the West money is abundant. Fair prices for products and good returns to manufacturers have well distributed this money, and I think we may well congratulate ourselves on the outlook.

Dividend Record of 1900.

Stockholders in industrial and railroad corporations continued in many cases to find substantial evidence of the prosperity of their companies. The number of concerns that increased or paid extra dividends during the year was very considerable, while in many other instances payments were begun by new corporations, and many older ones that had under stress of hard times stopped payments again went on a dividend basis. A few companies, for purposes of retrenchment or to devote the money to present needs, deferred or suspended their dividend disbursements.

The following companies declared dividends for the first time during the year:

Alabama Consolidated Coal and Iron Company, on preferred.
American Bridge Company, on preferred.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

In the history of the Chicago live stock market there have only been five years in which more than 8,000,000 hogs were received. The year 1900 was one of the five. The year's receipts were 8,117,000, being within 60,000 of the number received in 1899. In view of the fact that hog receipts were so nearly the same as in 1899, it is quite significant that the average price for the year was the same as the top price of the preceding year—$5. The average price of hogs was 95 cents per 100 pounds higher than in 1899, $1.15 higher than in 1898, $1.50 higher than in 1896. It was the highest since the 1894 average, ($5.05,) but $1.60 lower than in 1893, when an exceptionally small supply resulted in very high prices during the first half of the year.

The increase in the demand for packers' products has been very great throughout the entire United States. The South has shown phenomenal gains on account of the remarkable value of her cotton crop, and conditions for trading in that section have never before been so favorable. Wage earners in the cities have had regular and remunerative employment, and when the American has plenty of work he consumes meats of all kinds in generous quantities.

The Army and Navy Departments have purchased freely of all packers, the total sales to the Government by Swift & Co. alone aggregating over 10,000,000 pounds, representing an approximate value of $900,000. The Government has been a liberal buyer of hams and bacon of the best quality, the soldiers in the island possessions and in China absorbing the bulk of that class of provisions. The foreign demand has been very active, this being especially noticeable in South Africa and China, where the troops have almost entirely subsisted upon American meats. Trade in the East has been rapidly increasing, and American provisions and canned goods are now on sale in every Oriental port.

One gratifying feature of the increasing foreign demand for the products of American packers has been the entire clearing up of the large accumulation of lard in store at the beginning of 1900. There has been no surplus lard in sight for some months.

The demand for fresh beef and mutton has been good, and, while prices have been high—due to the prevailing high prices for all kinds of live stock—the quality of the meat has never been better. Breeders of cattle, sheep, and hogs are manifesting great interest in the improvement of existing breeds, and the influence of this interest will be permanent.

The year 1900 has been phenomenal in the volume, value, and quality of meat products, and the indications are that these conditions will continue.

Notes—The prices in this table are "per cent.," not dollars. The par value of the shares of each company is given in the column headed "Par Value." The highest and lowest prices for the year, unless otherwise designated, are based on sales of 100-share lots. Sales of less than 100 shares are marked thus, *. The net change for the year represents the difference between the first and last prices of the year. †Including an extra dividend; in the case of Adams Express the amount is 2 per cent.; Amalgamated Copper, ½ of 1 per cent.; Anaconda Copper, ¾ of 1 per cent; Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern, 2 per cent; Chicago & Eastern Illinois, ½ of 1 per cent.; Commercial Cable, 1 per cent.; Maryland Coal preferred, 1 per cent., and Pennsylvania, 1 per cent. Where no amount appears in the column of "Amount of Capital Outstanding," the shares of the company are no longer dealt in on the Stock Exchange, but have been during the year, and to make the record complete the transactions and prices are given. Peoria, Decatur & Evansville shares are no longer on the Stock Exchange lists, but are now dealt in on the "curb." In the dividend column A stands for Annual; SA, Semi-Annual; Q, Quarterly, and M, Monthly.

PROGRESS IN THE SOUTH.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 5.—The tremendous increase in the price of cotton has caused every Southern city to close the year 1900 with a season of great prosperity. From all the cities depending largely upon cotton for their business come stories of increased bank clearances. The South has unquestionably been blessed during the closing year of the century. Its many crops have been bountiful, and the markets of the world have been open to receive them. Atlanta, Savannah, Charleston, Augusta, Dallas, Columbia, Raleigh, New Orleans, Mobile, and, in fact, every city that looks to the fleecy staple for sustenance, report a business almost twice as valuable as in former years. In this city the bank clearings have more than doubled. They will go beyond $250,000,000 for 1900. This has been brought about not so much through an increased volume of business as by the increase in the prices of Southern products. When one reflects that a bale of cotton was worth in November, 1900, just about twice what it was in November, 1899, it can be readily seen that the clearings of the banks should increase proportionately.

The naval stores business, upon which thousands of families in South Georgia depend for a livelihood, has also been good. The receipts have kept up well at Savannah, the largest naval stores port in the world. There has been some trouble among the operators from the lack of labor, but this has not kept the crop back any. Negroes could make so much money in the cotton field that they wanted to desert the turpentine farm. The new year opens with the brightest of prospects.

The year 1900 closed with the Southern cotton mills in better shape than in several years. The reports from Georgia, South Carolina, and North Carolina, the States that have made more progress in recent years than any of the others in the South, so far as the cotton mills are concerned, show that the mills are prospering and that capital is being raised for the construction of others. The theory that the nearer the cotton mill can get to the cotton field the better appears to be working all right, and the mills erected during the past year have been for the most part in the small towns. Local capital has been largely invested in them. Northern and Eastern capitalists have recently begun to put money into these Southern enterprises.

The State of Georgia has forty-three more mills this new year than it had last year, and there are several others projected. The building of cotton mills is not confined to any particular section of country. The people of the sea coast and the mountains are alike working for new mills and factories. The cotton mill here that was run for years at a loss was put in operation during the year, and is now on a paying basis. The larger mills at Columbus and Augusta are having all they can do filling orders, while the smaller ones in the little towns of from 2,000 to 10,000 find a market for all the yarns they can turn out. The high price of cotton does not appear to have affected the output of the mills during the year just passed. The stock has been bought at increased prices.

In South Carolina thirty-one new mills were built in 1900, and there will be almost as many more during the present year. Those built represent an investment of $4,850,000, most of which was subscribed by the people of the State. The era of cotton mill building has not yet reached its limit in the Southern States. Those already in existence are proving so profitable that about every little town of 5,000 or 10,000 inhabitants has a committee at work to raise funds for a cotton mill, and many of them are succeeding.

Stock Exchange Listings in 1900.

There was a marked decrease in the amount of securities admitted to dealings on the New York Stock Exchange during the year 1900 as compared with the previous year. This was particularly true in the unlisted department, where the total was $213,781,625, as compared with $526,694,900 in 1899. There was a falling off, however, in all departments, the listings of railroad bonds being $86,441,273 less than in the previous year, and of stocks $76,214,100, a total decrease in both of $156,655,373. Taking the aggregate of both the regular and unlisted the decrease shown was $169,578,648. The following were the listings of the year in all departments:

A Year's Transactions on the New York Stock Exchange.

The aggregate of transactions on the New York Stock Exchange for the year 1900 fell very materially below that of 1899, due to the dullness which prevailed in the markets during the greater part of last Summer. The period from election day to the end of the year, however, was one of the most active in Stock Exchange history, and new records were created both on daily and weekly totals. The aggregate of the month of December last came very near reaching that of January, 1899, when the dealings were unprecedentedly heavy.

The following tables give the transactions in both stocks and bonds for each month of the past three years:

Italy Wants Reciprocal Trade.

By Giovanni Branchi,

Consul General of Italy.

Italy will prove herself, in the near future, one of the best fields for American importations. Both the exports and the imports between the two countries are far ahead of those of preceding years. This is so especially of the exports of the United States to Italy.

As against a total of exports of $30,000,000 for the last fiscal year, ten months in the fiscal year of 1900 show a total of $29,870,850, which, computed for the year, aggregates between $34,000,000 and $35,000,000, or a steady advance of about 15 per cent. There is no reason why, with proper concessions as to duties made by both countries, this should not be increased to 25 per cent.

What is wanted is to have a number of big American firms go to Italy and establish agencies and to export to the United States their wares. There is almost an unlimited field open in Italy to business enterprise which goes abroad to study the needs and requirements of the country.

Italy is now in a fairly prosperous state, though not so prosperous as she will be, or as a number of other European countries are at the present time. Especially in Northern Italy has steady and remarkable progress been made. It is, perhaps, not generally known that in the manufacture of electrical appliances Italy is second only to the United States.

According to the report of the year ended Dec. 2, 1900, bonds are now at par, and this, despite the fact that the revenues of the country have been used, not only to defray the expenses of the China expedition, but also to build railroads. With the 4 per cent. bonds at par, and with the exchange between gold and paper reduced to 5½ per cent., it looks as though the country might invite foreign capital. The exchange, 5½ per cent., might be further lowered were it not that it is regarded as a protective duty.

So far as I know, there is not a single thoroughly American firm in Italy, though there are a number of English firms which are mistaken for Americans.

The importation of raw silk from Italy to this country is steadily increasing. Barring only France, the United States is now the largest dress silk manufacturing country in the world. In the production of raw silk, Italy is now headed only by China and Japan.

Though the lemon and orange importations have fallen off considerably during the last ten years, owing to the California groves, lemons are still considerably imported from Sicily. During the last fiscal year 2,000,000 boxes of lemons and 57,000 boxes of oranges were sent to this country. Ten years ago 657,000 boxes of oranges were sent.

The importation of wines is increasing steadily. If the Italian wines in this country were advertised as the French and German wines are advertised, they would be as successful as the latter brands.

Marble, if worked by American machinery, would be a paying investment for capitalists. As is generally known, there is not a known marble in existence which is as well suited for sculpture as is the Italian marble. But with the present old-fashioned methods of quarrying the stone as much is wasted as is produced.

American exports to Italy are raw cotton, mineral oils, cottonseed oil, provisions, machinery, rubber goods, and old iron. Canned fruits and provisions formerly were bought largely from England. That was before it was discovered that England imported them from the United States. Coal is another product that was bought largely from England. There is room for more steamship lines between this country and Mediterranean ports, as considerably more coal might be sent to Italy were the freight facilities increased. In general, were both countries to make concessions in tariff laws, Italy would respond by being one of the most promising fields for American mercantile enterprise.

Germany is Facing an Economic Crisis.

TRADE IS SHRINKING THROUGHOUT THE EMPIRE, WORKINGMEN ARE IDLE, AND MONEY RATES MUST BE RAISED TO MARKET IMPERIAL LOANS AT PRESENT PRICES— A RESULT OF COMMERCIAL INFLATION.

Staff Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—Does Germany stand on the brink of an economic crisis?

To answer this question great care and circumspection are required, for in our days the interests of nations are closely intertwined, and a shock on the borders of Rhine, Elbe, and Spree will certainly be felt on the Thames and on Manhattan Island. Yet the very same consideration compels one to keep a close watch on any signals of storm that may appear in the distance, for, were we to wait till the neighbor's house is shaken, our own might be out of the reach of protection.

For decades Germany has been enjoying almost uninterrupted prosperity, politically and economically. She has grown into a first rate commercial power, outshining France and rivaling Great Britain as well as the United States. Her progress since about 1860 has been simply marvelous and has no parallel in the history of nations.

Examining the causes which underlie this development, we meet first of all the effects of two great successful wars and a general improvement in technical knowledge. Germany's political prestige, home and foreign, grew steadily. The accumulation of capital was such that the rate of interest, which for centuries had been 5 per cent., began to decline, so that the funds and bonds were converted into 4 per cents and 3 per cents, and there was even talk of 2 per cent., because Great Britain had given the example.

The conversion proved unsupportable to the well-to-do middle classes, who constitute the backbone of the country's economical organization. They had lived well with 5 per cent. interest, but saw themselves unable to do so with 4 per cent. and 3 per cent.

The result was that they sold out, and invested the proceeds in stocks yielding a higher rate. This was the main reason for the sudden starting up of an endless number of companies, the inflation of capital of corporations and banks, the growth of the iron, textile, and electricity trades, and of the large investment of Germans in foreign loans. Speculation on the Stock Exchange became rampant, and the influx of Argentine, Italian, Chinese, and many other loans is mainly due to the conversions and the resulting temptations to investors.

During the first part of this period, domestic legislation had done away with all the fetters past centuries had imposed on trade, commerce, and individual energy. A reign of liberty was begun, which arrived so suddenly that it dazzled the eyes of many. Yet on the whole it proved propitious, and the attempt now being made to undo the work and put the chains on again is doomed to fail. There is a strong party in the country which looks on the business community as if it were a community of political and hierarchical traditions. To such views is due the return to laws which fetter the liberty of commerce and hinder business.

The effect is far from the aim. It was intended to distribute wealth more equally and justly, but the effect proved just the reverse. Trade got into the hands of powerful syndicates, paralyzing individual energies. Banking, and in fact the whole exchange business, is controlled by five or six banks in Berlin, which have increased their share capital year after year.

One mistake was recognized early enough for remedy, if there had been a wish to apply a remedy at all. The mortgage banks and municipalities discovered years ago that they could not maintain a rate of 3 or even 4 per cent. People withdrew from those investments, and the loans lost their market. A return to 4 and 4½ per cent. was made necessary.

The funds alone, particularly the imperial loans and Prussian consols, remained at 3 per cent., but it is an open question whether they can be maintained at that rate. We are expecting the issue of loans to the amount of several hundred millions of marks, and we shall see in the Spring whether 3 per cent. loans will be taken by the public. The probability is that either the loans must be issued at about 92, or that we must return to the 4 per cent. type.

There is one feature of the situation which should be carefully examined abroad. The high rate of interest reigning in Germany, and the attractions held out by so many new companies, with the seal of the banks to obtain foreign capital at a low rate and put it into circulation here at a handsome profit, have led to a very considerable immigration of foreign capital. In 1898 a plausible statement put the amount of English, French, and Dutch capital invested in floating engagements in this country at about 1,500,000,000 marks. There can be no doubt that without this foreign capital speculation and prosperity would have reached their limits long ago.

At the present time the mortgage banks are in difficulties—difficulties of such a kind that they will not be able to get over them for a long time. Trade is shrinking all over the country. Prices are down. The Stock Exchange is in constant fear of the morrow. Even coal cannot maintain the price level. Stocks and funds languish. The banks have to earn interest on inflated capital, and the task is not easy. A great number of bank Directors are about to retire into private life. Many people think that if these men had seen any profit in sight they would have retained their posts.

In the iron and steel trades there is not a single plant that is not suffering from a lack of orders. All of them are partly idle. If they said so openly, it would be the natural and the best thing from a mere business viewpoint. But people have got accustomed to speculating in shares, and the concerns are driven into disguising the real situation. If they dismissed hands, it would cause a sensation and be a confession of bad business. Shares would go down. Therefore they dissimulate and merely reduce the working hours.

The wool spinning trade is almost ruined. The word is not too strong, considering the heavy losses in 1900 reported by the spinners. Eight of the great wool spinners in Mulhausen, Alsace, report a total loss of 16,000,000 marks.

Cotton spinners mask the unhealthy state of business at home by selling at extravagantly cheap prices abroad, especially in Holland, whereas at home they maintain high prices.

In the labor market things are drifting from bad to worse. Dismissals, complaints, and misery are reported from all parts of the empire. In some cities the misery is so great that the Magistrates have arranged for public works to employ the men.

Trade with China, Japan, and South Africa is wholly or partly suspended. Of course not only the ports suffer thereby, but all the manufacturing centres feel the effects.

The depression in trade, the calamity in the market for mortgages, and the fact that the banks are overburdened with the weight of engagements make it difficult to see how the situation can be met. A "krach," to use the word of 1874, certainly threatens Berlin and Germany.

Outlook Good in France.

The foreign trade of France, according to the figures of the Bureau of Foreign Commerce, made a considerable advance in 1899 and suffered a decline in 1900. The principal increase in 1899 was in exports, and the principal loss in 1900 was in the imports.

Complete figures are not obtainable for 1900. The Bureau of Foreign Commerce has them only up to the end of October. The decrease was such, however, during these ten months that if the same rate was kept up throughout the year France was far behind her record for 1899. Still, her exports were a long way in advance of 1898.

The amount of merchandise passing between France and other countries in the year 1899 is estimated at $2,196,533,000, being and increase of $217,125,000 over the former year. The imports amounted to $1,128,664,000 in the general commerce, and the exports to $1,067,869,000. The exports showed the greatest increase—$165,980,000. In the special trade, imports were valued at $871,974,000, or nearly $9,000,000 more than in 1898; exports showed an increase of $128,906,000, and amounted to $801,629,000.

The commerce for the ten months of 1900 ending with October is stated as follows: Imports, $703,880,000; exports, $647,074,000. These figures show a decrease of $12,000,000 in the imports, as compared with the corresponding months of 1899, and of over $4,000,000 in the exports.

The principal articles of trade between France and the United States are:

IMPORTS.

Cotton	$20,000,000
Copper	10,000,000
Petroleum	6,600,000
Machines	5,800,000

Consular officers in France note an increasing demand for United States products. Our coal is in demand, as well as iron and steel. Many French dealers, it is stated, sell their own goods under American names. The Consul at Havre, Mr. Thackara, notes that last June a shipment of American welded-steel tubes arrived in that port to fill an order from Paris. The seams in the tubes were so beautifully made that the French customs authorities refused to allow the goods to enter without the payment of the duties levied upon seamless drawn tubes ($9.65 per 220 pounds) instead of those on welded tubes, ($4.63 per 200 pounds.) The shipment was released under bond, and the question was referred to the custome experts at Paris. The experts themselves were in doubt as to the construction of the tubes, and the goods were only released after a delay of three months, an expert in the employ of the consignee making practical demonstration that the tubes were welded. This is flattering testimony to the skill of American manufacturers of welded tubes.

Consul Covert of Lyons notes that recent experiments made in France from samples of wheat sent from America show that wheat can be produced in Texas that is suitable for the manufacture of macaroni, vermicelli, and other edible pastes so largely consumed in Europe. This will create an excellent outlet for American wheat of the hard, glutinous kind.

The same officer reports that the growth of the silk industry in the United States has caused France to lose one of her best customers. Our present production is two-thirds that of France, and our purchases have fallen off enormously.

Mr. Bruwaert, the French Consul General in this city, on commenting upon trade relations between his country and the United States, said that, in his opinion, business for the coming year will show a decrease in French imports in American food products and an increase in such imports as tobacco, cotton goods, mineral oils, and copper.

"The outlook in France for good wine and wheat crops," he says, "is excellent, and while low prices may rule, there will be an abundance to sell and consequent prosperity to the producing class. Good crops insure prosperous conditions, and with money in hand the French people will buy more freely of such articles enumerated, with the exception of certain food products. As this country is prosperous the Americans will buy more of the luxuries of France."

Nicaragua.

By Adolph D. Straus,

Consul General of Nicaragua.

The Nicaragua Canal will have a bearing on the commercial conditions existing between the United States and Nicaragua which will probably draw the two republics into closer relations than any other Central American or Southern American country is likely to approach. The future of Nicaragua, as the future of all countries, depends upon the investment of foreign capital and on the extent of foreign immigration which can be induced. The building of the canal will supply Nicaragua with both.

Estimating that during the time of the construction $20,000,000 is spent annually, it is not too much to expect that $5,000,000 of that sum will remain in the southern republic. And, estimating again that after the work is finished $5,000,000 a year will be required to maintain the canal, fully $250,000 will annually remain in Nicaragua. Aside from this, there is the world-wide advertisement which the country will receive, attracting foreign capital and opening shipping facilities second to none.

The canal will further bring in a host of immigrants, laborers, artisans, and mechanics. Most of these expect to remain only for a time, but many will remain, seeing possibilities in a business way ahead of them, and attracted by the healthfulness of the country and its natural beauty. The unprecedented success of the United States, found in hordes of desirable immigrants, will come to Nicaragua only in a smaller scale.

Then, when the canal has been finished, many will come to see it. They will be attracted by the beautiful country, and will either settle or make of it a Winter resort. As to the healthfulness of the country, few Southern countries can surpass it. There is practically no yellow fever, nor, except along the coast line, any malaria. The few cases of yellow fever that occur are with foreigners who have contracted the sickness elsewhere. There is therefore every reason to suppose that the canal will prove of advantage in respect to showing the people the delightful spot our country is and inducing them to settle there.

In the past, Nicaragua, like most of her sister republics, has suffered from the lack of means of economical transportation. The natural drawbacks of mountains and hills make railroad building in these countries impracticable. Nicaragua, however, is one of the least mountainous. Over 125 miles of railroad, built by Americans, of material made in America, have already been constructed. Recognizing the value of railroads and natural water courses—another reason accounting for the immense success of the United States—a project is now under consideration by the Government to dredge a river which will open up no less than 300 miles of water front. The river at present, though navigable, is not of a depth sufficient to admit large ocean vessels. The Government, recognizing the advantages of a perfect system of transportation, is also considering the building of a second railroad.

The link between the United States and Mexico by American railroads is directly responsible for the prosperity of the latter country. In the same way, Nicaragua will eventually girdiron herself with railroads, thus establishing communication from coast to coast.

We send to the United States gold, cocoa, coffee, fruits, rubber, mahogany, and cedar. We buy from the United States machinery, clothing, and provisions.

Foreign capital has been chiefly invested in gold and rubber. In both of these industries the possibilities are limitless, as, despite the fact that both gold and rubber have been found in remarkable quantity in spots, the resources of the country up to the present time have not been fully ascertained.

Prosperous Outlook for Canadian Trade.

FOREIGN TRADE NEARLY DOUBLED IN SEVEN YEARS—GREAT IMUORTS OF AMERICAN IRON AND STEEL—BOUNTEOUS HARVESTS AND EXPANDING BANK RETURNS.

Special Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

OTTAWA, Jan. 5.—The favorable business conditions in Canada which THE TIMES outlined in January last have continued, as was predicted. The year has been one of general prosperity in the Dominion. Nor does any sign of falling off appear. The coming year seems certain to be an equally fat one; in no great line of production or trade does slackness exist. In most of them business is at high pressure. It begins to look as though the great natural resources of the country are finding at last a real spur.

In reviewing at the beginning of last year Canadian business conditions, the chief divisions of industry, agriculture, and commerce were taken up in detail, and each status outlined. A similar review now would necessarily be couched in almost the same terms. Briefly, every important business interest in the Dominion seemed in sound condition then, has had a prosperous year, and seems on a sound basis still. A falling off in the Northwest harvests is more than offset by the exceptionally good crops in the East. In agriculture on the whole, in lumbering, mining, manufacturing, the product is increasing and prices are good.

Instead of going into extended details in principal lines of production, advantage may be taken of the close of the century to summarize the statistics of the recent National financial and trade development of the Dominion.

NATIONAL REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.

Canadian revenue and expenditure for the fiscal year 1900 have been both the largest on record. But for the first time in seventeen years the revenue exceeded the total expenditure, and the net public debt was reduced by close on a million dollars.

The revenue last year was $51,000,783. The total expenditure, both "consolidated fund" and capital account, was $771,828 less. But that expenditure included $1,536,-140 paid by the Dominion to raise, equip, and send troops to South Africa, without which she would have had a genuine surplus of over two millions.

The revenue of $51,000,000 was over $4,-000,000 higher than in the previous year, $10,900,000 more than in 1898, and $17,000,000 more than in 1895. All this without any increase or new taxation; in fact, the customs duties, the chief source of revenue, have been on the average slightly decreased.

FOREIGN TRADE.

Trade statistics are so striking at present in the Canadian case as to furnish an exceptionally interesting illustration of the prosperity of the Canadian business world. The fiscal year ending June 30, 1899, showed by far the largest foreign trade Canada ever knew. The total was $321,-661,213. The fiscal year since, that ending on June 30 last, showed a still larger trade —$381,625,855—and the first three months of the present fiscal year show a big proportionate increase on that again.

Now observe the figures of Canada's total foreign trade for the past half dozen years. They are as follows, (for the fiscal years ending June 30:)

Year.	Imports.	Exports.	Total Trade.
1897.....	119,218,669	137,950,233	257,168,902
1898.....	140,323,053	164,152,687	304,475,736
1899.....	162,784,308	158,896,905	321,681,213

Thus in six years Canadian trade has swelled from a little over two hundred millions annually to nearly four hundred millions. And it keeps growing. For the three months since June 30 last the total trade has gained some ten millions over the corresponding months of the past fiscal year. If this increase be maintained until next June 30, as is likely, Canadian foreign trade will have fully doubled in seven years. Such a growth, 100 per cent., is unparalleled in proportion elsewhere in the trade of civilization. The United States, which makes the next best showing of growth, has increased its foreign trade about 50 per cent. during the past seven years.

The enormous increase of Canadian foreign trade seems to have been an all-around one. In the imports, if we lump the manufactures of iron and steel, perhaps the greatest percentage of increase is shown, and it comes mostly from the United States. Canadian imports of iron and steel manufactures have increased by seven or eight million dollars during the past half-dozen years, now amounting to close on $20,000,000 a year, practically all from the States.

In Canadian exports the growth has also been in every direction. Once upon a time the exports were largely produce of the forests and fisheries. These both take a back seat now to the produce of the farm and dairy, while exports of manufactures and of the products of the mines are far ahead of those of the fisheries, and close to that of the forests. During the past six years exports from the farm, range, and dairy have increased by over twenty million dollars, and exports of manufactures (other than wood.) by seven or eight millions, while exports from the forests and fisheries have remained about stationary.

GAIN TO THE UNITED STATES.

Analysis of the figures of trade show that the United States enjoys more of Canadian custom than the rest of the world put together. Canada bought from the United States last year $116,972,554; she bought from the rest of the world only $72,649,959, taking but $45,472,294 of that from Great Britain. And yet Great Britain is by far a better customer to Canada than is the United States, the British buyings from Canada last year (of Canadian produce alone, excluding foreign produce in transit) being $96,562,875, while the United States took only $52,534,977. In other words, Canada pays to the United States in business the money she gets from Britain.

Probably it is not widely realized in the United States that Canada is the best customer the Republic has, excepting only Great Britain and Germany. The United States does more business with Canada than with all South America put together; as much as with Central America, Mexico, and the West Indies all put together; nearly as much as with Africa, Asia, and Oceanica together. Here are the latest available figures regarding these. They are not Canadian, but United States returns, applying to the trade of the first two months (July and August) of the present fiscal year.

UNITED STATES TRADE (Two Months) WITH:
Great Britain	$100,234,497
Germany	29,900,926
Canada	26,043,049
All South America	17,481,847
Central America, Mexico, and West Indies	27,134,672
Asia, Africa, Oceanica	36,145,715

Perhaps these figures travel far outside of a review of Canadian trade conditions, but they are tempting as illustrating that the United States can go a good deal further afield and fare worse than cultivate trade with the six million white people alongside in Canada. Steps to this effect are the more appropriate because the increased tariff preference by Canada to Great Britain, 33 per cent. off the regular tariff, came into force in July last, and will materially influence business hereafter.

HOME TRADE AND TRANSPORTATION.

At the close of 1899 it was anticipated that the deepening of the St. Lawrence route from Lake Superior to the ocean would be completed to fourteen feet throughout. More delay occurred than was expected. Not until the close of navigation was the fourteen-foot channel officially declared available. The deepened waterway from the great lakes to the sea has therefore no appreciable effect on business in 1900, but it is expected to prove a great factor in development of traffic during the coming year.

Owing, it is claimed, to the delay in the channel work, but probably to other reasons as well, the promised improvements in Montreal Harbor did not materialise. The place is still practically without elevator or dry dock accommodation, and the wharves are inferior and badly placed.

The short line of railway communication from Lake Huron to Montreal and Boston—the Parry Sound and Canada Atlantic System—did a great grain business last year, as in 1899. Nevertheless the comparative failure of the wheat crops in both the Northwestern States and the Canadian Northwest caused the traffic to be less than expected. Much more so was this the case as regards the Canadian Pacific Railway. Manitoba and the Northwest had little wheat for export, as compared with preceding years. But for prior rich harvests there would have been much growling and some collapse in the Northwest, but the country was in so sound a condition that no complaining is heard.

In Ontario and the East, on the other hand, the harvests were excellent, the Ontario agricultural and dairy products, which are nearly half those of the Dominion, being far above the average. From this alone there is a substantial reinforcement to confidence in continued business prosperity, and the Eastern transportation interests are in good feather.

BANK RETURNS.

The official returns by Canadian banks to the Government are in line with the other illustrations of expanding business: than the bank returns there are no better index to business activity in the Dominion. The Canadian banking system, radically different from that of the United States, represents general not local business. There are only thirty-six banks in Canada. Nearly half of these have their headquarters in Montreal or Toronto. Yet there are many hundreds of banking houses. Each bank, no matter where its head office, is entitled to do business throughout Canada and establish branches anywhere. This they all do more or less in proportion to their capital. The Bank of Montreal has over a hundred branches in the larger business places of the Dominion.

The monthly bank returns to the Government show therefore the aggregate of money circulation and mercantile discounts and deposits. The returns for the past six months show marked increases over anything known before in the items which most indicate business activity and soundness. The deposits are larger, the mercantile discounts are larger, the banknote circulation is larger. And the note circulation in Canada represents the money circulation; no gold is used, practically speaking. Figures for the past decade show the expansion of money in use. For the ten years preceding 1899 the average note circulation of the banks was about $33,000,000. For 1899 the note circulation was $41,500,-000. For the past six months the average note circulation has been about $50,000,-000.

The deposits in the bank for the five-year period preceding 1898 averaged $228,-000,000; for 1899 averaged $260,000,000, and for the past six months have averaged $285,000,000. The discounts to the mercantile community, including loans on stocks, averaged, for the five-year period ended with 1899, $228,225,922; for the year 1899 averaged $282,102,958, and for the past six months have averaged $352,000,000.

NO SIGN OF COLLAPSE.

The figures of national revenue, foreign trade, and internal business all seem to indicate that the Dominion is still moving on the wave of prosperity. Few business men express apprehension of any early period of depression. On the Atlantic Coast, where the Cape Breton coal and iron mines are working at enormously increased pressure of late; throughout Quebec, where pulp, paper, and other mills dependent on lumber and water power are multiplying; in Western and Northern Ontario, where new pulp mills and blast furnaces appear and nickel and gold mining continues to develop; on the western prairies, where immigration is beginning to assume striking dimensions; in British Columbia, where everything prospers, from the coal mines, lumber mills, and salmon fisheries to the mining of the precious metals; in the Yukon territory, whence Dawson City this year has sent $20,000,000 of gold, the story is all the same, of growth and confidence. Canada was never as well of or better satisfied.

Cuban Crops and Finances.

Special Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Dec. 31.—The beginning of the new century finds Cuba in a financial and commercial condition different in every particular from what it was ever before. The state of uncertainty which the revolutionary period brought about is changing as rapidly as the conditions will permit. Prosperity is fast succeeding distress. The sugar, tobacco, and other fields have changed their burned aspect for one of verdant green. From the ashes of war has arisen the phoenix of a new era, so that with 1901 comes a hope for the future of the island which even Cubans dared not expect.

The general financial situation improved steadily during 1900, and is now healthy. Rates of interest during the year have remained virtually unchanged. The rates are fixed by demand, which is light in Summer and heavy now, this being the shipping season. Securities to men advancing money intelligently, are perfect, loaning money on sugar and tobacco being done with entire safety. Banking business during the year past increased materially, and the people are becoming accustomed to American check methods. Whereas in the United States 90 per cent. of business is done by check and 10 per cent. by cash, at present in Cuba 75 per cent. of the transactions are in actual cash, as against 25 per cent. by checks.

The shipments of tobacco and sugar have been delayed, but the next sixty days will see large shipments of both. This makes a strong temporary demand for money to handle crops, and, as a result, rates are high at this time; but it is reported that over $1,000,000 has been offered recently on the Stock Exchange to be loaned upon collateral, such as first and second Havana mortgage bonds and selected railroad securities of the island, at 9 to 10 per cent., indicating that money is to be had upon proper security. There have been no failures; even during the "blockade" there was none. In fact, this is the land of no failure.

The tobacco crop has been extraordinarily large, but the average quality has been of medium grade or lower, due, in part, to the fact that in many cases the tobacco was raised on virgin soil by inexperienced planters. Leaf men state they are to an extent embarrassed for money because they advanced large sums to the planters, and, though they have been repaid with the leaf, sales have been limited, there having been few buyers here since last Spring. The market is now loaded, but shipments are being made daily, and they will be large for the next sixty days. The planters are dependent upon the leaf men for money, consequently, there having been an enormous crop in 1900, there is likely to be a greatly reduced crop in 1901. The planters are encouraged, however, and, upon the whole, the prospect is good.

The sugar cane crop has been enormous and of good quality, but there is a complaint of lack of funds necessary to transport the crops from the fields to the mills, and in some cases to start the latter. It has been estimated that $23,000,000 of sugar will be produced, but this estimate is, perhaps, too great. However, the quantity will be in excess of any year since 1897, and the prices promise to be fair to good. Since 1874 Europe has been a factor in the production of sugar, producing in 1900 5,900,000 tons, with a steady increase since. This has served to keep Cuban sugar out of Europe, leaving her dependent upon the United States for a market. As shown by recent market quotations, Manila sugar is received in the United States, and if the Philippine Islands are to grow sugar and get it into the United States free of duty, Cuba will be forced to compete with her, thus reducing the profit to both planter and manufacturer. The future of the Cuban sugar industry depends upon her future commercial relations with the United States.

All over the island during the year past small crops were plentiful and good, the prices ranging high. The weather conditions were propitious for market gardeners. There is great need of extended railroad connections and good roads so that the small farmers may be in close touch with the markets. Fruit has been raised extensively, but the fruit men are dependent almost exclusively upon the local markets. If it were possible to make daily shipments to the United States, and the CCity of Havana was not cut off from the States by a quarantine during six months of the year, there would be a brilliant future in store for growers of all sorts of fruits, many of which are delicious and totally unknown in the United States.

Agricultural implements are badly needed, also cattle of all kinds, notwithstanding the fact the insular Government has distributed a great many of both.

In writing of the future prospects of Cuba, it must be borne in mind that to all intents and purposes this is a new country, sparsely settled, untried, and, though the soil is marvelously rich, the methods of tilling it in vogue are very primitive. If we could have more money, up-to-date workmen, the quarantine reduced, good roads, and bettre railroad facilities, undoubtedly 1901 would be a very prosperous year. Even as it is, the outlook is one of continual improvement.

Experts who have traveled over the island are enthusiastic regarding its possibilities, but they all unite in saying it must be definitely known whether the Cubans are to have total independence, govern themselves under an American protectorate, or be annexed to the United States, before large investors will be induced to come here.

Bolivia.

Dictated to THE NEW YORK TIMES

By Enrique Wulff,

Consul General of Bolivia.

The commercial conditions between the United States and Bolivia have improved tremendously during the past year. As against a total of $180,000 in exports from the United States to Bolivia during the year preceding, the total exports for the year just passed were $375,000. The amount in one year has been more than doubled. There are two reasons to account for this. First, the investments of foreign capital in Bolivia, and the other the immensely improved freighting facilities between the two countries. Where formerly the steamer service was irregular and unreliable, the steamers are now run at regular intervals and on schedule time. In this connection it may be remarked that the condition of Bolivia would be better still were it not for the exorbitant rates of the Panama Railroad.

Aside from these reasons, the country is prosperous because of faith in its Government. The Government is progressive and liberal, and things are quiet and confidence is displayed by all.

Rubber is extensively sought in the jungles, and this is an industry of Bolivia which is not appreciated as it ought to be. As a matter of fact, most of the rubber called "Para rubber" is in reality from Bolivia. Comparatively little Para rubber is on the market. The Bolivian rubber loses its identity, however, because it is shipped via Para to the States. A number of large American companies have expeditions throughout the interior tapping rubber trees. Besides these, there are European companies so engaged. The Government encourages foreigners to hunt rubber. It charges a rental of $15 per year for every 150 trees tapped. The rubber district lies between the Beni, Madre de Dios, Puvius, and Aquiri Rivers. The value of the ruber groves has been recognised fully since 1897.

In mining, Bolivia is one of the most promising countries on the Southern Continent. Gold, silver, copper, tin, and manganese are found. The mines for the most part are operated by foreigners, who have prospecting parties scattered broadcast throughout the interior. In 1896 two Colorado mining companies went to Bolivia. In 1899 they returned and bought mining machinery and went back to their fields to begin deep mining, their former operations having been placer mining.

One of the chief drawbacks of the country is the scarcity of labor. There is money to be made in Bolivia for the common laborer. The natives find living too easy to bother about work. A company was incorporated not long ago under the laws of New Jersey to import labor to Bolivia. The company made arrangements with steamship concerns, and at an early date expects to operate.

Bolivia so far has suffered principally for want of a seaport. A railroad, American built, is, however, under way by the Government, and already more than 2,500 tons of the necessary materials have been ordered. American locomotives and American engineers will be employed.

Brazil.

By Antonio Foutoura Xavier,

Consul General of Brazil.

The following are approximately the export and the import valuations for the year, representing mercantile transactions between Brazil and the United States: Importations from Brazil to the United States, $25,000,000; exportations from the United States to Brazil, $75,000,000. This is considerably in excess of the figures for the preceding year, and shows not only the trade conditions between the two republics, but as well the enormous advance which Brazil, influenced by the steady influx of foreign capital, has been making.

The mining output, both gold and diamonds, has been stimulated by American and European capitalists. Throughout the unexplored section of the country miners have scattered prospecting parties.

Coffee, the principal output of Brazil, has been reduced by half in value. The coffee plantations have increased in numbers and in size despite this. Brazil is easily the largest coffee producing country in the world, and two-thirds of our output is sold in the United States. So extensive is this product that a special Coffee Exchange which lists none except Brazilian coffees has been established. Most of the finer grades of coffee sold as Mocha and Java at an enormous profit are simply superior grades of Brazilian coffee.

In the northern part of the country we have rubber. American companies have sent expeditions into this district and our rubber exportations are steadily coming to the front as an important product. The northern district abounds with rubber tree groves.

Flour, lard, provisions, clothing of all kinds, and machinery, especially agricultural machinery, are our principal imports from the States. The increasing use of agricultural machinery is another cause for the development of the country. Planters throughout the country are recognizing the advantages of the American farming machinery, and the demand for these is universal. The increase in the importation of machinery is due to the Brazilian Minister, J. F. De Assis Brasil. From factory to factory the Minister went in person, buying up machines that seemed of particular advantage to the home industries. These machines he then sent to Brazil, where they met instant favor.

Honduras.

Dictated for THE NEW YORK TIMES

By Ernesto Tchernikow,

Vice Consul of Honduras.

"The general mercantile conditions between the United States and Honduras have continued apace of the steadily increasing business of former years. Owing to a slump in the market price of coffee, this statement at first sight may not seem borne out by the actual figures of the total export. As coffee is the chief product of Honduras, this has lowered the money amount of the export considerably more than it would appear were the export stated in so-and-so many hundreds of pounds of the staple shipped. Looked at from the proper standpoint, therefore, the exports have increased.

"I am not prepared at short notice to give the exact figures as to imports or exports beyond stating that they are satisfactory. Besides coffee, our exports to the United States are gold, silver, rubber, fruits, and hides. In return, we buy machinery, unbleached muslin, sheetings and drills, flour and other provisions. An industry which has especially come to the front is that of hard woods, and immense quantities of these are sent to the United States, while hundreds of thousands of acres of forests of these woods remain to await only the axe.

"Great benefits are expected for Honduras from the Nicaragua Canal. The cheapening of freights, the increased facilities for holding communication with the outside world—which will come not only to Nicaragua herself, but also to the neighboring republics—and, finally, the attention which will be drawn to that part of the world, all will benefit Honduras. Steadily the prejudices of capital against investing money at considerable distance from home is being overcome. Old gold and silver mines in Honduras have been reopened by capitalists of Europe and America. Besides the old mines, new ones have been opened, while the unprospected sections of the country, even far inland, are being searched for deposits of the precious metals."

China's Trade as Affected by the War.

MARKED FALLING OFF AS TO COTTONS AND KEROSENE—TEA AND SILK EXPORTS—TRANSPORTATION INTERRRUPTIONS.

Special Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 1, 1900.—The year opened with the best auguries for the immediate future. The previous year had been one of remarkable development and prosperity throughout the country. The total trade showed an unprecedented increase of 20 per cent. over that of 1898, and had doubled within the decade. Crops had been abundant, and native as well as foreign merchants had realized handsome profits, and although importations had been unusually heavy, the offtake had been commensurate with the supply, and the year closed with but moderate stocks of the principal articles of foreign trade.

The promise of continued prosperity was well maintained during the first five months of the year, until the actual outbreak of hostilities in the Northern provinces in early June brought all business intercourse with that section of the country to an abrupt atand, and, by destroying confidence throughout the Empire, greatly curtailed operations in all other directions. It may here be remarked, in passing, that Shanghai is the entrepôt for practically all the foreign trade of China north of the extreme Southern provinces. The total value of its imports during 1899 is reported as 154,255,000 taels, of which 115,431,000 taels were re-exported, principally to the northern ports and those on the Yang-Tse River.

The disturbances which reduced to anarchy the extensive consuming markets supplied through Tien-Tsin and Niu-Chwang, at once reacted upon this centre of distribution with disastrous effect, and in all that relatea to trade with those regions the impasse continues. Great destruction of property has occurred, the native merchants have closed their establishments, and all native banking facilities have been suspended.

With respect to the principal article of American import, conrse cotton fabrics, the stoppage of business in the North has been especially disastrous, as the consuming markets for 90 per cent. of the trade existed in that quarter. Within five years the import here of American drills, sheetings, and jeans had risen from 2,022,816 pieces to 5,562,478 pieces, and such was the favor in which they were held by native dealers that during the early months of the preseat year they had entered into time contracts for large quantities, undeterred by the extreme prices at which the goods were quoted by the American mills in consequence of the abnormal price of raw cotton. These supplies have since been arriving to a market that has become, for the time, practically non-existent, and the outlook for the early future shows no signs of amelioration. No definite progress has been made toward the adjustment of the complex political questions at issue between the powers and China, and until this takes place confidence will not be restored nor trade be resumed.

A word may here be said respecting the banking system in vogue among the natives, which is extensive and complete in its ramifications for the furtherance of their interior trade so long as normal conditions prevail, but under existing circumstances, and in the face of heavy losses by advances, and some resultant failures, facilities have been curtailed within the narrowest limits, and, at the time of greatest tension in the early Summer, native interest ranged as high as 36 per cent. per annum. Dealers have consequeatly been unable to fulfill their contracts, and the burden of carrying the goods has fallen upon foreign importers and bankers, while stocks have accumulated until fully half the year's import is held with no prospect of an early resumption of business.

We instance American cottons especially, as they constitute the most important article of our import trade, but the derangement of business in the North affects all other branches adversely, with the exception, of course, of supplies for the allied troops operating there, of which flour forms a principal item. A stimulus has naturally been given to the demand for such gooda, but they do not figure largely in the total of our trade.

After cottons, kerosene oil is a chief factor, and the trade in this has shown a marked falling off, as compared with previous years, due to the competition of Russian and Sumatran oil, which has, moreover, been imported in large measure in bulk in specially constructed tank steamers.

Turning to exports to the United States, of which tea is the leading item, the political disturbances not having embraced the producing districts, supplies have not been seriously affected, but the feeling of distrust has stimulated the early marketing of the crop, while apprehensions of interference with supplies on the part of importers in the United States has caused a steady demand at full prices and prevented the foreign merchant from reaping the full benefit of purchasing on overstocked markets.

The business in "blacks" opened in Hankow early in May; the first settlements were, as usual, almost entirely for Russia, though American buyers took perhaps a little more than oustomary; but of the second crop teas, which range lower in price, America was a large buyer, and the total purchases for that market have amounted to about 183,000 half-chests this season. This is not only the largest business ever done in Congou for America, but exceeds the quantity sent to London by 2,750,000 pounds. This excessive demand was doubtless caused by the expectation in the United States that the political situation in China would curtail the production of all kinds of tea. The shortage of the third crop, which amounts to 86,000 half-chests, was caused partly by the lack of banking facilities, but largely because teamen feared they would be unable to market their teas if made.

Total arrivals of Congou for the season have been 899,000 half-cheats, against last year 980,000 half-chests.

Export to the United States and Canada, to date, is 11,000,000 pounds, against a total of 5,900,000 pounds last year.

In green teas, country teas and local packs arrived in the usual course, beginning about the middle of June, and although they were somewhat hurried to market, difficulty of interior transit prevented any undue rush; although some teas showed signs of hasty preparation. The quality, taken as a whole, has proved fully average, but really choice teas have been rather scarce. The style has shown, in instances, some improvement, especially in Moyune teas. The market opened on much the same basis as last season, but was a declining one throughout till almost the close. "Pingsueys" arrived early in June, and although of good sound quality they were not very attractive, being of unfinished appearance; the second crop, although of poor quality, was satisfactory, the style being good for late teas.

The market from the end of July, when a fair working basis was established, has been a steady one, and although the quality of arrivals has deteriorated as the season advanced, pricea have only declined 1 tael per pecul since then. The teas were undoubtedly rushed forward, and but for the continued dullness and lower offers since the middle of October an excessive crop would have been produced.

Stocks of all kinds are very light and supplies are almost exhausted. Export to date to the United States and Canada is 12,500,000 pounds, against a total of 15,615,000 pounds last year. Arrivals of country teas to date are 167,000 half-chests, against a total of 174,000 half-chests last year. Arrivals of Pingsueys to date are 120,000 half-chests, against a total of 122,000 half-chests last year. There seems no doubt that if the present political situation continues until Spring the crop of black and country green teas will be largely curtailed on account of the lack of banking facilities and the unwillingness of natives to take large risks in sending funds into the interior while such unrest exists. Of Pingsueys it is probable a normal crop will be available unless serious disturbance exists in the immediate districts where they are produced.

The prosperity of the American silk trade was very pronounced during the latter half of 1899. It was then thought by many that the world's supply of silk was not sufficient to meet the increased demand, and prices were advanced during the period some 20 per cent, and manufacturers in the United States as elsewhere produced enormous quantities of goods, which overproduction continues to have a serious effect on the trade.

This season, early in March last, contracts for steam filatures were entered into at prices varying from 940 to 900 taels for America, and later on down to 850 taels, the contracts amounting to about 1,200 bales. As, however, the season advanced and the Japanese entered the field with their silks, it was seen that the above prices were too high, and the market is to-day quiet, with no demand, at 700 taels. The export of steam filatures this season to date amounts to 1,015 bales, against 3,017 bales at this time last season.

In hand filatures the falling off is even more marked; there was no business in these until the beginning of July, when, apparently, the buyer must have thought that the state of affairs in China would cause a corner in silk, for 700 taels were paid for H. M. Y. Blue Dragon Extra. The market has since declined to 635 taels without finding other buyers. The total shipments of hand filatures to date amount to 1,266 picul bales, a large portion of which is on native account, against 5,400 bales at this time last year.

	1899-1900. Taels.	1900-1901. Taels.
Steam filatures, lowest price....	780	650
Steam filatures, highest price...	1,000	940
Hand filatures, lowest price.....	690	635
Hand filatures, highest price....	860	700

The other principal articles of produce exported to the United States are drawn mainly from the North of China and consist of wool, strawbraid, goatskins, &c., and supplies of these have been very much restricted during the last half year. Of wool since the 1st of July the export is estimated at some 13,000 piculs, against 134,000 piculs in the last six months of 1899; goatskins, 250,000, against 1,500,000 for the similar term last year.

A review of the year would be incomplete which did not give prominence to the interruption to all development of the mining and railway concessions, secured from a reluctant Government at great cost of time and money by the various syndicates both in America and Europe. Active work had been prosecuted on some of the projected lines and complete surveys made of others, and the inauguration of a complete system of trunk lines was arranged for which it was felt would vastly promote geoeral commerce, while securing handsome returns to the investors. The first risings of the natives in June were directed against the engineers of the line running south from Peking, and all work was perforce abandoned in other quarters, while the existing roads in the North were rapidly destroyed by the Boxer insurgents, and have not yet been rendered serviceable to trade. It is probable that work in new coastruction will be curtailed for a considerable time, even after the political atmosphere ahall have cleared. It is unquestionable, however, that this country, teeming with a vast and prosperous population, and being exceptionally deficient in means of communication other than is offered by natural and artificial waterways, presents an unrivaled field for railway enterprise, and although capitalists may hesitate for a time to invest in China railway schemes, the initial difficulties in obtaining the concessions having been surmounted, it is not probable that construction will be indefinitely delayed for want of support, after order shall have been restored. Of all the concessions secured, that of an American corporation for the line from Hankow to Canton appears to present the most promising outlook, having two of the principal cities of the empire for its termini, and traversing a thickly populated region, abounding in mineral resources.

More immediate development may be hoped for in the line of steam traffic on the smaller navigable waterways of the country, which is permissible under the last treaty with Japan.

Under this treaty also, industrial enterprises to a considerable extent have been embarked upon, but only a moderate success has thus far rewarded their promoters in some instances, while in others, notably in the cotton spinning industry, disappointment and loss have resulted. The principal adverse factor in cotton manufacturing has been the difficulty of securing an adequate supply of the raw material, but this is likely to be compassed in the early future by increased acreage brought under cultivation.

Shipbuilding and dock companies have scored notable successes the past year. The natives, under foreign supervision, make excellent mechanics and artisans, and the supply is unlimited. Reference may be made to the development, within recent years, of the trans-Pacific steam traffic, so that at the present time no less than seven lines of steamers connect China and Japan with ports on our Pacific Coast and Vancouver, which indicates a remarkable increase in the volume of trade by this route, while a still greater traffic exists via the Suez Canal.

With respect to the immediate future of our trade, as has been already indicated, the dominant factor is political, and at present the outlook is not encouraging for an early settlement. There appears to be no prospect that the reactionists in control of the Imperial Court will soon yield to the demands of the foreign powers thus far put forth. A state of virtual anarchy exists over vast areas in the northern provinces and throughout Manchuria. The operations of the Russians in the latter section have been of a nature to foment, rather than quell, disorder. They seized the treaty port of Newchang after an unprovoked assault on the native city, in which amity and good order had previously been scrupulously maintained by the native authorities, and their aggressive course throughout has exasperated the populace and led to nameless horrors and reprisals. The pacification of this region, which was the seat of the most encouraging consuming markets for our cottons, is of great importance to our trade, but it seems likely that it will be the scene of war and disturbance for an indefinite time to come.

The importance of American commercial interests in Manchuria, and the danger of the loss of our markets there, should it become definitely incorporated in the Russian Empire, have been repeatedly pressed on the attention of our Government, but without apparent result. In fact, since their participation in the relief of the legations in August last, our authorities would appear to have become singularly indifferent to American interests in China, and in the words of a contemporary, epitomizing the comments of the German press:

"The American Government has put itself in the position of the beneficiary of the powers, and yet declines to co-operate with those powers; it shares the result of their efforts, and yet declines to pay its share of the expense in money or in men"—a view that is widely held by Americans in China.

As against these discouraging views upon the prospects of an early settlement of existing troubles may be set the unquestionable desire for a prompt adjustment on the part of all the more enlightened officials of the empire, of all connected with trade, and of vast numbers of the common people, (who are most erroneously confounded with the disorderly elements in hatred of foreigners;) so that when once a modus-vivendi is arrived at with the imperial authorities the arrangement will be gladly acquiesced in throughout the empire, and normal conditions of trade and industry will be rapidly reestablished, for the Chinese are, if anything, a most practical people where their interests are involved. It is generally believed that whatever arrangements are come to, conditions will be embodied looking to the widening of markets by the removal of obstacles and the reform of existing abuses in the fiscal system of the country. Ultimately, therefore, the present troubles, provided the integrity of the empire is preserved intact, will, it is reasonable to prognosticate, result in general advantage to trade, both foreign and native.

Great Trade Expansion in Australasia.

GOLD EXPORTS TO THE UNITED ST ATES MADE POSSIBLE—CONDITIONS DEPENDENT ON THIS COU NTRY'S TARIFF POLICY.

Special Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

SYDNEY, Dec. 5.—The business outlook in Australia and New Zealand is of and unprecedentedly bright character, commercial men of every class being unanimous in predicting a continued expansion of trade, both export and import, during 1901. A more auspicious time for the inauguration of the Australian Commonwealth could not have been chosen. Never was money more abundant, or employment more brisk; especially in New South Wales, the mother State of the new federation, where the ranks of the unemployed are composed mainly of unskilled laborers from the other States, skilled artisans of every kind readily obtaining work.

Much of the improvement is due to the cautious policy adopted by the various banks after the great financial crisis of a few years back. Not only was a drastic system of retrenchment vigorously enforced, but the old mode of making large advances on pastoral and other property not easily realized on was partially abandoned. The result has been an enormous increase in the amounts deposited in the banks, which has enabled considerable quantities of gold coin and bullion to be exported to the United States and other countries needing the same.

In 1899 the Australian and New Zealand imports of gold amounted to £6,460,816, and the exports to £19,001,051, leaving an excess of exports of £12,540,235. The figures for 1900 are, at the time of writing, incomplete, but they will show a considerable shrinkage, possibly of three-fifths, of the returns of 1899. This is being accompanied by a proportionately increaaed accumulation of gold in the Australasian banks and other financial institutions, awaiting safe and remunerative methods of inveatmen.

With the establishment of the Australian Commonwealth and the selection of a site for the federal capital, a great impetus will be afforded industrial enterprise in various directions. Already, in each of the Australian States, the building trades are more active than at any previous period, while the leading productive industries are rapidly expanding. In Victoria alone the value of the butter exported during 1900 will be close upon £2,000,000. The Australian exports of meat, grain, and other produce will also be beyond all precedent; as will the exports of coal from New South Wales.

Some idea of the material progress of Australasia during the last few years is afforded by comparison of the shipping statistics for tha last forty years. The shipping entered and cleared at Australasian ports in 1861 was 2,828,484 tons; in 1871, 4,229,904 tons; in 1881, 8,943,545 tons; in 1891 17,479,535 tons, and in 1899, 22,896,134 tons. The figures for 1900 will be considerably larger, in consequence of the increased number of vessels shipping coal cargoes from New South Wales.

The total trade, import and export, of Australasia in 1899 represented an aggregate value of £161,314,635, and it is believed that the figures for 1900 will show an addition of between £3,000,000 and £4,000,000. The principal articles of export are wool, tallow, hides and skins, breadstuffs, meat, wines, and minerals. The value of the exports of domestic produce in 1899 was £70,209,675, or an average of £15 15s. per head of population.

Prolonged periods of drought in portions of the Commonwealth have assisted in reducing the number of sheep in Australasia from 124,547,937 in 1891 to 93,645,309 in 1899. Since the commencement of 1900 the season has been favorable for lambing, and there is every probability of the returns for 1900-1901 showing a marked increase. The diminished wool exports have been compensated in some degree by enhanced prices, more particularly for medium and fine qualities, but there is every prospect of the supply reaching its old proportions within the next three or four years.

A steady rate of progress is being maintained in mineral production, the increased use of dredging appliances largely augmenting the output of gold. Smelting works for the reduction of silver and other ores have been established in various parts of the Commonwealth, and iron works on a large scale are being projected in New South Wales and Victoria.

In the various branches of the retail trade the indications of prosperity are everywhere clearly marked in the shape of enlarged premises, new business establishments, and improvements of every description. The steady increase of the public revenue in Australia and New Zealand has enabled numerous important but much delayed public improvements to be begun, including many miles of railway, to be constructed out of loan expenditure. At Sydney nearly the whole of the harbor accommodations is to be remodeled and increased by about one-third. New docks are also being constructed by private enterprise. Extensive harbor improvements are projected at Melbourne and Adelaide, and by the opening of what is practically a new harbor at Fremantle, steamers are enabled to have a port of call within twelve miles of Perth, the West Australian capital, instead of at Albany, 322 miles distant. In not a single instance are the slightest indications of retrogression to be found.

The bulk of the American imports into the Australian Commonwealth are taken by New South Wales, the commodities finding the readiest and most remunerative market, including agricultural machinery and implements, plow materials, (largely used for making so-called Australian plows,) reapers and bindera, arms, ammunition, and explosives, bicycles, and boots and shoes.

The progress of the American import trade in Australia during the last few years has been very rapid, the figures for New South Wales being in 1895, £634,268; in 1896, £1,729,871; in 1897, £1,887,877; in 1898, £1,602,954, and in 1899, £2,219,319.

The figures for 1900 will show a considerable advance on those of 1899, and a further increase is anticipated in 1901. In 1899 the value of the American imports to Victoria, £1,323,757, was higher than in any preceding year, and the rate of increase has been well maintained during 1900. Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia, Tasmania, and New Zealand each show results, but on a smaller scale, similar to those furnished by New South Wales and Victoria, amply proving that not only have American exporters regained their lost ground in Australia and New Zealand, but that they are also extending their antipodean markets.

The prospects of American business with the Australian Commonwealth and New Zealand are decidedly encouraging, but there will be increased competition in the kerosene trade directly the newly established refineries in Sydney and elsewhere begin being supplied with crude oil from Borneo. The abolition of inter-State duties within the boundaries of the Commonwealth will considerably facilitate business operations by the representatives of American houses. On this point the United States Consular agents in Australia are unanimous. The improvements effected in the steam service between San Francisco and Sydney will enable orders to be executed with greater promptitude, and with lowered freights occasioned by shipping competition in other directions, it would not be strange were the value of the American trade with Australasia to become doubled within the next two or three years. Australian mercantile men declare, however, that much will depend on the encouragement afforded by America to shipments of raw produce from Sydney, Melbourne, and other ports.

The President of one of the leading Chamber of Commerce in the Commonwealth has pointed out that the New South Wales import and export trade with the United States is about equally divided, the figures for 1899 being: Imports to New South Wales from America, £2,219,319; exports to America, £2,392,281. In 1898 heavy shipments of gold and wool caused the value of the New South Wales exports to exceed that of the imports by nearly three millions sterling, but this was an exceptional instance. In Victoria the direct shipments to American ports remain almost stationary in value.

Generally speaking, the situation is extremely simple. In Australia and New Zealand the United States is in greater favor than France, Germany, and other countries as a source of manufactured supply. American firms, with their experience of Californian and other industrial requirements, more readily understanding the wants of the Australasian. But the trade cannot be all on one side. If the Australasians are to buy American goods on a larger scale, they naturally expect Americans to become larger consumers of Australasian produce.

These considerations will largely influence the character of the Federal tariff. There is a strong Australian party in favor of a preferential tariff with Great Britain, Canada, &c., and its leaders have expressed a willingness to include the United States should a desire to that effect be expressed by the American Government. In the meantime the course of trade rests on a thoroughly sound basis, with every prospect of steady expansion, despite the many adverse influences at work in Europe as well as in the United States, and there is every reason for believing that the commercial relations existing between the United States and the Australian Commonwealth during 1901 will be more encouraging than during any previous period of their history.

JOHN PLUMMER.

The Unlisted Securities Market Last Year.

When curb market transactions began for 1900 the market found itself in a somewhat uncertain position. The panic of December, 1899, had very much unsettled values, and, though to a certain extent these had been rehabilitated by the improvement which showed during the last two weeks of that month, still the disorder which followed as a natural result of the extreme speculation of the earlier part of that year made itself felt and presented a new situation. Stock market values had to stand a new test. Eighteen hundred and ninety-nine was a year of speculation and enthusiasm, which in natural course had to be followed by a period of readjustment. This led to an irregular market, and for some time the true position of many outside stocks seemed uncertain. It was not long before the results of the previous year's operations began to show. Conservatism played much greater part in the development of market values thereafter, and more attention was given to dividend prospects and other elements that might legitimately affect prices than to the over-enthusiastic predictions of promoters and others, which had only too much influence during preceding months.

One fact which is noticeable throughout the entire record of last year's operations in the outside market is that the issues which received the largest amount of speculative attention the previous year were to a large extent neglected. It was seen that prices had been carried far beyond the point warranted by actual developments, and the result of having discounted the future appeared in a gradual retrenchment of values in many stocks which had enjoyed periods of extreme speculation. In the beginning of the year the upward movement which began late in December was continued until the recovery, natural after the declines suffered during the December panic, had run its course. During this time considerable activity was shown throughout the list generally, and without any special group of stocks assuming a place of pre-eminence. But after one or two months of comparatively large trading, the market became less active, and for a long time the transactions on the curb were very small, at times insignificant. At intervals throughout the year there were brief periods when the transactions assumed reasonable size, but not until the inauguration of the general improvement in stock values that followed the National election did the curb market again show daily totals that in any degree compared with the transactions recorded during the most active periods of the previous year. The phenomenal activity in all parts of the market during 1899 has signaled out that year and made comparisons with its records natural. References were constantly made to the price records of that year, and much disappointment was felt by many holders of stocks, the values of which very much depreciated when the enthusiasm of speculation was over. It is true, however, that the majority of substantial stocks, those which have claims to merit based on actual accomplishments rather than upon promises, have not suffered to any extent during the past year. In fact, most securities of this kind have shown improvement. To this extent the previous year's speculation was not carried too far, but an entirely different aspect is presented when stocks that may properly be called speculative issues are considered.

Prices were put under test and securities were made to answer more closely for themselves than had been the custom in the recent past. Of course, speculation went on as before and manipulation went on, but operations of this kind diminished considerably, as indeed was evidenced by the large retrenchment in transactions. In fact, the dullness was so great at times that some observers of the market, and among them some who still took most active part in outside transactions, were inclined to consider that the curb market was declining to such an extent that its future was made more or less uncertain. But this view was disproved by the resumption of activity that accompanied the improvement which showed in the stock market after election. But that such a view was taken shows how dull the market was at times during the year.

CAUSES OF DULLNESS.

One of the causes which led to this extreme dullness was the listing of a number of securities which supplied a fairly large part of outside transactions. Throughout the whole year issues were from time to time transferred to the Stock Exchange, but the movement of outside stocks toward the board was most marked at about the time active trading was resumed, in November. The more important transfers of securities to the Exchange affected an aggregate amount of about $350,000,000 of various issues. Included in these were several prominent industrials, notably National Tube, and one or two stocks in other departments, especially important being Amalgamated Copper and the Chicago and Alton securities. To some extent the loss of these stocks to the curb was made up by accessions in the form of new securities, but these in the total were much smaller than those which were taken from the curb.

The activity of November was continued into the last month of the year, but toward the end of December transactions fell off very materially. There seemed no very good reason for this in the conditions which prevailed, especially in view of the fact that the transactions on the Stock Exchange continued to be in enormous amount—in fact, in amounts unprecedented—but it may be that in this very fact is found some explanation of the decrease in curb market transactions. It was pointed out by some observers that the activity of the inside market withdrew to a large extent interests in the stocks dealt in on the curb, less attractive in most cases from the speculative point of view. Thus, instead of being helped by Stock Exchange activity, the curb was to this extent harmed by it. The amount of trading that was carried on in the earlier form of office trading, no doubt, to a large extent compensated for the loss in transactions in the active issues usually dealt in on the curb. Dealings of this kind were probably larger during the last two months of the year than at any time since the great activity of the previous year.

Investment stocks found good markets, and there was large demand for bonds and other securities not bought except for investment. The decline in mere speculative trading does not seem to be a fact to be regretted. The market cannot permanently benefit by exaggerated improvement in prices which necessarily are followed by discouraging reactions. The reason for the most serious declines which occurred during the past year is that the securities affected had been carried so far above their present value that a heavy decline was unavoidable. They were borne down by the burden of quotations far beyond their real value, a burden which it was demonstrated is very hard to bear. This fact was especially noticeable in some so-called electric stocks, which had been great speculative favorites, but which during the year were very much neglected, and nearly all of which sold at the end of the year at prices very considerably below those which were quoted at its beginning.

DIVIDEND RECORDS.

One proof of the real improvement which occurred in the position of a number of companies is found in the record of dividends for the past year. In some cases payments have been begun on the stocks of companies formed as late as last year, while in other cases dividends have been resumed by older companies which for a time had been obliged to suspend them. The paying of back dividends and the commencement of dividends on new issues give evidence of the real prosperity that has prevailed and offers the best explanation of some of the gains which were made during the past twelve months. Some few cases of the passing of dividends by companies which had just begun to pay them were recorded, but these were fewer than the cases of resumed dividends. The fact that some companies just starting their business, and having made one or two payments on their stock, should be obliged to suspend them is, however, a somewhat discouraging situation. It was to be expected that the reckless issue of new securities the year before last should lead to some results of this kind, and they were very generally predicted. They were, nevertheless, much to be regretted, and to some extent, at least, served to unfavorably affect other issues which succeeded in maintaining stronger positions. It would seem that in nearly every case where dividends were so suspended that a little reasonable foresight could have avoided such a necessity. And from this point of view there was scarcely any excuse for the establishment of companies on a basis which gave them little chance to maintain a reasonably sound financial position. It seems fortunate that the past year has brought on the market a much smaller number of new undertakings established on weak foundations. Such issues must need prove a menace to stock market values.

BANK STOCKS.

That speculative securities suffered much more than did those properly called investment stocks is clearly shown by the course of the stocks of local banks and trust companies. Though a few of these issues ended the year at prices lower than those which held in December, 1899, yet a far greater number of them scored advances which in many cases were very substantial. The development of the business of local financial institutions went on apace, and during the year evidence of increasing business was furnished on a large scale in several instances where capital was increased and other arrangements made for accommodating a broadening business. Several consolidations of importance occurred, some prominent banks and trust companies being merged in others. In nearly every case where such mergers were effected or capitals increased market improvement followed the changes. Late in the year the number of transactions in bank and trust company stocks actually effected on the curb very considerably increased. Several bank stocks and one or two trust company stocks became quite active in the outside market, and on some days supplied a fairly large proportion of the business done on the curb. This was something of a departure, as the amount of trading in this class of securities on the curb had been formerly small, most of such transactions having been made between offices. This was no doubt due in large part to the fact that other issues becoming less active failed to keep brokers busy, and they naturally turned their attention to stocks which could supply a larger amount of business. Thus the issues of local financial institutions were made to some extent to take the place of the substantial securities which were removed from the curb to the Stock Exchange. Among the bank stocks which became active in this way were National City Bank, the National Bank of Commerce, and Hanover National.

Naturally the bulk of trading was supplied by industrial stocks, and those commonly classed as miscellaneous, the list of these being much larger than other groups of stocks. In this department prices were irregular. A number of substantial advances were recorded, and not a few gains of many points resulted from the year's trading. But on the other hand, a number of declines occurred, though these most frequent in non-dividend paying stocks. As pointed out, the speculative issues suffered most, and included in these are the securities of several large industrial corporations which thus far have not been able to make any distribution of profits. In 1899 the prices of these issues were advanced with other more promising ones without much regard to immediate prospects, and so in turn they declined with other issues, which seem to have been even further away from any disbursements of earnings. Some of these issues were at times the most active on the curb.

SOME LARGE DIVIDENDS.

With the single exception of Amalgamated Copper, which on some days showed totals that exceeded any trading in the outside market, except that recorded during the most active part of 1899, the industrials showed larger totals than any other issues. The most interesting result of the transactions in this group were the phenomenal advances which occurred in a few issues, in which prices went far beyond any previous records. The most notable of all large dividends declared, and also because of the general belief in the phenomenal prospects of that company, advanced from week to week almost without reactions, until at the close it showed a net gain for the year of 325 points. The dividends paid during the year amounted to 48 per cent., an amount that exceeded by 15 per cent. the dividends of any preceding year. At no time were the transactions in the stock extremely large, although at long intervals a block of some size came upon the market. Within recent months most of the trading in the stock has been in very small amounts, but even these have sufficed to advance the price in the phenomenal manner referred to. The stock closed at 785, about 30 points below the highest price recorded for the stock, which was reached about the beginning of December. Singer Sewing Machine was another industrial that advanced in an extraordinary manner. During 1899 dividends of 100 per cent. were paid, but in the Spring of last year the distribution of profits for the first quarter of the year amounted to only 5 per cent. This rate was maintained during the following quarters, so that some holders of the stock were induced to part with it, seemingly because of the belief that the dividend rate had been permanently reduced, indicating supposedly a falling off in profits. Then late in the year came the news that the company was about to declare a stock dividend of 200 per cent. The announcement of this plan of the Directors was followed by a sharp recovery in the price of the stock, and it kept steadily going up until it reached 800, which for a time was bid for the stock. The new issue was ready for delivery at the end of the year, and the stock was then quoted on the basis of the increased capital at 265 bid. This represented a net gain of 245 points for the year. The business of the company was reported as steadily growing, and its activity abroad as well as here was pointed out as indicating the value of the company's business.

Procter & Gamble was another of the industrials to make large distributions of profits. On the common stock of this company a large stock dividend was also declared. The gain for the year was very substantial. Distilling of America underwent many fluctuations, and conflicting reports were had from time to time in regard to the business of the company. Eventually, however, the work of the committee appointed by the stockholders had some effect on the stock, and considerable improvement appeared in both common and preferred. The former closed lower than it did the previous year, but the preferred stock showed a net gain of over 2 points. Plans are under consideration by the committee to improve the position of the company, one matter that is being given special attention being an increase in the company's working capital to allow it to profit more largely by the opportunities presented to it. It was expected at the close of the year that some announcement would soon be made regarding the plans of the committee, which had been considerably delayed by litigation of one kind or another begun by some holders of the Distilling stocks.

The Steel stocks were fairly active issues, especially during the latter part of the year, when this group was considerably increased by the addition of several recently floated securities. National Tube, which was listed on the Stock Exchange, was later replaced by American Bridge, and with this issue came several others of less prominence. American Bridge was active on many days, and for a while supplied a very large proportion of the trading on the curb. Its securities improved considerably since they were first traded in, and at the close of the year they were selling at the best prices thus far recorded.

A somewhat peculiar situation was presented in the securities of the Virginia Iron, Coal and Coke Company. Notwithstanding the fact that the interest on the bonds of this company was regularly paid, the price of the bonds declined very sharply, and, though the closing price represented a considerable recovery from the lowest quotation for the issue, it showed a net loss of 25 points, the final price being 38, as compared with 63 in December of the previous year. The stock naturally went off with the bonds, declining at one time as low as 3, but closing at 5, a net loss of 22 points. At no time during the year was any satisfactory explanation offered for the very heavy losses which occurred in the company's securities.

A stock that attracted considerable attention was Inter-State Oil, which at times was active and which steadily advanced from the price established for it in the beginning. From 40 the stock was gradually bid up above 82, but apparently the advance was the result of pool manipulation. In December the price of the stock suddenly dropped from about 82 to 9¾, and on the last days of the year the stock was selling at 10. The trading in the issue, however, was always looked upon as something entirely apart from the general course of the market, and the drop in the price of the stock, therefore, attracted much less attention than it would have done under other circumstances.

COPPER STOCKS.

Prior to the listing of Amalgamated Copper, that issue showed great activity, which was accompanied by a substantial betterment in the price of the stock. At the beginning of the year Amalgamated was selling in the neighborhood of 80, and after moving about irregularly above and below this figure, the price settled around 85, and for a good while the stock was traded in at about this price without showing any notable activity. Then came the revival of interest in the stock referred to, and on some days transactions amounted to as much as 25,000 shares, and the price advanced steadily from about 85 to very nearly par. With this exception the copper stocks were not very prominent. The only other issues which attracted any general attention were British Columbia Copper and Union Copper. The former advanced from the opening price of the year of 10 to about 22, which was recorded just at the close. At the latter figure the stock was selling above 400 per cent. of its face value, a price which the friends of the company claimed was fully warranted by the development work on the company's property, and the value which that work showed the property to have. It was not known how soon the company could be expected to be making earnings that would warrant some distribution on the stock. Union Copper in the beginning of the year declining heavily, selling at one time below 3. Subsequently it rose above 5, and there was fairly active trading in the stock at about this price. It was stated by the officers of the company that the property had been very much improved during the past year, and that a point had now been reached which will lead to some distribution of profits in the near future, possibly during the present year.

GAS STOCKS.

At intervals during the first six months of the year considerable attention was given to local gas securities, owing to the many reports regarding the probable settlement of the local gas war which had been going on for a year or so with very disastrous results to all the companies concerned. Many times were rumors of settlement current which in the end proved illusive, but at last about the middle of the year a definite plan was agreed upon and local gas rates were restored. The stocks that were watched with most interest were the New Amsterdam issues, which company was the most aggressive competitor of the Consolidated Gas Company. At times these issues were extremely dull, but prior to the announcement of the terms of merger with the larger company the stocks became very active and were bought in large amounts, apparently for interests working in favor of the settlement of the gas war. As a result of the more favorable conditions following the settlement all the local gas securities appreciated in value, and such of these securities as remained on the curb ended the year with very substantial advances.

Among the out-of-town gas stocks there was not very large trading on the curb, though a few of these issues did come into special prominence. The natural gas companies practically all suffered more or less, and their securities were unfavorably affected. The Indianapolis Gas Company passed its usual dividend, and throughout nearly the entire list of these stocks and bonds considerable net losses showed in the final figures. In one or two cases improvement showed in the stocks of companies manufacturing gas which came into competition with the natural gas companies, but this movement was not sufficiently marked to attract more than passing attention.

CORPORATION TAX EVASIONS.

Loopholes in the Law to be Closed at Once—Largest Companies Escape Payment.

ALBANY, Jan. 6.—Just what Gov. Odell meant when he referred in his message to the need of amendments to the State laws governing the taxation of corporations is explained by an investigation of the taxes paid to the Controller of the State.

Under Section 183 of the Corporation Tax law all manufacturing, laundry, and other corporations which employ labor are exempted from taxation on their capital stock. Under this exemption the Standard Oil Company, the American Sugar Refining Company, and other large industrial corporations are permitted to escape the large tax payment which would be otherwise required of them.

The purpose of exempting this class of corporations from the State tax was to induce manufacturing establishments which would employ large forces of workmen to locate in this State, but it is held that the results have not justified the exemption. It is estimated that the taxing of manufacturing corporations, thus reaching the Standard Oil and other large corporations, would bring over $2,000,000 additional annually into the State Treasury.

Another loophole in the law is that which permits corporations to go into New Jersey, organize by the payment of a small organization fee, return to this State and conduct business, thus escaping taxation by paying a small annual tax to New Jersey.

All corporations which pay a tax directly to the State are exempted, under Section 202 of the Corporation Tax act, from taxation by local Assessors for State purposes. The object of the section was to prevent double taxation, but the result has been the escape from taxation on vast amounts of personal property. The direct State tax reaches but a fraction of the personal property of many corporations and the remainder escapes taxation for State purposes through the exemption by this section.

Trust companies are cited as examples of a class of corporations which escape taxation. They are taxed directly by the State on their capital stock, but their surplus and undivided profits, which in the aggregate amount to a sum twice the value of the capital, go untaxed. Last year the trust companies paid a tax on a total capitalization of $48,250,000, while $74,506,400 of surplus and $15,319,567 of undivided profits escaped taxation. It is estimated that an application of the tax law to the capital, the surplus, and the undivided profits would have increased last year the revenue derived from that class of corporations from $450,000 to $3,000,000.

Bills to change the Corporation Tax act, so as to cover some of the objections raised, are under course of preparation, and will be introduced in the Legislature within a few weeks.

INHERITANCE TAX RETURNS.

The State Received Over $700,000 During the Last Three Months.

ALBANY, Jan. 6.—The Collateral Inheritance Tax act has brought into the State Treasury during the last three months over $700,000, which is above the average for a period of that length. The bulk of that sum has come from New York City, which has always contributed the major part of the taxes collected under this statute.

The estate of Emma S. Schley of New York City paid the largest amount of taxes during the three months. Its contribution to the State cash was $261,494. The second largest tax—$73,903—was paid by the heirs of Wallace I. Andrews of New York City. The largest sum paid from the estate of a non-resident, and the third largest amount received from any source, came from the estate of Lloyd Tevis of California. That estate contributed $50,027.

It is expected that the collections from New York City will be very large during the current three months, as many of the old appraisers are concluding their work on estates which went into litigation over a year ago.

Egypt's Industrial Development.

Special Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CAIRO, Dec. 18, 1900.—The commercial and financial condition of Egypt during the passing year has been exceptionally depressing. The Transvaal war having broken out the last quarter of the past year prevented capitalists from investing money, while the serious reverses of the British Army in the early part of the war frightened away people, who otherwise might have embarked on commercial speculation. The Chinese crisis and the plague affair interfered seriously.

The most important blow, however, was the exceptionally low condition of the Nile ebb. Never during the last thirty years did it reach such a low state as it did during the present year. It was a dangerous blow to the cotton trade, which is the very life and maintenance of Egypt. The net loss to Egypt of this deplorable state is at least 33 per cent. of her usual average cotton product. The prices of cotton greatly fluctuated during the year, and the price of cotton in the United States greatly influenced Egyptian commerce. After the lamentable cyclone at Texas the price of cotton rose in Egypt $1.50 per contar.

The Bourse speculations were of a fatal nature to the respective merchants in particular and to the whole country in general. Never, perhaps, did Egypt sustain loases in such a wholesale manner as she did during the last three or four yesrs. No less than the startling sum of £18,000,000 (eighteen million sterling) was lost or rather gambled away in the Bourae. Such were the vicissitudes of fortune that several well-known families, who previously lived in riches and affluence, becaume practically poor and destitute. The uncertain state of the Nile and the conditions of the cotton growth and trade in the United States were the two chief factors in these losses.

Various bankruptcies, and especially the Industrial Bank at Alexandria, added to the consternation of the people. The net loss of the public in the latter alone amounted to £400,000.

Next to the cotton trade comes sugar manufacturing. It is made of the sugar cane, which is abundant in Egypt. There is a separate branch for purifying this sugar, and this year's product has been satisfactory.

The salt and soda department, which previously was a State management, has lately lapsed into the hands of an English company, with Mr. A. H. Hooker as manager. The same company has also monopolized Wady Natroun, which is so rich in phosphates and soda. These two latter materials could be obtained in such quantities that there shall be no need in future to import phosphates for fertilizing the fields from Europe, as it could be had here at much reduced prices. As regards the soda, the company has decided to start a soap factory in connection with its establishment, as it could be manufactured here far cheaper than any other place, owing to the abundance of the materials.

Two new companies have already started work for two different objects hitherto unexplored in Egypt. The one is digging for precious stones at Mount Sinai, and the specimens found there bid fair to the success of the enterprise. Valuable stones of unusually large size have been discovered, and in the course of excavations others of more abundance would undoubtedly be found. The other company is a gold mining one, having for its ares the extensive lands between the Nile and the Red Sea. The preliminary exploration has shown that the ore found there is exceptionally rich in gold, as chemical analysis has proved. Furthermore, they came across a rich marble quarry, of snow-white and finest quality, which in olden times was undoubtedly used for columns and pavements to the sacred shrines and temples of the Egyptians. The shares of the company, which were previously issued at £1 each, cannot be had at present in the market for double this sum.

Nothing definite could be said at present with regard to the Egyptian Markets, Limited. A good deal of complaint has been heard in connection with its management, as the net result of its income is only 30 per cent. of that held out in the prospectus. But as the company had new markets added to the old ones, and as its income is much greater during the Winter season, it is yet early to pronounce any definite opinion.

The Khedivial Mail Line and the Anglo-American Nile Navigation steamers are two companies mainly in English hands. The management of the former was not of a nature to reflect credit on the English name and inspire the public with confidence. Three of four of its steamers have already foundered; the last, the Cherkieh by name, was lost with several lives under the most distressing circumstances. The latter promises to do better, and is chiefly limited, as its name signifies, to the Nile. A deficit of £2,000 has been declared at the last meeting, but this was chiefly attributed to last year's season having been exceptionally bad, and it is hoped that this loss will soon be covered.

Though England is making her utmost to popularize her commerce in Egypt, it must be confessed that German articles are by far the more popular, owing to their being much cheaper. The only drawback about German goods is the slowness with which orders are executed. This may be owing, however, to overwork.

The prospect for next year is much brighter. The Transvaal war having come by that time to an end, and the Chinese difficulties smoothed in one way or other, people will have more courage and enthusiasm on embarking on commercial enterprises. The Soudan, also, is being slowly opened for trade, and people are already penetrating it as far as Kordofan. The cotton trade could be extended not only to these regions, but even as far as Abyssinia. As an example, I might mention Harrar, which is served by the port of Zeyla. The cotton trade there absorbs more than three-quarters of all the imports. American and Manchester gray sheeting are there in hard competition. The former is selling on a more extensive scale, owing to its being cheaper and washes better than the Manchester quality. The natives of the Soudan, Kordofan, and Abyssinia prefer unbleached cloth and twill, as they don't get so readily soiled and stand washing better. A good deal could be made in the ivory, feather, and gum trade, which are the three chief things at present which could be turned into good account.

American cotton goods are fairly popular in Cairo and Egypt. Also, American oils and fats, chiefly those used for mechanical purposes. Egypt is an agricultural country par excellence, and therefore if an American firm would take the trouble to push its agricultural machines great success may be expected in this line. Already the people are beginning to understand the superiority of such machines and similar ones. Even the Government has been compelled lately to order the supplies of materials, engines, &c., necessary to the State Egyptian Railways from the United States. Agricultural implements are in demand all over Egypt. A little exertion on the part of an American firm might secure great success.

Reports of Conditions of Various Business Centres.

RICHMOND.

It affords me pleasure to send you a brief statement showing the condition of the trade and industry of the City of Richmond, Va., at the close of 1900 and the promise for the ensuing year.

The improvement in almost every line of business in 1899 was of such a radical character that it could hardly have been expected it would be possible to record for 1900 an equal degree of progress. Happily, however, in this city statistics prove for the latter period even greater prosperity and advancement of its material interests. Its mechanical and manufacturing industries gave employment to 25,563 hands in 1900, an increase for the year of 4,340 hands; the capital employed in these industries was $19,125,980, an increase for the year of $1,793,640; the sales of manufactured products were $48,861,864, an increase of $7,494,941, or 18 per cent. more than the sales of the previous year.

These industries are of a numerous and varied character, covering over 100 different kinds of material, but the magnitude and importance of some deserve especial notice. The manufacture of tobacco in all of its forms is the leading industry, the sales for last year having amounted to $14,963,805. The iron and steel industries are next in importance, consisting chiefly of locomotive and machine works, with a capacity of at least one locomotive per diem; a shipyard, now engaged upon large Government contracts—torpedo boats, destroyers, and a cruiser—and orders from other sources; three plants of the largest fertilizer company in the country, the headquarters of which are located in Richmond, and a large plant of an independent company; establishments for manufacturing boilers, car axles, railroad spikes, structural iron, horseshoes, nails, tin roofing, &c. In addition, Richmond is noted for its works, mills, and factories for the production of large quantities of paper, paper boxes, paper twine, cedar and other wooden ware, wooden boxes for tobacco, &c.; flour and meal, tin tags and boxes, baking powder, meat juice, trunks and bags, and a number of other products. All of these and the minor industries of this locality have been actively engaged throughout the past year.

The jobbing trade in all staple goods has also shown, though not to an equal extent, decided improvement. The sales have been $38,634,700, an increase of $2,857,405, or about 8 per cent., over the previous year.

Other unclassified branches of trade have shared liberally in the increased business of 1900. The building trades for two years have been actively employed, and yet there are few houses for rent, with an active demand for medium-sized dwellings, indicating the full employment of the working classes of the city.

The total number of failures was remarkably small, indicating a sound and healthy condition of business.

This prosperous state of trade and industry was reflected in the transactions and condition of our banking institutions. For the year deposits amounted to $16,110,374, an increase of $2,398,124 over the previous year; loans and discounts were $15,454,902, an increase of $1,473,875. Clearances amounted to $175,653,845, an increase of $9,752,758. The total banking resources, including three trust companies organized in recent years, amount to $27,152,474, making. It may be remarked, a total increase in banking resources of the city in the last decade of $13,555,304.

A number of public improvements, some completed, others in process of completion, contributed much to our local prosperity during the past year, and will greatly stimulate and facilitate the industrial and commercial growth of Richmond in the future. To note some of the most important, the electrical development of the water power of James River and the conduit system for distributing that power, now nearly completed, will afford opportunity for conveniently establishing industries, great or small, and for operating existing plants upon modern and improved methods.

The construction of the Richmond and Carolina Railroad, connecting the Seaboard Air Line with Richmond, now the most northern terminus of that system, affords our merchants and manufacturers a new and direct outlet to the South, from which great advantages should be derived.

Enlarged and expensive terminals are being added by some of the railroad systems entering the city, including two new passenger stations, a viaduct for connecting the James River Division and the Peninsula Division of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, and increased tracksge at such terminals, all of which will greatly facilitate and dispatch the handling of our rapidly increasing traffic.

With such important factors in our favor as greatly increased banking and transportation facilities and readily available power for manufacturing purposes, we enter the first year of the century with the fairest promises of continued growth and prosperity, not only from our own resources, but also from the favorable conditions in the country at large, and especially in the South, upon whose markets we greatly depend, and which section, after marketing the immense cotton crops of 1898 and 1899 (each over 11,000,000 bales) is now marketing that of 1900, of about 10,000,000 bales, at over 10 cents a pound, for middling cotton, the highest price paid in the decade.

Trusting that this prospective view of Richmond's future may be realized, and that similar prosperity may bless the other sections of our common country, I am very respectfully yours,

Richmond, Va., Jan. 5, 1901.

SAN FRANCISCO.

In regard to the present and future conditions of trade and industry in our city we are much pleased to state that the optimistic views which were expressed last year have, in a great measure, been fulfilled. We may say now that for the second time in our history have the eyes not only of the entire United States, but of the world been turned to our coast in the most marked degree. The first time was about 1850, and, for a few subsequent years, when we were the great gold producing centre of the world. Then the thought was only as to what gold could be obtained, and, when men came here from all over the world, it was not with a view of settling but of gathering together as much of the yellow metal as they could and of returning to their homes in the Eastern States or Europe.

Now, since the Spanish war, and more recently during the disturbed conditions of international affairs in China, again it has become evident to all that our position here is of paramount importance to the United States, and, in fact, to the civilized world.

It certainly seems strange that with the natural advantages we have, and always have had, immigration has not been larger in our State. It is true we have made fair increase in population during the last decade, but nothing like what we should have done, when we consider the area of our State, which, if transposed to the Atlantic side, would reach from New York City almost to Savannah and extend inland saw 200 miles, and that in all this immense stretch of country there are only about as many people as are in the City of Chicago.

San Francisco, both the National and natural gateway to the Orient, is not only the metropolis of this great State and Coast, but is also its financial and commercial centre, containing nearly one-fifth of the population of the State. Other cities on our coast have developed an immense growth during the last few years, notably to the north of us, but realising that we are standing more than ever on the eve of immense developments in every line of business, we feel no jealousy, being assured that the increase of any one portion of our coast will be of advantage to all of the balance; the bulk of the immense trade which is sure to develop on the broad Pacific must pass through our port. Foreign Governments learned, when it became necessary to send large supplies to their armies in China, that no place was so convenient or available from which to draw and ship their supplies as San Francisco. Our own Government naturally came to this conclusion at the commencement of the Spanish war; since which time it is estimated that about $70,000,000 have been expended in this city for supplies, directly and indirectly for our troops in the far East.

Our State has been blessed with good crops in all the departments of agriculture and fruit raising industry. It is true, in some particular lines, they have been slightly below the average, but in others far in excess. Prices have been good, so that the farmer and fruit raiser have had no cause to complain when the net results were placed to his credit in the bank. The savings bank deposits and the Clearing House records of the commercial banks here show a most gratifying state of affairs, the latter particularly being the greatest ever known in the history of our city.

Our orange crop has been phenomenal, the largest in the history of our State; likewise our product of crude petroleum, which it has been estimated will amount for the year 1900 to 5,000,000 barrels, almost double the production in 1899. This is particularly gratifying, because there is one thing we lack more than any other, and that is cheap fuel, which has somewhat retarded the development of our manufacturing interests. There is no reason why this amount of crude oil may not be exceeded many times in the near future, which, combined with the advantages we have in our swift running mountain streams, which are gradually being harnessed to water wheels and dynamos, transmitting electrical power to great distances, thus enabling factories, mills, and industrial works of all kinds to be operated, will obviate the drawback.

The export trade of the city shows a handsome increase over last year, not counting Government supplies in transports, which, as we mentioned before, are not included, but are large in amount. Likewise, since June 14 last, when the coastwise laws were made applicable to the trade with the Hawaiian Islands; it is necessarily impossible to obtain proper statistics concerning our trade with them, because it is no longer necessary for our merchants to make public their record in the Custom House. Should these two items—that is, Hawaiian trade for the past six months and Government supplies and transports—be added the statistics of our exports would be enormously increased in volume. Our wharves and piers are crowded to their utmost with ships—in fact, vessels are lying in the harbor unable to find berths. Every effort is being made to increase the number and size of our wharves. The Harbor Commissioners have recently let a contract for four large piers, besides other contracts for the enlargement and extension of those already existing. A lease has been signed by the Governor to the San Francisco and San Joaquin Valley Railroad, which will construct an immense line of sea wall at its own expense. This will, however, require the ratification of the Legislature at its next session, but we feel sure there will be no difficulty about it.

The German line of steamers between here and Europe via Central and South America have had more freight offered than they can carry, and are making arrangements to extend their service by adding other vessels. We understand that the Pacific Steam Navigation Company and South American Steamship Company will shortly begin fifteen day service between South and Central America, Mexico, and San Francisco. The Panama Railroad has also chartered vessels to carry freight, touching along the coast and connecting with their line at the Isthmus. Our shipyards have all the work they can handle; two immense steamers of 11,000 tons each are being built here in addition to those recently launched in the East for the American Hawaiian Steamship Company, to trade between this port, the Hawaiian Islands, and New York. The two fine steamers of the Pacific Mail Company, of 12,000 tons each, will soon be ready to start for this coast. The four new steamers for the Oceanic Steamship Company will soon be plying between our port, Honolulu, and Australia.

Whichever way we look, we see nothing but a bright future in every line of industry, trade, and commerce, and, when the Pacific Ocean becomes the commercial arena of the world, which some have predicted would be in the next thirty years, surely our city will then be not only, as it is now, the metropolis of the coast, but will be one of the largest cities in the world.

RAILROAD IMPROVEMENT.

One of the most notable developments of the year was the steadily growing business of the railroads of the country, as shown by their weekly and monthly statements of earnings. Although the returns of 1899 were excellent in every way, those of 1900 surpassed them. In some weeks the improvement was remarkable, and in only one week was a net decrease shown, and that a most insignificant one. In the subjoined list will be found the weekly gains in per cent. as compiled by The Financial Chronicle:

ON THE LONDON EXCHANGE.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Last week the Stock Exchange had to stand the severest strain known for a long time. If it came through safely, it was mainly due to the strength and breadth of the American market. To the failures and panicky feeling resulting from the collapse of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited, was added an unexpected increase in the Bank of England rate, and even now when the crisis seems to be safely passed those who are disposed to look upon the gloomy side of things, fear that there is worse in store for the coming settlement, when some big differences must be met.

In spite of the large realizations which had taken place, especially in the American market, a favorable turn came Friday, when New York bought up all it could get at the lowest prices. This not only set Yankees booming, but put the other markets in better spirits, causing a decided recovery all around. consols finishing only one-half point lower, and home rails, after losing one-half to one point during the week, closing above the worst figures.

This upward movement in Americans continued without check until the close of the Stock Exchange yesterday, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul shares leading the list, with a rise of 20 points above the lowest figures, and closing at 16½ better than for the day. Northern Pacific rose 5½ points, Erie firsts 5, Illinois Central, 4½, Southern Pacific 4, Baltimore and Ohio 3½, Northern Pacific preferred 3½, New York Central and Hudson River 3½, Louisville and Nashville 2½, Norfolk and Western 2½, Southern preferred 2½, Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé 2½, New York, Ontario and Western 2½, and most others from one to two points.

Mines were the weakest market, but, after a depression in the earlier part of the week, a better tone prevailed yesterday, with some good buying in the South African department, Rands rising three-eighths of a point on French purchases, after selling down to 30⅝.

Bank of Spain's Report.

MADRID, Jan. 6.—The report of the Bank of Spain for the week ended yesterday shows the following: Gold in hand, no change; silver in hand, increase, 197,000 pesetas; notes in circulation, increase, 12,444,000 pesetas.

THE MANCHESTER MARKET.

MANCHESTER, Jan. 6.—Notwithstanding the easier cotton conditions at Liverpool, cloth makers adhere generally to the recent quotations and endeavor to improve the position, centring their hopes in the enlarged demand for India, now recovering from its recent severe afflictions and trade depression. Private dispatches received here indicate that the prospects for the Winter crop are encouraging, and this means a healthy demand for calico. Another good augury is the improving aspect of matters in China.

Although last week was somewhat broken, there was considerable inquiry, following the turn of the year, some of which proved difficult to negotiate. Of the numerous offers for India and China a fair percentage resulted in business. The minor eastern outlets, together with the Levant and South American markets, were not active. There was some demand for home trade. Yarns were irregular, although in a stronger position since the holidays.

Many manufacturers, under contract for two or three months ahead, are able to refrain from selling until better prices are forthcoming. The tone of the market is really healthy; it was not affected by the advance in the Bank of England rate.

STOCK EXCHANGE RECORD BROKEN AGAIN

Registered Transactions Pass the Two-Million Mark.

For the first time in the history of the Stock Exchange, recorded transactions yesterday ran beyond the two-million mark, establishing a new record some 300,000 shares greater than that recorded on Friday last—the up to that time record day. The magnitude of the dealings may best be understood when it is stated that in the first hour the total transactions ran beyond 650,000, or at the rate of over 10,000 a minute—and this included only the actually recorded sales. Were the unrecorded transactions included—for in the confusion many transfers were not heard of, while stop orders never are recorded—the day's dealings would no doubt mount up close to 3,000,000. The facilities of the Exchange were taxed beyond their capacity, and old-time brokers who seldom appear on the floor were pressed into service for the emergency. Even as it was, some of the busier firms had difficulty in attending to the execution of their orders. This, however, is getting to be rather an old story, for much the same difficulty has been experienced a dozen times since election.

The character of the market differed little from that of recent days, its main support coming from the large banking interests, who, apparently, for the carrying out of their numerous plans under way, are obliged to take large lines of stock—illustrated last week in the case of St. Paul and the Reading securities, which were advanced under the stimulus of the buying necessary to acquire sufficient stock for control. That other large deals are pending, not alone in the coal stocks and in the Granger issues, but in other departments, is frankly admitted, though what their nature is has not been disclosed. In addition to this bankers' buying, there was also buying for investment account with moneys released by the January disbursements, while at the same time the usual speculative element appeared.

The opening was more or less excited, but not so wild as on Saturday. The Reading issues, helped by the announcement that control of Jersey Central had been obtained for the system, opened up well above the close of Saturday—the common selling up 2⅞, the first preferred 1, and the second preferred 2¾. Delaware and Hudson was 4¼ per cent. higher than Saturday's close, while gains of from 1 to 2 points were made in Rock Island, Missouri Pacific, St. Paul, Texas and Pacific, and many other issues. This advance was due in large measures to the higher prices sent over by London and to the flood of buying orders.

As was not unnatural under the circumstances, the high figures tempted to profit taking by buyers in the previous week, large realizing sales appearing. This, in its turn, resulted in declines from the opening figures, and for a time gave the market a rather irregular and reactionary tone. These realizing sales, however, ceased after the first hour, whereupon, the buying orders continuing, the market first steadied, and then took on a tone of aggressive strength. Northern Pacific, which had lost about 3 points, rose about 5; Northwest, first losing 2½ points, afterward gained 3½; St. Paul, selling down to 155¾, rose to 162; Atchison common, declining to 45, rose to 47¼; Rock Island, from a low figure of 122¾, rose to 128⅜, and so on through the list. This upward movement, however, was too fast and too decided to hold, and in the late trading further profit taking caused another reaction; but in few cases were the recessions material, final prices generally showing net gains for the day.

Of actual developments influencing the market, there were none except in the cases of Tennessee Coal and Iron and Sugar. Tennessee Coal Directors, at a meeting held during the day, passed the dividend on the common stock, with the result that that issue broke over 6 points, while sugar trade officials announced the price of refined sugar 10 points. There was a variety of rumors, however, dealing particularly with the coal stocks, in which exceptional buoyancy developed in Delaware and Hudson, Reading, Lackawanna, and Ontario and Western. The latest report is to the effect that Ontario and Western is to be offered the control of Delaware and Hudson.

The industrial list was rather inclined to be neglected, though Western operators were reported buyers of the steel stocks.

In St. Paul stock there was further buying by banking interests, and while as yet no details of the Great Northern-Northern Pacific-St. Paul coup are forthcoming, some announcement is expected in a few days. Burlington, Rock Island, and Union Pacific were bought on reports of deals pending in respect to those properties.

RAILROAD STOCKS.

Burlington	3⅞	Erie	1⅞
St. West. pf., A	1¾	Illinois Central	1½
St. West. pf., B	1¾	Missouri Pacific	2⅛
St. Paul	4⅞	Ont. & Western	1⅝
Rock Island	3¾	North. Pacific pf.	1⅛
Omaha	2¾	Reading	2⅝
Del. & Hudson	10⅜	Southern Ry.	1
Lackawanna	5⅜	Balt. & Ohio	3½

INDUSTRIALS.

Am. Car & Fdy. pf.	1¼	Cons. Gas	2⅜
Am. Smelters pf.	1	Cont. Tobacco	1¼
Am. Tin Plate	3¾	People's Gas	2⅜

LOCAL RAILWAY SHARES.

Brook. Rap. Tran.	2	Metropolitan	1¾
Manhattan	1¾	Third Avenue	2½

The largest decline was Tennessee Coal, 6¾, while of the other active issues few showed losses of a point. Among them were: American Linseed Oil preferred, 1; Colorado Fuel, 1; Iowa Central, 1½; National Lead preferred, 1; United States Rubber preferred, 1¼.

During the day a number of excellent railway statements for the month of December were put out, including New York Central, with a gain of $358,490 as compared with the corresponding month last year, and Great Northern, with a gain of $100,630, while regular dividends were declared by Great Northern and Jersey Central Directors.

SALE OF THE JERSEY CENTRAL.

Directors of the Reading Authorize the Purchase of Stock — Method of Financing in Doubt.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.—The Board of Directors of the Reading Company to-day decided to accept the proposition made by J. P. Morgan concerning the purchase of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and President Joseph S. Harris will to-morrow go to New York to confer with Mr. Morgan and Charles Steele regarding the financing of the deal. Mr. Morgan will present the terms upon which the sale can be effected and Mr. Harris and Mr. Steele, as members of the Executive Committee of the Reading Company, will take them up and later report to the full board. The Directors held a meeting this afternoon and reached this conclusion after a session of an hour and a half.

In relation to the price the Reading Company must pay for securing the majority of the stock of the Jersey Central a prominent Director said there was nothing in the letter to denote what amount of money would be required to take up the proposition, and that this was the reason the committee was authorized to arrange for the purchase of the stock.

As to the manner in which the money is to be raised to pay for the stock, it is said there will doubtless be issued a collateral trust bond bearing about 4 per cent. interest annually. To secure this bond it is stated that the stock of the Central Railroad of New Jersey will be deposited with the Trustees. At the office of President Harris to-day, however, it was announced that this matter was not discussed at the meeting of the Directors.

While it is generally believed that eventually the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company will pass under the control of the Reading Company, nothing was done in regard to that company at to-day's meeting of the Reading Directors. The annual meeting of the Lehigh Valley Company will be held on Jan. 15.

The Directors of the Jersey Central held a meeting to-day, and it was thought that there would be some action taken regarding the sale of the property to the Reading, but according to President Maxwell and Secretary Graves the matter was not discussed. The Directors declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent., and then adjourned.

George F. Baker, H. C. Fahnestock, and other Directors and large stockholders in the Jersey Central declined to say anything regarding the terms of the sale except that all that had been published regarding them was mere guesswork.

The rise in Baltimore and Ohio stock was taken to indicate that its interests were being protected in the transaction. The Baltimore and Ohio has a practically perpetual traffic contract with the Reading, and the purchase by that company of the Jersey Central insures to the Baltimore and Ohio the continued use of the Jersey road's valuable terminals in New York. A report was current that the Baltimore and Ohio would be bought by the Reading. William Salomon, Chairman of the Baltimore and Ohio's Board of Directors, said of this report that some one was evidently buying its stock, to judge from the advance, but that he was not informed as to the identity of that purchaser nor as to his intentions.

MAYA REBELS DEFEATED.

Gen. Bravo Drives the Indians from Their Intrenchments.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 7.—A dispatch from Oaxaca, Mexico, says:

"Mail advices just received here from Yucatan state that the Government troops commanded by Gen. Bravo drove the Maya Indian rebels from their intrenchments at Ompicha a few days ago. Many Indians were killed. The casualties to the Government forces were light.

"Ompicha is eight leagues from Chan Santa Cruz, which is the capital and military headquarters for the Maya Republic, as it is now called by the leaders of the rebellion. The Indians have greatly strengthened their fortifications around Chan Santa Cruz and the Government troops will have great difficulty in taking that stronghold."

GARBAGE CONTRACT DISPUTE.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.—Garbage barrels stood untouched throughout the city to-day. The American Contracting and Manufacturing Company notified the Director of Public Works this morning that it was obliged to discontinue attempting to carry out its contract, alleging that such action was the result of interference from certain sources, and mentioning more specifically the arrest by the police on Saturday of eighteen of its employees. The company says it cannot go on until it is assured that all interference will be removed.

The men had been arrested upon the complaint of citizens that they were dumping garbage in vacant lots, to the menace of public health.

The company on Dec. 15 last took the contract for collecting and incinerating the garbage of the entire city during 1901 for $333,800. Ever since the award was made it has been said that the company did not possess the required facilities to properly remove and destroy the collections.

RANGE WAR IN THE WEST.

2,000 Sheep Killed by Raiders Near the Montana-Wyoming Boundary.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, Wyoming, Jan. 7.—Another fierce range war between the sheep and cattle owners has broken out near the Wyoming-Montana boundary. Feeling is very high, and both sides are openly declaring their intentions.

On Friday 2,000 sheep owned by R. R. Selway were driven over a cliff by a band of raiders whose heads were covered with gunny sacks. Those sheep which escaped death by the fall were beaten to death with clubs. The raiders are supposed to be the members of a recently organized cattlemen's association, whose object is to prevent the range invasion of the sheep.

Selway owns 75,000 sheep, and has incurred the hostility of the cattlemen. Both sides are very bitter, and Selway has offered a reward of $2,000 for the guilty parties. The sheep killed were valued at $12,000.

GAS WAR IN OHIO.

Whitney-Elkins Syndicate Look for Control in Hamilton.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMILTON, Ohio, Jan. 7.—What promises to be a gas war was begun by the city to-night on the Whitney-Elkins-Widener syndicate, which controls the Otto coke process, and is just completing the third plant of the kind in the world here. Hamilton owns its own plant, but an older private company, the Hamilton Gas and Light, has an extension line of mains. City officials heard to-night that the coke company was planning to become an extensive manufacturer of gas, acquire the Hamilton Company's mains, and drive the municipal company out of existence.

City Solicitor Hartkoff intended to file injunction papers to stop the work, but before he could do so the coke people put on record a petition restraining the city from interfering. Both petitions were filed within an hour of each other, but the coke company was first. The latter has hired ex-Solicitor General Maxwell as counsel, and a bitter local fight is assured.

SECURE CONTROL OF A BANK.

Interests in Fourth National, Grand Rapids, Acquire People's Savings Bank.

Special to The New York Times.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Jan. 7.—Fourth National Bank interests have acquired control in the People's Savings Bank, and at the annual meeting of the People's to-morrow eight Directors will be elected, six of whom, including President William H. Anderson, are Directors in the Fourth National.

The People's Bank was organized ten years ago, with $100,000 capital, and has $1,407,000 deposited. Stock sales to bring about the change were made at $1.40. President Thomas Hefferan and Cashier Charles B. Kelsey will remain with the People's Bank. This deal is forecasted to mean a consolidation of the People's with either the Fourth National or Grand Rapids Savings.

NEW SUPERINTENDENT FOR BELLEVUE HOSPITAL

ANOTHER PLACE FOR O'ROURKE

Commissioner Keller Says New Incumbent Will Thoroughly Reorganize the Institution.

Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller yesterday deposed Superintendent W. B. O'Rourke of Bellevue Hospital and appointed in his stead and to the Superintendency of the other city hospitals—Harlem, Gouverneur, and Fordham—Dr. George Taylor Stewart, the Superintendent and the Chief of Staff of the Metropolitan Hospital, on Blackwell's Island. The appointment, Mr. Keller said, marks the culminating point of the Commissioner's investigations into the abuse of patients by Bellevue Hospital nurses, as was revealed by the death of the Frenchman, Hilliard. It also marks the execution of the Commissioner's plan to put in charge of the various hospitals a physician of executive ability, who is solely responsible to the Department of Charities for the proper running of the institutions, and who solely will be held accountable if flaws are found in the administration of the hospitals.

Superintendent O'Rourke, who was deposed, was not requested by Mr. Keller to resign. On the contrary, he was appointed Deputy Superintendent under Dr. Stewart. Mr. O'Rourke, therefore, displaces Deputy Superintendent Rickard, one of the most efficient men in the department, who, ever since he was admitted to Bellevue Hospital as a patient, thirty years ago, has worked his way step by step toward promotion. Mr. Rickard, however, was given charge of Gouverneur Hospital, until recently in charge of Miss Stover. All of the appointees will enter upon their new duties this morning.

Commissioner Keller announced Dr. Stewart's appointment immediately after a conference with the committee of the Medical Board of Bellevue Hospital, and Dr. Robert J. Hill of the State Board of Charities. Mr. Keller said that the Medical Board was heartily in sympathy with the appointment of Dr. Stewart, and that he expected no protest from them or from any other quarter.

When seen after the meeting the Commissioner said that he expected Dr. Stewart to thoroughly reorganize the service wherever necessary.

"In my opinion Dr. Stewart is one of the best hospital superintendents in this country," Mr. Keller said. "For a great many years he has been superintendent of the Metropolitan Hospital, and during that time has kept the institution in a condition which met the unqualified approval of the State Board of Charities and his more immediate supervisors.

"Mr. O'Rourke will not be removed or transferred, but will be assimilated in the reorganization. Mr. O'Rourke is familiar with the hospital, and his undoubted honesty makes him of rare service to the department."

"What will your next step be in the line of your investigations?" was asked. Mr. Keller hesitated, then he said:

"I hope now after what I did to-day, I will not have to investigate further. I expect Dr. Stewart to work to the best advantage."

"What is the doctor's politics; is he a Tammany man?"

"I really don't know. Whatever his politics, he does not seem an active worker one way or the other politically."

"Is it true that O'Rourke was appointed to the Superintendency of the hospital by instructions of Mr. Croker?" was asked.

"I don't know," Mr. Keller answered wearily.

Dr. Stewart was present during the interview with Mr. Keller. The latter was asked whether the doctor might not state some of his plans for the future, but Mr. Keller said:

"I think the doctor's policy will be to do things and not to talk." Mr. Keller, in conclusion, said that in time the city would have to have its own training school for nurses, male and female.

When Commissioner Keller arrived at the hospital early from the New Amsterdam Hotel, he said he felt much improved. He started in at once to work with the Committee of the Medical Board.

Exactly what happened in the meeting Mr. Keller refused to say.

Dr. George Taylor Stewart was born in 1855 at New Milford, Conn. He went to the De La Salle Institute, and in 1873 entered the Hopkins Grammar School. He was in the class of '77 at Yale and '78 at Trinity College. In 1882 he was graduated from the Hahnemann Medical Institute, in Philadelphia, which is a homeopathic institution. He went to some of the larger cities in Europe and to Mexico, where he was connected as a physician with several railroad lines. He practiced in California, in Los Angeles, and in 1890 came East, and in March, 1894, was appointed as a physician on Ward's Island. He had been in the employ of the Charities Department since he came to New York, in 1890. From Ward's Island he was transferred to Blackwell's Island and made Superintendent of the Metropolitan Hospital, which the State Charities Aid Association and the State Board of Charities have pronounced as one of the best equipped and best regulated institutions of its kind in the United States.

An article appeared in the Charity Organization Society's weekly publication which told of the increased number of patients in private hospitals. When Superintendent Blair of the Outdoor Poor Department was seen he said that the conditions of the public hospitals and also the private ones was such that all available space was taken up. At the present time there seems to be an epidemic, he said, of pneumonia, grip, and bronchitis. Bellevue Hospital, with its capacity for 800 patients, is taxed so that if there was a catastrophe there would be trouble in getting available cots for patients. The capacity of the Charities Department Hospitals, which includes Bellevue, Metropolitan, City, Harlem, Fordham, and Gouverneur, calls for 1,785 patients. Over on the island in the City and Metropolitan Hospitals an order was issued yesterday that convalescent patients in those hospitals should be removed to the almshouse to make vacancies. Fourteen other hospitals, private institutions, which formerly took only emergency cases, such as accidents, have now been called on to take all cases. For this work they receive from the city 60 cents a day for medical cases and 80 cents a day for surgical cases.

New York, Roosevelt, and St. Luke's Hospitals are also complaining of increase, but these hospitals, which are private, do not get any compensation from the city. They keep on transferring patients to Bellevue, which is the dumping ground of the city. Only last week, according to Mr. Blair, Roosevelt Hospital refused to take a patient, claiming that they had no more room.

THOMAS J. MINNOCK MISSING.

Chief Witness Against Bellevue Nurses Cannot Be Found.

Assistant District Attorney Franklyn Pierce gave out yesterday that Thomas J. Minnock, the newspaper man who made the original charges against Nurses Davis, Dean, and Marshall of Bellevue Hospital, which led to their being held to await the action of the Grand Jury on a charge of having murdered a patient in the hospital, is missing and that he cannot be found. The District Attorney's office has used every effort to locate Minnock, and has had detailed on the case Detective Milburn of the Central Office.

It has been learned that Minnock last occupied his room at 63 Fourth Avenue on Wednesday night last. It is said that on Friday Minnock purchased a ticket for Grass Valley, Nevada County, Cal., and further than that he has left no trace behind him.

He has been wanted at the District Attorney's office for the last three days to go over the testimony he has given before the Coroner's jury, and enable that material to be prepared for presentation to the Grand Jury.

Minnock's assistance is also needed by the District Attorney's office in giving information that will lead to other witnesses being subpoenaed.

District Attorney Philbin states that he has directed his assistants to get the case ready for presentation to the Grand Jury at as early a date as possible. In the District Attorney's office it is declared that a conviction can be secured against the three nurses without the added testimony of Minnock, who made the original charges.

CARNEGIE TO BUILD A ROAD?

Report Says Action Is Due to Dispute About Freights with the Pennsylvania.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.—A persistent rumor in this city to-day was to the effect that as a result of his dispute with the Pennsylvania Road over freight rates Andrew Carnegie will build a railroad of his own from Pittsburg to the seaboard. According to the information that found its way to brokers' cars, a contract had been awarded to Drake & Stratton of New York for the building of 150 miles of the road.

As set out in the story, the plans provide for the building of a line from Pittsburg to a point below Baltimore, where an option is said to have been secured on land with a deep water frontage for a terminal. The road, it is said, would be sixty minutes shorter than the Baltimore and Ohio and would tap iron-mining country at Uniontown, Wheeling, and Morgantown.

The version of the contract as given here was that the price for the 150 miles was $25,000,000, and that enough money would be spent to make the roadbed the finest in the East.

President J. Wainwright of the Drake & Stratton Company was emphatic in his denial of the story.

"There is not a word of truth in it," he said. "Drake & Stratton have not got the contract for any work for Andrew Carnegie; they have no knowledge of any such road; they have not even been asked to bid on any contract for Carnegie."

ARMY OFFICER ARRESTED.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 7.—This afternoon Secret Service Agent E. P. McAdams arrested on Royal Street, this city, Capt. C. W. King, Quartermaster and Supervisor of the Government work at Fort Morgan, Ala. Capt. King had just received $1,000 in bills from J. H. Hobson, a contractor on Government work at the fort.

McAdams, with a local detective as witness, searched the Captain and found the roll of money, King telling them if it was any value to them to know that he would say he received the money from Hobson. All the bills had been previously recorded so that McAdams was able to identify them.

Hobson testified before United States Commissioner Rickarby that for some time he had been having trouble in carrying out his contracts on buildings at Fort Morgan, about 50 per cent. of the material he furnished being rejected as unsatisfactory. About eight months ago King approached him and substantially said if Hobson made an arrangement with him he would not be so hard on him. The amount named by King was $5,000, and as failure on the contracts meant ruin, Hobson agreed to pay $3,000. King said he would accept that amount, as he had caused him loss by being hard on him. Hobson paid King $500 in October, and the same amount in November, and $1,000 to-day. Capt. King was bound over in the sum of $10,000, but up to 7 o'clock had not made his bond.

King is a volunteer officer. He enlisted at Dubuque, Iowa, in 1898, receiving the appointment of Captain and Assistant Quartermaster. He served in Porto Rico during the war, superintending loading and unloading of transports. He was assigned to Fort Morgan in April last. He has a wife and two children, and has been well received here socially. He is said to have well-to-do relatives in Iowa.

BIG MINING DEAL IN MEXICO.

American Company Pays $35,000,000 for the Guggenheim Interests.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 7.—A dispatch from Monterey, Mexico, says:

"I. J. Seligman, financial agent of M. Guggenheim, Son & Co., in Mexico, announces that the negotiations for the purchase of the Guggenheim smelting and mining interests by the American Smelting and Refining Company had been completed.

"The price paid for the Mexico properties was $35,000,000 in gold."

BOSTON ELECTRIC LIGHT DEAL.

J. P. Morgan & Co. to Form a Consolidation of Two Companies.

BOSTON, Jan. 7.—At a meeting of the stockholders of the Boston Electric Light Company, held in this city to-day, it was voted to lease the property of the company to a new organization to be formed by J. P. Morgan & Co., for a term of not more than ninety-nine years, at an annual rental of 10 per cent.

The stockholders of the Edison Electric Light Company, it is understood, at their next meeting, will take similar action, which will result in a consolidation of the Boston Electric Lighting interests.

The meeting was entirely harmonious, 20,388 out of a total of 30,000 shares of stock represented being voted in favor of the proposition. President Gilman called the meeting to order and read the offer in behalf of J. P. Morgan & Co., to lease the property at a rental equivalent to 10 per cent. per annum on the capital stock.

It is understood, however, that a lease will not be executed unless a lease of the Edison Company is made at the same time. The Presidents of both companies will act as managers of the business of the new organization, jointly. A right will attach to each share in the present companies to subscribe to one-half in the new lessee organization. These new shares will be 5 per cent. cumulative preferred shares, with a right to further participate in earnings under certain conditions. President Gilman stated that the Directors had given authority to the President and counsel to confer personally with Mr. Morgan before accepting the terms of the lease. As a result of this conference, the Directors had approved the lease to the company, which would be organized with a cash capital of $3,650,000.

A stockholder in the company asked what it was proposed to do with the $3,650,000 of new stock, to which the reply was made that a part of it at least would be used in the New England lighting field by securing the stock of companies in other cities and effecting other consolidations where they would prove economical and beneficial.

DECLARE DR. ROBERTS SANE.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Jan. 7.—Dr. Charles H. Roberts, the millionaire retired dentist of Oakes, opposite this city, whose daughter, Frances, has begun proceedings to have her father declared incompetent and a committee appointed to manage his property, came to Poughkeepsie to-day and called at the office of his lawyer, Frank B. Lown. He then sent for the Superintendent of the Hudson River State Hospital for the Insane and three practicing physicians of Poughkeepsie.

At his request, the doctors gave him a long examination and then expressed a willingness to testify to his sanity and competency, although the doctor is eighty years old. Miss Frances Roberts said to-day that her only motive in instituting the proceedings was to have her father's estate protected, as she believes that he is mentally unfit to manage it. Her brothers and sisters take her part in the controversy. The case will come before a Sheriff's jury in Kingston the latter part of this month.

HENRY HART TO DEMAND 25,000 SHARES TO-DAY

Has Money to Redeem All His Third Avenue Stock.

HOLDERS SAID TO BE UNEASY

Report that Much of the Collateral Deposited One Year Ago Has Been Disposed Of.

This is the day of reckoning for a number of prominent Wall Street financiers, who at 10 o'clock will be called on to deliver 25,000 shares of the stock of the Third Avenue Railroad Company, formerly owned by Henry Hart, the founder and at one time President of the road, which he pledged with the Wall Street people just a year ago.

At 10 o'clock Albert J. Elias, Mr. Hart's son-in-law, will begin a tour of the Street armed with $2,500,000 in cash, and in return for this he will demand of the bankers that they give him the 25,000 shares of stock that they hold as collateral. To all accounts there will be members of the syndicate that got the stock from Mr. Hart who will be unable to meet Mr. Elias's demands, and there are said to be some lively times in prospect if they fail to come to time. This much is established, according to the statement of Mr. Elias himself made last night. The cash is in hand, and the stock will have to be delivered. There will be no compromise and no delay will be brooked.

So after a year that has been full of incident and trouble to him, Henry Hart will again come into his own. In spite of his infirmities, his friends state that he has been looking forward to the time when he can again control the property for which he toiled so incessantly. It has been broadly stated by Mr. Hart's friends that at least some of the members of the syndicate sold the collateral they held long ago, there never having been in their minds a possibility that Mr. Hart would ever be able to redeem it. It is said that even those members of the syndicate that will be able to meet Mr. Elias's demands have had to go down deep into their pockets to obtain the stock of which they were short for so long a time.

It was due to Mr. Hart's efforts to finance the Third Avenue Company that the pledge of the stock was made. When other means failed the syndicate, in which many of the most prominent houses in the Street are interested, was formed and with its members Mr. Hart deposited nearly $3,500,000 worth of stock. At that time the stock was quoted in the market at 120, about the same as it is to-day. The agreement between Mr. Hart and the syndicate was that he should sell to them at par—20 points less than the market value—about $1,000,000 worth of the stock.

This was profit to the syndicate at once of $200,000. On the remaining 25,000 shares of stock Mr. Hart borrowed its par value, $2,500,000, the agreement being that they were to hold it for one year, at which time Mr. Hart was to have it back at the same price. If he was unable to take up the stock at the expiration of the year the syndicate was to have the right to buy it at 125.

There were troublous times for Third Avenue after that. When the crash came the stock sold down to 50, and almost immediately went back to par when it became known that the Metropolitan Street Railway Company had obtained control, and had made a lease under the provisions of which they guaranteed in four years 5 per cent. on the capital stock, in six years 6 per cent., and in eight years 7 per cent. It has been maintained by Mr. Hart's closest friends that many of the troubles of Third Avenue were caused by some of the members of the syndicate who were short of stock.

Since it became known about ten days ago that Mr. Hart had raised the money to take up his stock there have been all kinds of efforts made by some of the syndicate members to cover themselves. Several days ago it was again stated that Mr. Hart had failed to raise the $2,500,000 and the hopes of the shorts were revived. The stock is held altogether as an investment on account of the Metropolitan lease and guarantee, so that it has been almost impossible for the syndicate members who expected to be called upon to obtain it.

It was stated yesterday by one of Mr. Hart's friends that the Metropolitan people had been offered 140 for their holdings of Third Avenue stock by a syndicate which will have Mr. Hart's 25,000 shares as a nucleus for a pool, and that the offer has been refused. This offer, it was said, was based upon a provision in the lease to the Metropolitan which states that while the company guarantees the dividends given above in the periods stated, the leasing company can, in its discretion, and if the earnings of the road warrant it, declare a dividend on the stock before the expiration of the four years. It was said that this dividend might soon be declared from the fact that the road had earned a sufficient profit to warrant it, the earnings having been largely increased since the Forty-second Street and Broadway branches were completed.

Mr. Elias said last night that he was ready to call for Mr. Hart's collateral. "I will begin at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning," he said, "and expect to finish some time before 3. Just what the finish will be is purely guesswork, but the demand for the stock will be made, the cash will be ready, and I shall expect an immediate compliance with my demands. There will be 25,000 shares asked for, and what amount of money it will take to redeem them at $100 a share will not take long to figure."

"Is it true," Mr. Elias was asked, "that some of the members of the syndicate have asked for a compromise on account of their inability to deliver the collateral?"

"I do not care to talk about that matter now," was the reply. "Whatever of details there may be will be made known to-morrow."

Mr. Elias also refused for the present to discuss the refusal of the Metropolitan people to part with their holdings at the price stated.

STATE CONSUMPTION HOSPITAL.

Building in the Adirondacks to Cost $100,000.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 7.—Dr. Willis G. MacDonald of the Board of Trustees of the State Hospital for treatment of incipient pulmonary tuberculosis, has been designated by his associates to confer with State Architect Heins regarding the buildings to be erected in the Adirondacks, probably at Ray Brook.

Dr. MacDonald has received data from hospital authorities in this country and abroad, and the plans which will be drawn will contain the best ideas contained in all. It is likely that the structure will be two-story, instead of one, as was first proposed, and it will cost at least $100,000. Its construction will be frame with a veneer of brick. Of the $50,000 appropriated but $1,000 has been expended. An appropriation of $100,000 more will be asked of the Legislature this Winter. The cost of patients is estimated at $7 each a week. The hospital is to have a capacity of 200.

Havemeyer-Arbuckle Fight Still On.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Jan. 7.—Despite the persistent rumors that the Havemeyers and the Arbuckles have effected an adjustment of their differences, the local attorneys who are fighting the issues appeared in the Circuit Court to-day to contest the motion made by Arbuckle Brothers for an inspection of the books and business affairs of the Woolson Spice Company. The plaintiff desires to see the books and papers of the company in order to secure additional evidence for their side of the case. It appears there will be an exhaustive fight over the question which will sweep the way clean to the Supreme Court.

ORPHAN ASYLUM ON FIRE.

At Least Fourteen Lives Known to be Lost in Rochester Institution—Fire Not Yet Under Control.

ROCHESTER, Jan. 8.—Fire broke out in the Rochester Orphan Asylum at a late hour to-night.

At this time (2:30 A. M.) the blaze is not yet under control.

At least fourteen lives are known to have been lost.

A GERMAN TARIFF WAR?

Herbert Bismarck Said to Have Declared that a Sharp Policy Against America Will Be Pursued.

BERLIN, Jan. 7.—The Berlin papers reprint an alleged interview granted by Prince Herbert Bismarck to a representative of Il Corriere Della Sera of Milan, in which the Prince is represented as asserting that the great German industrial organizations, with the approval of Emperor William and Count von Bülow, Imperial Chancellor, have compromised with the Agrarians, and will meet the United States with a sharp protective policy. Sixty marks a ton on grain is mentioned as an illustration.

Some of the papers cast doubt upon the authenticity of the interview, but The Berliner Tageblatt sees in it a fresh confirmation of the recent statements of Count von Klinckowstroem, the Agrarian leader. The Tageblatt severely deprecates a tariff war with the United States, the cost of which, it contends, would be borne by German trade, Germany's flourishing shipping, and German consumers generally.

The National Zeitung says:

"We cannot believe that a diplomatist like Prince Herbert Bismarck would openly advocate a policy favoring Russia at the expense of the United States."

The semi-official journals, commenting upon the interview, declare that nothing has been settled regarding the tariff.

NEW WATER SUPPLY PLAN.

Syndicate Has a Scheme to Furnish New York with Water from Orange and Sullivan Counties.

Special to The New York Times.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Jan. 7.—For several weeks past engineers have been at work in Upper Orange and Sullivan Counties. Their movements were shrouded in as much mystery as was possible, and not until to-day has it become known what their work portends.

From authentic sources it has been learned that a syndicate of men with unlimited capital has conceived a plan to furnish New York City with a plentiful supply of water. Among the hills of Western Orange and throughout the whole extent of Sullivan County is a perfect network of lakes, which for years have been kept in repair by the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company and have served as feeders for that company's now unused waterway. It is the plan of these capitalists to conduct the water from as many of these lakes as may be necessary to furnish an adequate supply, by means of pipes, to one immense conduit. This will follow the course of the canal to the spot near Rondout, where it joins the Hudson River, and thence a pipe will be laid on the bottom of the Hudson to New York City.

The greatest elevation of the lakes is 2,000 feet above sea level. They are all fed by springs, and could furnish a supply millions of gallons in excess of the amount needed.

CONGRESSMAN NEVILLE ILL.

Salt Brine Injected Above His Heart to Prolong His Life.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—William Neville, Congressman from Nebraska and formerly member of the Illinois Legislature, is critically ill with pneumonia at his home near the Capitol. Salt brine has been injected above his heart to save his life. The injection was resorted to after Mr. Neville had been weakened by hemorrhages.

Mr. Neville is fifty-eight years old and a native of Washington County, Ill. He was elected to the State Legislature as a Democrat in 1872. He has been Judge in Nebraska, and was re-elected Congressman last Fall.

Reports from the Congressman's bedside this afternoon indicated death was close at hand, and might come at any time.

DR. BUSHNELL'S APPOINTMENT.

Selected as Pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Minneapolis.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 7.—The Pastoral Committee of the Westminster Presbyterian Church has decided upon the Rev. Dr. John E. Bushnell as pastor to succeed the Rev. Pleasant Hunter. The church is expected to confirm the choice of the committee.

For the past few weeks Dr. Bushnell has been filling the Westminster pulpit, having been engaged for a term of two months. When the arrangement was made it was not understood that he was to be considered a candidate. His salutatory at the first service, in which he defined his position, was delivered under trying circumstances, and gained the admiration of the people. The Pastoral Committee saw the trend of opinion, and has acted accordingly.

Dr. Bushnell's last pastorate was the Phillips Presbyterian Church, New York City, from 1895 until the consolidation of that church with the Madison Avenue Church in 1899, when he became joint pastor of the Madison Avenue Church with Dr. Johnston until Jan. 1, 1900.

WARRANT FOR POTTER PALMER.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—A warrant has been issued by Justice Everett for the arrest of Potter Palmer, multi-millionaire and proprietor of the Palmer House, on a charge of keeping the saloon in his hotel open on Sunday. The warrant was issued upon complaint of Frank Hall, who recently endeavored to close the Sunday theatres. Mr. Hall swore that Potter Palmer, "on Jan. 6, 1901, did keep open a tippling house, or a place where liquor was sold or given away, upon the first day of the week, to wit, the aforesaid date, commonly known as Sunday."

In event of conviction upon this charge Mr. Palmer may be fined $200 or less.

ROCKEFELLER NEW YEAR GIFTS.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Jan. 7.—John D. Rockefeller to-day distributed gold pieces to the railway men, expressmen, and others who help him during the year; to the help on his place, the minister, and the sexton of the Baptist Church.

This is an annual custom, and usually occurs at New Year's, but was delayed this year owing to the death of Mr. Rockefeller's grandson. He also agreed to pay $2,000 for improvements to the Baptist church. The surviving McCormick child is able to be up and to play in the nursery.

Another $200,000 Gift by Dr. Pearsons.

BELOIT, Wis., Jan. 7.—Dr. D. K. Pearsons has donated $200,000 more to Beloit College. The condition of the gift is that $150,000 be secured in addition. Friends of the college believe this amount can be raised. This gift is the first of a series by which the Trustees hope to add $500,000 to the endowment fund.

MRS. ASTOR'S ANNUAL BALL

Society Attended in Larger Numbers Than Ever Before.

Mrs. Astor gave her annual ball at her residence, 842 Fifth Avenue, last night. This ball is perhaps the most regular and representative function of fashionable New York society. It has been given by Mrs. Astor on the first or second Monday of each recurring January for over a quarter of a century, save for a few years when the hostess was in mourning.

Through all the changing conditions of New York social life, the waxing and waning of sets, and the coming and passing of hosts and hostesses and leaders, Mrs. Astor has continued to wield the only sceptre possible or permissible in a democratic country—that of womanly kindliness, refinement, discretion, and tact.

Her annual entertainment is therefore pre-eminently one at which the most representative men and women in New York society assemble, and last night's ball was no exception to the rule. It was somewhat larger than usual; in fact, the largest ball Mrs. Astor has ever given. Some 600 acceptances from the thousand or more cards issued were received, and there were few absentees among those who accepted. Mrs. Astor's functions are famous for the perfection of their appointment and the beauty of their decorations, and last night's affair more than fulfilled the expectations of the guests.

It was late before the guests began to arrive, as many came from the opera, where Jean de Reszke in "Aida" had drawn a brilliant house, and others from several handsome dinners—notably one given by Mrs. H. Mortimer Brooks. It was fully midnight before the last guest had arrived. For the ball the adjoining house of Col. John Jacob Astor, on the south, was also thrown open, so that the two houses, which are really one building, gave large space for the entertainment.

The entrance to the house was ban

Mrs. W. Starr Miller, white satin with large lover's knots of black velvet; diamonds.
Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry, white satin trimmed in silver; diamonds.
Marquise de Talleyrand Perigord, superb gown of lilac and black brocade trimmed with mauve velvet; large bow of velvet on the shoulder; a diamond necklace and tiara.
Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, white satin and diamonds.
Miss Bishop, pink crepe de chine.
Miss Katherine Pratt, white tulle and crepe de chine.
Mrs. Herbert Eaton, gray satin with white lace and diamonds.
Mrs. Alfred Seton, white tulle and silk.
Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, light blue combined with turquois panne and turquois and pink in the hair.

THE VANDERBILT WEDDING.

All Arrangements at Harborview Are Completed.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Jan. 7.—The decorators and electrical workers are now in possession of Harbourview, where the wedding reception and breakfast of Alfred G. Vanderbilt and Miss Elsie French will occur Monday. Mrs. French, Miss French, and Mrs. Eaton were directing the final arrangements for the event. Mrs. French sees every one who calls at Harbourview, hears their business, and consults immediately with Miss French and Mrs. Eaton. Everything in the way of arrangements for the wedding and the reception may now be said to be perfected.

The horses from the Vanderbilt farm in Portsmouth were brought to Mrs. Vanderbilt's stable to-day and to-morrow the additional horses will come from Mrs. Vanderbilt's stables in New York. The Breakers is already for the coming of Mrs. Vanderbilt and her family, who are expected Wednesday, while the other members of her family who are coming up for the wedding will begin to arrive Friday. Mrs. Vanderbilt will remain at The Breakers for at least a week after the wedding, but the stay of Mrs. French will be for the remainder of the Winter.

Gen. and Mrs. Herbert F. Eaton will go to New York soon after the wedding to accept a number of invitations they have received from relatives and friends.

Miss French has selected the musical programme for her bridesmaids' dinner Saturday. Among the number are "The Blue and the Gray," "Ma Rainbow Coon," "Ma Tiger Lily," "Just Because She Made Those Goo-Goo Eyes"; selections from "The Ameer," "The Rounders," "Casino Girl," "The Singing Girl," "Foxey Quiller," "The Idol's Eye," "The Geisha," "Broadway to Tokio," and "Robin Hood." Franko's Orchestra will play at the wedding breakfast and reception.

During the reception at Harbourview on Monday all the gifts will be brought from the bank vault and exhibited to the guests, after which they will be sent back to the vault.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt arrived from New York this evening and dined with Miss French. He will remain here until his mother arrives.

CASTELLANE CASE ADJOURNED.

Hearing Postponed to Await Affidavits from Europe.

The hearing in the injunction proceedings brought by Anton J. Dittmar, as assignee of Asher Wertheimer, a London dealer in bric-a-brac, against George J. Gould and the other trustees of the estate of the Countess de Castellane, to restrain them from paying her and the Count de Castellane any money pending the result of the suit, was adjourned yesterday until Thursday.

Samuel Untermyer, counsel for Mr. Dittmar, explained to Justice Beach that the affidavits on behalf of his client had not arrived from Europe, and he therefore asked for a postponement until Thursday next. C. A. Gardiner, counsel for the Goulds, did not oppose the motion for adjournment. It was stated yesterday that neither the Count nor Countess de Castellane would file affidavits in the case. They will rely on the defense put up by the trustees of the estate of Jay Gould.

BROUGHT 3,000 MILES TO INSANE ASYLUM

WHITE PLAINS, Jan. 7.—Biting, kicking, and continually trying to escape from his attendants during a three-thousand-mile trip, so he could leap off the train, Arthur Humbert, a New Yorker, was brought all the way from Seattle, Washington, on Sunday night to White Plains by his brother and a soldier of the United States Army, and confined in Bloomingdale Asylum as a lunatic. As soon as he reached the White Plains station he was examined by physicians, who pronounced him insane. A large trunk, tagged "Arthur Humbert, Seattle," accompanied the owner over the Lake Shore, New York Central, Boston and Albany, and Harlem Railroads to this place.

Humbert, who has various hallucinations, is insane, it is alleged, principally over the army and the Klondike gold fields. He imagines that he owns all the gold mines of Alaska. He became insane several years ago, it appears, and ran away from New York and landed in Alaska. From there he went to Seattle and enlisted in the army. For some time his relatives have searched the country over for him, and it was only by accident that he was discovered on the Pacific Coast.

Humbert was brought into New York State without a commitment. He apparently knew of this, because during the transfers from the Lake Shore to the New York Central Railroad he tried to break away from his keepers, at the same time crying out: "I am not insane. I want to be sent to New York."

When Chatham was reached and an attempt was made to lead him on board a Harlem train bound for White Plains he created a panic among the passengers in the waiting room by striking out right and left. "You can't take me. I refuse to go," he yelled at the top of his voice. Several women became hysterical, while faint-hearted men fled in alarm. Humbert clung to a seat and refused to budge. The soldier and his brother tried to release his hold, but he seemed to be suddenly furnished with great strength, and though they tugged and pulled yet they could not get him out. Finally several train hands came to their assistance, and Humbert was carried, striking and biting, to the smoking car. Before the train started he jumped up from his seat and made a dash for the door, but was caught in the nick of time and held.

At White Plains the insane man refused to leave the train. "I am going through to New York," he exclaimed. "I dare you to take me off."

He finally calmed down and walked into the waiting room. Two physicians were in the baggage room ready to examine him. They were Dr. Frederick Petersen of 4 West Fiftieth Street, New York, and his associate, Dr. Bailey. They made a hurried examination, declared him insane, and despite his objections he was hurried away to Bloomingdale, where he is confined in the Macy Villa, a private ward for wealthy patients.

Dr. Lyons, Superintendent of Bloomingdale, said to-day that the report of the physicians was submitted to the court. He refused to give any information about Humbert. He said: "He is a private patient, and it would be violating a rule if I gave out anything about his history. It is true, however, that he was brought to the asylum from Seattle by his relatives."

CALLS CROKER A MERE PUPPET.

Frank Moss last evening held the buyers of special privileges responsible for municipal misrule, and said that the brains of Tammany Hall were supplied by them and not by the "bullet head" that was at the top. He was speaking at the Universal Thought Salon at Winterburn Hall, 250 West Twenty-third Street, on the topic, "Things in General." He said, in part:

"The men who have been building up the system of corruption that prevails knew that the men who were in control in New York life were buying privileges, and were fattening upon the fruits of special purchase privileges. Devery is bad enough, but he is a mere creature, a mere product. The Commissioners are as guilty as Devery, yet they talk of taking one of them to be the single head of the department.

"Croker is certainly an object against which we have to turn our batteries, but I don't know that he is the worst one. There are men in New York who are great financial powers, and who have been using the rough man who is the nominal head to control the masses, and they have given him the rough man's price. Franchises have been seized and held by the people who have been supplying the brains of Tammany Hall for years. The shrewd moves that we see don't all emanate from that bullet head at the top of Tammany Hall. Men of both political faiths are back of him. They prefer Tammany because they can get their way through it. This is the condition, yet the miserable public is aroused over divs and gambling dens."

Ex-Senator Frank M. Bixby described Tammany as a desperate enemy that would resort to anything, from murder to petit larceny.

Henry Nichols remarked that Mr. Moss in his address had assailed the factors in this community that are at the bottom of some of the movements now on foot in this city, notably the Citizens' Union. The members of that body, he said, were largely Wall Street lawyers, whose livelihood depended upon the very conditions that Mr. Moss assailed. Many of those suggested as reform candidates for Mayor, he said, were profiting by the very conditions which Mr. Moss had reprobated.

Prof. Albert L. Rawson said that the difference between Croker and Tweed was that Croker is alive and Tweed isn't.

Dr. E. Prentiss Brown said that there was too much law and that it was the law that enabled Tammany Hall to milk the people. They go to a dive keeper and say, "You are doing an illegal thing. Money." Thus, he said, the laws are made to serve the end of corruption.

THE TRANSCONTINENTAL SYSTEM

President of the Baltimore and Ohio Does Not Believe Current Reports.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 7.—President Cowen of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company puts no faith in the stories about a "vast transcontinental system." Although closely connected with Mr. Hill in railroad affairs, Mr. Cowen says he is not speaking for him, but the Baltimore and Ohio President says:

"Traffic conditions are adverse to such a project at this time. No such plan is even in contemplation. Such a project was said to be on foot when Mr. Hill became interested in the Baltimore and Ohio Company, but it has never developed. All traffic that originates in the Northwest and is started on its way to the seaboard finds its way to Chicago, and is there taken by the trunk lines and brought eastward. If one of the many lines which connect Chicago and the Northwest territory becomes a part of what may be termed a transcontinental system of roads, then, of course, the lines not in the system will withdraw east and west bound traffic at Chicago from the consolidated lines."

Brief Railroad Items.

Mayor Seymour of Newark has signed the ordinance providing for the elevation of the tracks of the Pennsylvania and Central Railroads through Newark.

There will be a meeting to-day of the West-Bound Passenger Committee of the Trunk Line Association to consider the question of the equalization of passenger differentials.

President J. J. Hill of the Great Northern Railway is expected in the city to-day and it is thought in railroad circles that an announcement will then be made regarding the rumored Great Northern-St. Paul alliance.

ALVAN SOUTHWORTH DEAD

Old-Time Journalist, Author, and Traveler Expires Suddenly.

He Began His Career of Stirring Adventure as an Ensign in the Navy.

Alvan S. Southworth, an old-time newspaper man, traveler, and author, died suddenly yesterday morning in a lodging house at 386 Third Avenue. Southworth, although a man of brilliant attainments and with acquaintances ranging from Princes to the habitués of lodging houses, had for over twenty years lived an unsettled life. His death was due to alcoholism. Last night his body lay in the Morgue and doubtless will be buried at the expense of his old-time friends—many of whom are well known in this city—in his birthplace at Lockport, N. Y.

Few men have had such a varied and strange career as Southworth, or seen as many different lands. His father was Justice Southworth of the Supreme Court, one time District Attorney of Buffalo, and a partner of ex-Judge Noah Davis of this city.

From the first, Southworth seemed to be cut out for a life of adventure, and as he was a bright and entertaining lad, he made friends wherever he went. Just after the war he was graduated from the United States Naval Academy and was an Ensign in the navy, but his naval experience was brief and limited. He expressed himself forcibly on several occasions that naval life was hampered by too many rules and regulations for him, and it wasn't long after that that he went into newspaper life.

His uncle, William Webb, the shipbuilder of this city, had built the Dunderberg in his yards at Greenpoint to capture the Alabama, but she didn't suit, and Mr. Webb took her across the Atlantic to sell to the French Government. Young Southworth went along. On board were several reporters, who were going to send back a story to their papers. Southworth conceived the idea of getting a "beat," and took his uncle into his confidence.

The Dunderberg arrived at Cherbourg, and unknown to the newspaper men, Southworth got ashore and sent a long story to The Herald. He attracted the attention of James Gordon Bennett, and upon his return to this country was sent to report the Fenian uprising in Canada. Subsequently he was engaged as foreign correspondent of The Herald and went through the Franco-Prussian war. Most of his time was spent with the French troops, but he managed to get into the German lines, and was present at many of the battles.

The days of the Commune found him in Paris. Toward the last he was sentenced to be shot, and it is said was actually lined up with other unfortunates, but showed no fear even when all hope seemed lost. He was saved by the then United States Minister Washburne.

About 1872, Mr. Bennett sent Southworth on an expedition to Africa. The young explorer started out with a large caravan as an escort furnished by the Khédive. He met "Chinese" Gordon, Gen. Sir Samuel Baker, and won and retained their friendship. This was a newspaper expedition and Mr. Southworth was wont to tell his friends afterward that he turned in the biggest expense bill that ever a newspaper was called upon to pay. "It was between $40,000 and $50,000," he would relate to his cronies, and was largely for elephants, guns, and niggers."

The result of this expedition Southworth embodied in a book entitled "Four Thousand Miles of African Travel; a Personal Record of a Journey Up the Nile and Through the Soudan to Central Africa."

One of his subsequent exploits while in Italy was a reputed interview with the Pope. In 1880 he wrote a life of Gen. W. S. Hancock.

Southworth's wanderings took him all over Europe and India. He became a friend of Bismarck, and had often shown letters he received from the German Chancellor. One of his boasts of the seventies was that he was the only man who had ever successfully interviewed Bismarck.

When he returned to New York about 1874, he kept up his newspaper work for a time, and in December, 1875, through the friendship of Judge Noah Davis, was appointed a receiver for the Bleecker Street and Fulton Ferry Railroad Company. Being a man of much ability, he carried his work through well, but his convivial habits proved too much for him, and a year or two later he was removed on charges. He received in fees from $25,000 to $50,000.

"Truly," said he one day to a friend before his removal, "I am on the road to prosperity. See it piling up."

Yet when Southworth left the office he hadn't a dollar that he could call his own. A dollar to him was as a puff of wind, and he often queried: "What's the use of money unless you can spend it?"

For a while, always "a while," Southworth was Secretary of the American Geographical Society. But this didn't suit. He was working for a salary. "Can't work for a salary," was his comment, and before his friends knew it he was out.

From 1877 to the day of his death Southworth had no regular occupation save that of writing specials for newspapers and magazines. He was a fluent writer, spoke several languages, and as a conversationalist was one of the most entertaining of men. Nothing he liked better than to be the centre of a group and recount his experiences.

Southworth early evinced a taste for painting and sculpture. He numbered among his friends in this city in his heyday many who are known prominently in both painting and sculpture. Among these were J. Q. A. Ward, Daniel French, Bierstadt, and George Ennis. His acquaintance among financiers and public men was at one time equally large.

"He was the nerviest man I ever saw," said a friend of his yesterday. "In his ups and downs, hungry, or cold, or ill, he was always cheerful. He knew no such word as discouragement. He was always going to do, and had elaborate plans mapped out for some great literary work. But he dies in a lodging house. Poor fellow!"

Southworth had a sister living in Lockport.

HER BABY BURNED TO DEATH.

Mrs. Elizabeth F. Ryan of 207 East One Hundredth Street went to the store yesterday afternoon, leaving at home for the first time in his life her four-year-old boy, Michael. When she returned in ten minutes she found the boy burned in front of the kitchen fire and dead.

Mrs. Ryan lives on the ground floor, rear, of a five-story tenement. She keeps herself and Michael, and neighbors have noticed the wealth of affection she lavished on the boy and how responsive he was.

The boy was sitting in his high chair a little after 1 o'clock eating his lunch of bread and milk. Coal must be had, and Mrs. Ryan thought she would run down to the grocery store and hurry back without taking Mikey, as she called him, away from his meal. She put on her hat and shawl and, realizing it was the first time she was to leave him at home, she hugged and kissed him and he hugged and kissed her, and when she told him to be good while she was away he said, "Me be a dood Miker," and went at his bread and milk again.

Mrs. Ryan hurried back from the store when she could. She smelled smoke as she opened the door and ran, almost still of fear, into the kitchen, where she saw the body of her boy baby, all the clothing burned off and the body black as coal.

The distracted woman ran into the street and told a policeman as best she could what had happened and the officer sent to Harlem Hospital for an ambulance. But there was no need for a surgeon. A lounge and a chair alongside the kitchen range was scorched, but no fire had resulted from the child's clothing. The child is supposed to have got close to the fire.

The neighbors say Mrs. Ryan has had more than her share of sorrow. Her husband, William, is serving a twelve years' term of imprisonment for killing his daughter Katie, fifteen years old, last July. She was a daughter by another wife. Mrs. Ryan left her husband because he drank. She is a woman of some beauty and is only twenty-six years old. Her neighbors are remarkably wrought up over the latest incident of the young woman's ill fortune.

CLYDE FITCH'S NEW COMEDY.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.—A new comedy, called "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines," by Clyde Fitch, was produced at the Walnut Street Theatre to-night. The cast included Ethel Barrymore, Edwin Stevens, H. Reeves Smith, George W. Howard, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, Lillian Thurgate, Fanny Addison Pitt, Sidney Cowell, H. S. Taber, and Estelle Mortimer.

LOVESICK GIRL'S SUICIDE

Engaged to be married to one man and loving another, Ada Lemmon, twenty-four years old, living at 238 West One Hundred and Sixteenth Street, confessed her bitter secret to her widowed mother yesterday afternoon. Then, when the latter upbraided her for her so-called heartlessness and ungratefulness, she quietly left her home and, going to the Park Hotel, 1,520 Park Avenue, ended her trouble by sending a bullet into her temple.

According to Richard Peterson, the clerk in the hotel, the girl arrived there, unattended, at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and registered as "Miss A. Jones," saying that she expected to remain for the night. She was assigned to a room on the top floor.

About 6 o'clock, having heard nothing from her, the clerk sent a waiter to the room to find out if she wanted anything. The waiter knocked on the door of the room, and, getting no response, tried the door, which was unlocked, and looked in.

The woman was lying across the bed with a revolver in her left hand, while from a hole in her left temple a thin stream of blood had flowed down over her cheek to the bed clothing. She was fully dressed except that she had removed her hat and cloak and hung them up. From her position she had evidently shot herself while lying on the bed.

The police were notified and an ambulance summoned, but it was too late. The surgeon said she had been dead probably two hours. On the bed beside the body lay a box of cartridges, from which one had been taken and used. On a table lay a card on which was written the woman's real name and address. On the opposite side of the card was written: "Hire a cab and take me home. Address on the other side. Do not notify the police or newspapers." The police went to the address given, and the woman's brother, Alfred, went to the hotel and identified the body.

At the home of the suicide, the mother told an incomplete but pathetic story of the events leading up to the tragedy. She said that Ada had for four years been engaged to a wealthy man, a promoter, living in London. The mother would only give this man's first name—Arnold. Ada's married sister, Minnie, who lives in London, has recently been writing often, insisting that Ada come over to visit her and see her intended husband, but Ada has put off the visit, with one excuse or another.

Yesterday a notice was received from the Custom House stating that there was some cut-glass ware there for Ada from London, on which there was a duty of $48.50. The notice was received just before luncheon, and it was divined that this was a Christmas present from "Arnold." The daughter astonished her mother by saying that there was no need of paying out so much money for duty on the present, and advised sending it back.

The mother gently upbraided the daughter for her heartlessness to her lover and the girl suddenly confessed that she did not want to get married, and at last in a paroxysm of tears said that there was some one else whom she loved better than she did her English sweetheart.

There was a quarrel, and an hour later Ada left the house without saying where she was going or kissing her mother good-bye—a thing she had never done before.

About 4 o'clock a messenger boy came to the house with a package for the mother. It was from Ada. It contained her two diamond rings and a little note which bore but the two words "Good-bye." The package had been sent from the Park Hotel.

WOMEN FIGHT, BANKNOTES FLY

Mrs. Kleinheim Assaulted by Jealous Wife as She Leaves a Bank.

Mrs. Lena Butt, wife of a real estate dealer of 200 West One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Street, was held in $1,000 bail by Magistrate Meade, in the Harlem Police Court, yesterday, charged by Mrs. Annie Kleinheim of 234 East Seventy-sixth Street with the larceny of $130.

Mrs. Kleinheim, according to her story, went up to the Harlem Savings Bank yesterday to withdraw therefrom $600 of her savings. She was paid the money in four one-hundred-dollar bills, and the remaining two hundred in bills of smaller denomination. With the money in her passbook, she stepped out into Third Avenue and hailed a down-town car. Just as she was stepping on, she says, she felt herself seized by the hair from behind and pulled backward, while a female voice cried:

"Now I've got you; you'll steal my husband, will you?"

The owner of the voice was Mrs. Butt. The two women clinched in the middle of the street, scratched and bit and screamed at the top of their voices, while one and five and ten dollar bills fluttered all around.

A great crowd collected, and there was a scramble for the money. Detectives Mallon and Hawkins of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Station, separated the two women and took them before Sergt. Scheil, where both attempted to talk at once, and the Sergeant in disgust sent both to court. There Mrs. Butt was charged by Mrs. Kleinheim with the larceny of $130, which was missing from her $600, when the notes were picked up by the detectives.

Mrs. Butt made counter charges of the larceny of two diamond earrings and $10 in money. This charge was not entertained by the Magistrate. Mrs. Butt was held for examination to-day.

Mrs. Butt claimed that Mrs. Kleinheim had alienated the affections of her husband. Mr. Butt, when seen, said that he had never seen Mrs. Kleinheim. Mrs. Kleinheim, on the contrary, when seen at her home, said that Mr. Butt often called and sometimes brought his child with him. Mrs. Butt, she said further, was insanely jealous of her husband.

FIREMEN COULD NOT RESPOND.

Fire was discovered in a detached building used for laundry purposes on Blackwell's Island at 7 o'clock last evening, and damage to the amount of $1,000 was done. The building was situated about a quarter of a mile from the penitentiary buildings. It was a two-story stone structure, and was completely gutted.

The fire was discovered by Keeper James Fitzgerald of the penitentiary. He at once sent in an alarm and Engine Company No. 49, stationed on the island, responded. The Captain turned in a second alarm. This brought down the fireboat Havemeyer from Ninety-sixth Street and Engine Company No. 16, stationed at Second Avenue and Twenty-fifth Street. The latter company crosses usually on one of the Charities Department boats. When the crew reached there it was found that both the department boats were out of commission. The Captain of Engine No. 16 spent just thirty-three minutes in getting telephonic connection with the island. At the end of that time the flames had gutted the building, the fire really burning itself out.

Further up the river, at the foot of Fifty-second Street, the police reserve of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station went down to cross over to the scene of the fire. The Gilroy, a boat stationed at the island, plies between the island and East Fifty-second Street. Last night the police waited at the foot of the street an hour and a half for the boat to come, and then went back to their station, the fire being out.

It is the bronchitis, in coughs and colds, that Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil takes hold of. It checks inflammation; that's all.

It lets the cough stop and the throat get well. No taste of cod-liver oil in it.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.

WANTS TO BE PRESIDENT.

Special to The New York Times.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Jan. 7.—Gov. Leslie M. Shaw is fondling a Presidential boom. His friends have assured him that it is a healthy one, and that it will surely grow. The partisan organs throughout the State have greeted it with acclamations, and there is no denying that Shaw's supporters have entered upon a systematic campaign.

The Governor is not backward in impressing on political friends his belief that the next President will come from west of the Mississippi; that in such an event there is no more available man than the Chief Executive of Iowa. Shaw and his co-adjutor, Secretary of State Dobson, were in Washington recently, and came back with plans laid for furthering the Governor's cause. They are now proceeding to put these plans into operation.

Shaw's friends are diligently keeping up the cry, "The next President must come from west of the Mississippi," and they are convinced that the corporate and other influences in New York hostile to Col. Roosevelt will help them. Senator Allison is understood to be promoting Shaw's aspirations.

DENIES THAT CROKER HAS RECEIVED A CENT

Chairman Nixon Tells of Blackmailing "Combine's" Operations.

Its Assertion that It Represents Tammany Hall a False Pretense — No Legal Proof Against Leaders.

The Tammany Hall investigating committee of five met yesterday afternoon. Commissioner John W. Keller was absent on account of illness. The committee was in executive session an hour, and then Chairman Nixon made this official statement:

"Statements made in this morning papers, and as well in the afternoon extras, make necessary some reply from me. In the first place, I have never publicly mentioned, by name any leader of a district as being connected with the 'combine.' Had I become possessed of any proof implicating any leader I should have immediately presented it to the Executive Committee. We are in a fair way to get the evidence against those responsible for certain abuses.

"So far, all that has been obtained has been turned over to Mr. Platzek to be transmitted to the District Attorney, and naturally I shall not discuss it until he has passed upon it. As stated in a former interview, there is an organization of men known as the 'combine' that is organized for systematic blackmail, and they cloak their workings by pretending to be paying Tammany Hall the money they collect for the protection they are supposed to furnish in its name.

"For years these men have been in this business, and no matter what party is in power, the same brazen disregard of all laws has been apparent, and immunity from arrest has been sold. I have gone on the principle that when the men who conduct gambling establishments here who have paid these men for protection learn that this money was retained by the 'combine,' they would make the town too hot to hold them. While what they designate a 'squealer' is held in greatest contempt, at the same time when they see that they have been deliberately swindled they will be of the opinion that punishment should be inflicted.

"The way the gambling business is worked is that practically all houses pay $25 per week and $100 per month, and those not belonging to the 'combine' must pay in addition a large percentage of their receipts. From the first to the fifth of each month men may be seen going to the house of the man who receives this money to pay their portions, although the $25 per week and $100 per month are collected in the districts.

"In addition to this, and to still further protect the men who run these places, a certain sum is collected monthly to square the Parkhurst, Comstock, and Buckle Societies. While there may be one or two agents of these societies who are corrupt, practically the whole of this money is retained by the men who collect it. And these societies are worthy the confidence of the community.

"The men who wish to open places know whom to see, and, having found that certain men who act in defiance of the 'combine's' orders are given short shrift, are naturally inclined to believe that these men do collect this money on account of Tammany Hall, and that, if matters reach a climax, this organization will protect them.

"This accounts for the almost defiant attitude of the gamblers, who thought the money really went higher up, and the instant obedience of those in the ring, who, with guilty consciences, if they have any consciences, knew that no protection could be obtained.

"Mr. Croker has not received 1 cent of this blood money. Judge McQuade assured me this morning that none of the money has been received by him, as Treasurer. Learning that a number of extra assessments, aggregating about $1,000 each, were levied upon the gambling houses and poolrooms under the guise of political assessments just before the last election, I take this occasion to say that this money was not paid to Tammany Hall, and that the men who paid it were swindled by those who levied it; and I make this statement upon the authority of the Chairman of the Finance Committee and the Treasurer of Tammany Hall."

Mr. Nixon would not qualify or discuss the statement or name those against whom the accusations of blackmail were directed. Nor would he answer directly the question if he would accept the Commissionership should a single-headed Police Commission be created.

M. Warley Platzek of Mr. Nixon's committee said that other untrue and ridiculous statements had been published in regard to its aims and action.

"Some evidence," he went on to say, "has been submitted to Assistant District Attorney Schurman, and it is of such a character as to lead to the hope that indictments and correction of some of the evils may follow.

"No legal proof is, however, complete up to date to incriminate any police official or Tammany leader. I cannot be more definite. You can, however, assume that those who are likely to be indicted are lawbreakers who have not yet been detected or quick enough to run to cover.

"The Tammany committee is outside of the sphere of politics, and even if some leaders of the organization were found guilty of wrongdoing the committeemen would have no power to remove them. When I became a member of this committee I was certain that I would be able to get in two weeks evidence against those protecting gambling and other forms of vice. I know that vice has been rampant, and even to-day feel morally certain that it has been protected. But it is a different thing to find out who receives the money and get evidence that will stand before the law. I know nothing on which the story that Martin Engel, Percival E. Nagle, and Timothy D. Sullivan are to be asked to resign from Tammany Hall could be based, so far as this committee is concerned."

William H. Baldwin, Jr., Chairman of the Committee of Fifteen, said yesterday that he had no information to give concerning its plans and action, but that as soon as it had consummated an aggressive movement the public would be informed of it.

NAGLE'S IRE AROUSED.

Offers $1,000 If a Gambling House Is Found in His District.

The charges that gambling places and disorderly houses are operating in the Assembly District of which Street Cleaning Commissioner Nagle is the Tammany leader aroused the latter's ire. Yesterday he offered a reward of $1,000 to any one who would prove that there was open in his Assembly District a gambling place or a disorderly house.

Commissioner Nagle did not say when and where he would pay over the reward in case an illegal resort was found to be running.

Beginning at the Harlem River and East One Hundred and Nineteenth Street, thence to Fourth or Park Avenue, to East One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, to Fifth Avenue, to the Harlem River.

This is the part of the Thirty-fourth Assembly District of which Commissioner Nagle is leader. The section of the Thirty-fourth Assembly District above the Harlem River is politically controlled by President Haffen of the Bronx Borough, and is not supposed to be taken in in reference to the offer of $1,000 reward.

POLICEMAN IS ARRAIGNED.

Policeman Samuel J. Felton of the Madison Street Station was arrested in the station house Sunday night, suspended from duty by Inspector Cross, and locked up on a charge of intoxication. He was discharged in the Essex Market Court yesterday morning by Magistrate Crane, who told him he would dismiss him from the force if he were a Police Commissioner. Felton was found in Monroe Street by Roundsman Tyler of the same command. It was about twenty minutes after 8 o'clock that Roundsman Tyler came up to Felton's post on his tour and found the man in a peculiar condition. He questioned him, and not being satisfied with the answers, he took him to the station house.

Inspector Cross happened to be in the station house at the time. He immediately had a charge of intoxication preferred against the officer. Then he suspended him from duty. He had the policeman taken into the back room and a police surgeon summoned to the station. The surgeon pronounced him drunk.

SUIT INVOLVING $800,000.

Papers will be served probably to-day in a suit to recover about $800,000 from former Directors of the American Malting Company. The proceedings are brought by Ernest Pfarrius of the Produce Exchange in the interest of himself and a number of other stockholders.

Martin H. Vogel of 27 William Street is the attorney for the plaintiffs. When seen last night he declined to discuss the case beyond confirming the report that he had prepared papers in the cases and expected to serve them to-day. He refused further information on the ground, as he put it, that he did not want to try cases in the newspapers.

The proceedings are brought against Seymour Scott, Grant B. Schley, C. A. Purcell, F. R. Nunnemacher, and others, who were Directors in the American Malting Company from 1897 to some time in 1899, when the company was reorganized.

The American Malting Company was organized in 1897, with a capital of $30,000,000, equally divided in preferred and common stock. It also had authority to issue $5,000,000 in bonds, $4,000,000 of which were financed by J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. The corporation owns thirty-six malting and eighteen elevator plants, and is supposed to control 60 per cent. of the malting business of the country.

The complainants allege that on organization there was issued to a person who held purchasing options on certain malting plants in different States $13,740,000 of the common stock and $12,500,000 of the preferred, which, with $10,000 of the common originally subscribed for in cash, represent a par total value of $26,250,000. For this the company acquired the plants and $2,080,000 in cash as a working capital.

The stockholders maintain that because of the alleged mismanagement of affairs by the defendants the preferred stock depreciated from 87 to 27 and the common from 45 to 5, and that they suffered a loss aggregating about $800,000. It is also charged that while the company was doing business at a loss seven dividends each of 1¾ per cent. were paid.

The company was reorganized in 1899, after its affairs had been examined by a committee, of which R. M. Gallaway, Frederick Uhlman, and J. P. Ord were members.

TRIAL OF CAPT. HERLIHY.

The Rev. Alexander J. Kerr of the Broome Street Tabernacle Testifies.

Conditions prevailing in the "Red Light" district since Capt. Herlihy has been in command at the Eldridge Street Police Station were described at the trial of that officer before the full Board of Police Commissioners yesterday afternoon by the Rev. Alexander J. Kerr, pastor of the Broome Street Tabernacle and Tina Bintz, of 208 East Twenty-fifth Street, who was for three weeks a victim of east side conditions. Capt. Herlihy is on trial for insulting the Rev. Robert L. Paddock, who is in charge of the work at the Protestant Episcopal Pro-Cathedral in Stanton Street.

Mr. Kerr described the incidents of a walk through Allen Street on the evening of Nov. 24, 1899, two months after Capt. Herlihy took charge, which were of such a nature as to induce him upon reaching his parsonage to write a scathing letter to Mayor Van Wyck. This brought an early call from Capt. Herlihy, and they discussed the matter together at Mr. Kerr's home. Their talk was pleasant, and he testified that the policeman spoke and acted as a gentleman all the time he was with him, and thoroughly agreed with him as to the necessity of keeping the neighborhood pure.

Asked why he had complained to the Mayor instead of to Capt. Herlihy Mr. Kerr said that he did not live in Capt. Herlihy's precinct. He told of things he had seen and heard in the streets under the Captain's supervision on several subsequent occasions and his testimony was punctuated with many lively tilts between Lawyer Grant, who represents Herlihy, and President York. The President characterized one of the lawyer's questions as a "Chinese puzzle," but when Mr. Grant protested, he apologized. The question was: "Will you swear that on your direct examination in referring to 127 Allen Street and the house where you saw two women at the windows beckoning—will you swear that on your direct examination that you said that at that house you heard nothing?"

Mr. Kerr told of being invited into a house by a woman while he was in clerical garb.

"Possibly she might have wished you to administer spiritual advice to her. You cannot swear but what that was so, can you?"

"No, Sir," said Mr. Kerr.

Mr. Kerr said that at one house where the women were beckoning to him from the windows he noticed that they wore bright colors. "Why," exclaimed the lawyer, "the 400 wear bright colors, don't they?" Mr. Grant then suggested that the couples Mr. Kerr might have seen acting exclusively in the streets might have been old acquaintances or relatives, and this the clergyman could not gainsay.

The Bintz girl, who was next called, is a pretty little blonde, twenty-two years old. She was a waitress and was looking for employment at an intelligence office on Third Avenue when she was led to the house she described early in February of last year. She was taken there by Morris Mayer and another young man named Brickman. Until she met them she had been a good girl, she said.

She denied that she knew the character of the place to which she was going. Once there, she said, her street clothing was locked up and all her money taken away from her by Mayer.

She was afraid to make an attempt to escape, but was removed from the house to the City Hospital on Blackwell's Island, where she remained for nearly six months, recovering from a surgical operation.

The session continued into the evening, and after adjournment ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott, who is prosecuting the case, said that although the Supreme Court had ruled that the unsupported evidence of such a woman could not count against an innocent police officer he had thought it well that the Commissioners should hear the story.

The trial will go on at 2 P. M. to-day.

MR. ODELL WANTS TO KNOW.

Interviews Heads of Departments to Find Out What Becomes of the State's Money.

ALBANY, Jan. 7.—In business and in politics Gov. Odell has long been noted for his remarkable aptitude for mastering detail. He is bringing his talent in that direction to bear upon State affairs. To-day he sent for several heads of departments and put them through a searching cross-examination. He made plain to those whom he called in his intention to learn everything there was to be learned about the conduct of their departments. What surprised the chiefs called in most was the amount of information the Governor already possessed along the line of his inquiries.

To-morrow Gov. Odell will interview other heads of departments, and these interviews will go on until he has thoroughly familiarized himself with the workings of every department of the State government.

The course of the Governor's inquiries to-day made it clear that his declared purpose of economy is to be rigidly adhered to. Every wasteful and unnecessary expenditure is to be stopped. The Governor is proceeding on business principles. He is demanding a satisfactory showing for every dollar of the State's money used.

It is the general belief here that the Governor's recommendations for doing away with the State Board of Charities and the Board of Prison Commissioners will meet with strong opposition. It is contended that a single Commissioner in place of each of these boards could not do the work which has to be done. The Commissioner in each case, it is urged, would have to hire assistants, and it is claimed there would be no appreciable reduction of expense by this change, but that there would be deterioration in the character of the supervision.

Flavius J. Allen's Funeral.

Funeral services for Flavius J. Allen, proprietor of the Astor House, took place yesterday at the family residence, 241 Lexington Avenue, the Rev. H. M. Sanders of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church officiating, assisted by the Rev. W. S. Richardson of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church. Among the large number of personal friends of the deceased who attended were R. C. Brown, T. J. Ryan, O. W. Gwindom, Dr. W. M. Farrington, W. S. Connor, and C. H. Sterling. There was also present a large delegation representing the Hotel Men's Association. The body was sent to Poughkeepsie for interment.

JUDGE COWING CHARGES JANUARY GRAND JURY

Special Attention Directed to Alleged Vicious Conditions.

Inquisitors Urged to be Careful in Drawing Indictments—District Attorney Philbin Hopes Every Presentment Will Hold.

Judge Rufus B. Cowing, in General Sessions, yesterday, charging the January Grand Jury, directed the especial attention of that body to the alleged existence of vicious conditions and violations of the laws, to which the police are said to be both blind and deaf, and requested that due investigation of the matters complained of be made by them.

"At this special time," said the Judge, "I want to draw your attention to a class of cases that it is generally believed in this community go unwhipped of justice. If the police force is willfully blind and deaf, who is to measure the evil and the chaos which can be thrown among us? It is believed that there has been too much blindness and deafness; too willful a violation of the criminal law in this community, and it is generally thought the time has come when the citizens of this community, for their own protection, must see to it that the criminal law is observed. It should be seen to. There is no branch of the Government of which the people are so watchful and so jealous as the administration of its criminal justice. That administration is made up of parts. Each part has an important duty to perform. First in order we have a large police force in this city stationed as sentinels throughout its length and breadth to observe and scan the actions of their fellow-citizens. They should be men of integrity, with eyes undimmed and ears acute.

"We have, following them, the Magistrates, whose duty it is to examine complaints brought before them by these sentinels of justice and to determine whether a crime has been committed and whether the party charged is the probable criminal. Then come your duties, those of the grand inquest. The Grand Jury should be composed of men of intelligence, integrity, and industry. You are the sentinels to guard the door of this court; to determine who shall be ushered in to undergo the ordeal of a trial. No person can be brought to this bar without your permission and your indictment. Your duty is equally to protect the people and the individual.

"No man should be indicted lightly or upon insufficient evidence. It is poor remuneration for an innocent man to have a trial jury acquit him after he has suffered the ignominy and disgrace of arraignment at this bar as a common criminal. You should scan the evidence with great care, and pass nobody into this court unless your conscience and your judgment acquiesce in the finding of the indictment.

"I have no doubt that, so far as lies in your power, you will see that those persons, be they high or low, whatever their political proclivities or religious beliefs, whoever they are, that violate the law meet the punishment for such violation.

"The smaller crimes, perhaps, are not thought much of, but they work terrible harm. Repeated disobedience of the laws makes all law disrespected. Crimes, such as are supposed now to have become prevalent in this city, are crimes largely against public morals. The criminal law undertakes to protect life, liberty, and property of the citizens and also undertakes to protect the morals of the community. An immoral and licentious community cannot long exist. It will very soon meet the reward which comes to violated laws. Therefore, these lesser crimes come under your supervision where they are properly brought before you, and you should see that they are investigated.

"With reference to the higher class of crimes, those which affright the community and disturb more the public peace and repose, there seems to be little danger but that they will be brought to summary justice. It is the small crimes—which we call misdemeanors—often where is great danger that they will be ignored and allowed to grow widespread. To these matters I direct your especial attention." The members of the Grand Jury are:

James S. Carney, agent, 417 Produce Exchange.
Dennis W. Moran, stone, 280 Broadway.
John J. Clarke, smith, 900 First Avenue.
Evert J. Wendell, merchant, 8 East Thirty-eighth Street.
Robert W. Stuart, banker, 43 Exchange Place.
Osgood Welsh, merchant, 43 Cedar Street.
William A. Martin, real estate, 50 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street.
William E. Babcock, dry goods, 109 Worth Street.
George Wichelus, grocer, 243 Hudson Street.
James O'Connell, undertaker, 131 East One Hundred and Sixth Street.
John Wick, stoves, 605 Eighth Avenue.
Henry W. Grimwood, retired, 222 West Twenty-third Street.
Herbert L. Griggs, banker, 15 Wall Street.
Jeremiah N. Martin, real estate, 436 Lenox Avenue.
Meyer Thalmessinger, Vice President, 135 Grand Street.
Thomas K. Fraser, retired, 20 West Twenty-second Street.
William D. Murphy, broker, 2 Wall Street.
Edwin N. Doll, tailor, 140 Nassau Street.
David L. Kirby, insurance, 111 Broadway.
William De F. Haynes, merchant, 24 Thomas Street.

In addition to the 400 or 500 prison and bail cases awaiting the Grand Jury's action, this body will, in all probability, be asked to pass upon the evidence against disorderly house keepers of the "red-light" district and the police officials of this district, to be submitted to District Attorney Philbin by the Committee of Five and the Committee of Fifteen. The evidence of a gambling trust in the hands of ex-District Attorney W. M. K. Olcott may also be presented. The Tarrant explosion, the Bellevue abuses, including the case of Louis Hilliard, alleged to have been murdered by nurses; the case of Albert T. Patrick, accused by Charles F. Jones of hastening the death of William M. Rice, will all be laid before the January inquisitors.

District Attorney Philbin is anxious to have all indictments that it may be necessary to order drawn against police officials found on such sufficient and legal evidence that no demurrers will invalidate them, as was the case in a number of instances during the Lexow investigation. To guard against such contingency and to endeavor to prove guilty knowledge on the part of the police, it is probable that any evidence submitted to the District Attorney against illegal resorts will first be submitted to the police officials in whose precincts the conditions exist, and then if after a reasonable time no improvement is to be discerned indictments will be asked for.

ELEVATED RAILWAY TAXATION.

Manhattan Company Seeking Further Reductions in the Valuation.

ALBANY, Jan. 7.—The Manhattan Elevated Railway Company of New York City is making an effort to secure a further reduction in the valuation of its property subject to taxation in that city.

Several weeks ago the Court of Appeals handed down a decision reducing the valuation of the property subject to taxation several millions of dollars, and establishing the basis upon which future assessments shall be made. The company is not satisfied with the reduction, and to-day made application to the Court of Appeals for permission to re-argue the case, with a view of showing that tribunal that it had overlooked several important matters which, if considered, would secure a reduction of several million dollars additional.

The company claims that it is entitled to a reduction of $2,992,520 on account of its surplus profits being equal to 10 per cent. of its capital stock, and that it should not be assessed on $6,217,939, an open account of the Metropolitan Elevated Railroad Company. The last request involves the question of the taxation of open accounts.

The company also claims that it is entitled to a reduction of $1,127,112 on account of bonds made by it to the Metropolitan and the New York Elevated Railroad Companies, and that a reduction of $9,500,000 of bonds of the New York Elevated Railroad Company be allowed. This latter reduction was made by the Appellate Division, but was not allowed by the Court of Appeals when the case was decided. The last reduction asked is $493,370—the amount of judgments obtained against the company.

SUNK IN SMYTH CHANNEL

PIRATES THREATEN THE CREW

Ship's Company and Passengers Rescued After Two Days' Sojourn on a Barren Island.

With the steamship Coya, which reached here on Sunday and now lies in the Erie Basin, there was brought into port one of the most interesting wreck stories of the last twelvemonth. The unfortunate vessel was the San Augustin, owned by the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique. She ran against a rock in Smyth Channel, one of the numerous passages of the Straits of Magellan, on Nov. 27 last. Her passengers, numbering more than 100, after they had escaped, lived on a desert island for two days in constant danger from the pirate bands of Southern Patagonia and were at last rescued by the Coya, which vessel landed them in Punta Arenas on Dec. 1.

It is a coincidence that this rock on which the San Augustin foundered lies in the very channel through which the battleship Oregon passed on her famous record-breaking trip half round the globe. According to the story told by the Coya's officers, the rock lies dangerously near the centre of the channel, and they say that it is strange how the great battleship missed it unless she had a pilot particularly familiar with those waters. The channel in its widest part is not more than 2,400 feet across.

The wrecked San Augustin, which was once on the line between here and Barcelona, left Coronel, Chile, on Nov. 22. She was in charge of Capt. Suarez, and had aboard 102 persons, of whom between 80 and 90 formed the crew, while the rest were passengers. On the forward decks were 150 head of cattle, of which most of the passengers were caretakers.

Shortly after entering Smyth Channel the steamship suddenly struck the half-hidden rock, a black, rounded stone of some 100 feet in diameter. The blow threw the vessel back, and when she settled down it was discovered that a big hole had been punched in her bottom, on the part just abaft the bow. A great stream of water rushed in, and the commander saw at a glance that there was no hope of saving the ship.

The vessel floated just long enough for the boats to be launched, after being filled with water and provisions. Into them the passengers and sailors crowded, but before the decks were deserted the cattlemen had time to throw down the bars of the pens and free the animals. As the lifeboats were pulled off from the fast-sinking steamship the sevenscore of cattle leaped into the sea and swam for their lives, many of them being afterward seen landing on various little islands roundabout.

After rowing for an hour, the passengers and crew reached a rocky island of half an acre in size, but, as they found no firewood there, they took to the boats again and went down the channel to an inlet where there were lots of trees. There they built fires, cooked the provisions they had brought away from the wreck with them, and lived in fair comfort for two days. During that period they were not a little frightened by seeing the half-breed pirates from the mainland of Patagonia flock down in crowds to the opposite shore of the channel. Some of these desperadoes went across and plundered the half-sunken steamship, but no attempt was made to harm the survivors.

It was on Nov. 29 that the Coya, bound from Coronel to New York, came along. Capt. Thomas picked up the wrecked men and put back with them to the port of Punta Arenas, where all of them were landed on the following day.

TRYING TO OUST ELLIOTT.

Right to Sit in Kings Republican Committee Questioned.

The Republican General Committee of Kings County was cited to appear before Justice Dickey, in the Supreme Court, yesterday, and show by what authority it elected George F. Elliott as a member of the committee. The application was made by Albert W. S. Proctor, a lawyer, who says that he is an elector of the county, and that Mr. Elliott was not elected a member of the General Committee at any primary.

Counsel for the General Committee asked Justice Dickey for more time, and the case went over until to-day. Mr. Proctor brought the action after he had raised the point at a meeting of the County Committee without success.

MAY ARBITRATE FOR BAKERS.

It was announced yesterday by Secretary Bogatsky of the Hebrew Bakers' Union that the strike committee is in favor of asking Magistrate Crane, who is now sitting in Essex Market Court, to arbitrate the strike of the Hebrew bakers.

"Magistrate Crane," he continued, "is a fair man and would be an excellent arbitrator. He treated the pickets who were arrested on the charge of fighting with the non-union men with absolute fairness."

Meyer Loudon, a Russian Hebrew lawyer, who has charge of the strike, said yesterday that $105 has been subscribed by various unions to assist the strikers in starting a co-operative bakery. The strikers themselves would also contribute.

PRESENTED WITH LAW LIBRARY.

The Rev. Father D. A. Quinn of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church, in Mott Street, on behalf of the merchants and Tammany people of the Sixth Assembly District, presented Assemblyman Timothy P. Sullivan with a law library costing $750 and a suitable bookcase yesterday. The presentation took place in Mr. Sullivan's law office on the eleventh floor of the New York Life Insurance Building. In making the presentation Father Quinn said he hoped to see the day when Mr. Sullivan would be on the judicial bench.

Mr. Sullivan responded, and then the Presentation Committee, who came with Father Quinn, adjourned with him and the Assemblyman to Holtz's restaurant, in Leonard Street, where dinner was served. No after-dinner speeches were made.

MISS RIGL'S POOR SWORD PLAY.

Actress's Leading Man Says She Punctured Him in Stage Duel.

Emily Rigl, the actress, wants the $360 judgment opened, which Edwin Mordant, the actor, obtained in the City Court, and yesterday she filed her affidavit setting forth the reason why. She says that she was ill at the time the papers were served on her, and that she did not consult her counsel until after the judgment had been entered. The answering affidavits filed on the part of Mr. Mordant by his counsel, J. W. & C. J. McDermott, deny this fact and include as exhibits the voluminous pile of summonses required before actual service could be obtained on her.

The affidavit of Mr. Mordant, which accompanies the papers in opposition, tells why he brought the action. It appears that Miss Rigl had obtained the right to a one-act play called "Tricked," and that in February last she engaged Mr. Mordant for a period of four weeks at $100 a week. A few days later Mr. Mordant received an offer from Julia Arthur, and when he told Miss Rigl of this, she said, "My God! Don't throw me down now." He remained with Miss Rigl, and after three weeks' rehearsal they opened at Cincinnati, Ohio, and he thus describes what occurred.

"During this performance Miss Rigl interfered with my work very materially by speaking under her breath when I was reciting, and talked to me from the wings in a loud tone of voice, so that it could be heard in the audience. During the sword fight she lost all of its movements, and I received a cut on my head and right hand. After this performance I called on Miss Rigl at the Burnett House, Cincinnati, Ohio, and discussed the first performance. During this interview the manager of the theatre sent for Miss Rigl, and I went with her to the theatre, and we were there informed that the piece would not do, that he (the manager) did not doubt our ability, but that the piece was not suited to his auditors. I asked Miss Rigl to settle up our account, and she said that she would as soon as she got back to New York. I returned to New York."

Abraham Emanuel Dead.

Abraham Emanuel, retired merchant, died on Sunday at his home, 56 West Fifty-eighth Street. He was born in Baden, Germany, in 1822, and came to this country fifty years ago. From a clerkship in a commercial house he was promoted rapidly until, five years after landing here, he came to own a share in a store.

Later he was a partner in the dry goods firm of Straus & Emanuel, which was for many years one of the largest firms of its kind in the city. He retired from business some years ago. Mr. Emanuel was one of the founders of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, being a member of the Washington Lodge and at one time its President. He was also a Mason of high degree and in past years was connected with the Liederkrans. He belonged to the Congregation of the Temple Emanu-El, where his funeral will be held this morning at 9:30 o'clock. He is survived by one daughter.

PATRICK V. HICKEY'S ESTATE.

A Judgment Creditor Not Satisfied with Present Executrices.

Application was made yesterday before Surrogate Abbott, in Brooklyn, for the removal of Agnes K. Hickey and Maria Hickey as executrices of the will of the late Patrick V. Hickey, former publisher of The Catholic Review, The Catholic American, and other publications, on the charge that they have wasted and mismanaged the estate. Agnes K. Hickey is the widow of the late publisher, and the other executrix is her sister-in-law. The application was made by John J. Murphy, who is a judgment creditor of the estate for $3,531.75.

Counsel for Mrs. Hickey said that under the will of Mr. Hickey the property belonged absolutely to Mrs. Hickey, and she could do as she liked with it. Surrogate Abbott reserved decision.

Funeral of Gen. Brooke Postley.

Funeral services over the body of Gen. Brooke Postley were held yesterday from the family residence, 817 Fifth Avenue, and were private, only a few intimate friends of the dead having been invited to attend. The services were conducted by the Rev. R. M. W. Black of All Souls' Church, on Madison Avenue. Among the mourners were Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Devereux, Mrs. W. Thomasal, Mr. and Mrs. W. Gouch, Mr. and Mrs. Donald B. Toucey, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Husted, Mr. and Mrs. E. Mott, Charles Hubbard, and Solon J. Vasto. The interment took place in the family plot in Greenwood.

Reasonable Rates, Superior Service, And a Progressive Policy have resulted in an increase during the year 1900 in the number of telephones in service in Manhattan and the Bronx of 14,210 stations.

This is a record gain and is the most eloquent testimony possible to the Progressive Policy, Superior Service and Reasonable Rates of the NEW YORK TELEPHONE COMPANY.

The Season's Clean-up CARPET SALE

There were thirty thousand yards yesterday morning—less to-day; but no material decrease in variety of styles; and all the prices are good to-day.

The biggest bargains are the very short pieces, and those who have small rooms to cover may do it handsomely at a very small cost.

But there are plenty of bigger pieces—more practical bargains, if they offer just exactly what you want—as they are likely to do, with such a variety of lengths to choose from. All are splendid carpets—all regular goods—each the first quality in its grade. The new prices are depending on the size of the piece. Lengths ranging from 10 to 45 yards, being sold by the entire piece. Among grades so offered are these:

$1 to $1.65 Axminsters for 50c, 60c, 75c and $1 a yard.
$1.25 and $1.40 Body Brussels for 50c to 85c a yard.
70c Best All-wool Ingrains for 30c to 50c a yard.

Also several thousand yards of Body and Tapestry Brussels at bargains not so great as above, but of which you can have any length you want at the prices offered:

Body Brussels at $1 a yard, from $1.25 and $1.40.

Linen BATISTES At a Very Little Price

These are the fancy imported batistes that are so generally admired. Some one held them too long—they're not ordinarily salable at regular prices during the winter months. That somebody now loses more on each yard than we're asking a yard. But as the knowing ones predict the coming to be a linen season, and as this splendid collection is offered at nearly one-third to half the regular selling prices, the end of them should be no further away than nightfall. And here's our prediction: Many of you who fail to avail of this opportunity will gladly pay double and treble the present price a little later on.

There are forty or more patterns from which to select. All natural color linen grounds, with bright colored silk stripes, and lace stripes, plaids, polka dots and embroidered figures. The prices regularly are 37½c and 50c.

18c a yard for these 12,000 yards

Paris Novelty DRESS GOODS

A rich collection, and all greatly reduced in price. Some are now marked at about half the price for which they should be selling. Other prices are but slightly more than half. On any dress pattern you select the saving is equal at least to the cost of dressmaking. The designs are the best—desirable for present wear, and the coming season's styles will not be widely different, if at all. The greater portion of this offering is of single dress patterns of a coloring, but there's the widest choosing—all rich novelty dress stuffs. Here's a partial list of them:

At $2 yd., from $3.25—Silk-and-wool figured Poplin; black cubes and bright colored silk pin dots on black grounds.
At $1.75 yd., from $4—Silk-and-wool Striped Novelty, with black chenille cubes, in combinations of colors and black.
At $1.75 yd., from $3.50—Polka-dot Silk-and-wool Crepon, in combinations of bright colored polka-dot on black grounds.
At $1.75 yd., from $3—Silk-and-wool figured Crepon, in combinations of colors and black.
At $1.50 yd., from $3—Silk-and-wool Matelasse Epinglihs, in combinations of colors and black.
At $1.50 yd., from $2.50—Silk Crepon Striped Venetian Cloths; designs in colors on black ground.

FURS Reduced

Reductions right down the line now. And substantial, worthwhile reductions. You'd almost think we were going out of the fur business and wished to close out everything in a rush. But it's simply this: We don't want to make a long drawn-out operation of one that can just as easily be settled quickly. These January stocks are unwelcome here. It's wearing time, not showing time, and the best, quickest method of finding wearers, and reducing our care and responsibility for the furs is shown right here.

Double Sable Fox Scarfs, with two large tails, at $15; were $26.
Extra Large Natural Lynx Boas, at $25; were $40 and $50.
Natural Lynx Collarettes, with high storm collar, at $25; were $50.
Plain Chinchilla Collarettes, at $75; were $125.

CORSETS

At $1.25 and $1.50—P. D. imported corsets; medium and long waist; in white, drab and black. Regularly $2.75, $3.50 and $4.
Special lot of Lillians, at reduced prices; four styles; short, medium and long waist; white, drab and black; at $1.75 to $5. Regularly $2.75 to $8. All sizes in lot, but not in each style.

The New Foulards From London

The coming of these beautiful Printed Silks is an event in the Silk Store. The Foulard Silks from London are still printed by hand, and they have a character that cannot be matched by those from any other source. The color play is strikingly odd, yet harmony prevails throughout. The more colors the greater the price; yet all are inexpensive enough. The Persian prints are artistic and rare; the plainer, more subdued styles are in coral effects, foliage and profiles of palms. There are some new dots made from berries, and new stripes with dots lifted from the color—all are of a high order of beauty and originality of design.

Prices, $1.25, $1.35, $1.50.

Cloth and Velour JACKETS

The jacket manufacturer is always far ahead of the season toward which he is working. Hence, while rigorous winter is yet upon us, on all sides preparations are making for the advent of Spring. Our jacket stocks are rent and broken—no more will be imported or ordered here to fill the gaps. Rather is the Wanamaker policy to gather the stragglers and obliterate all distinction as to value and origin in a new, uniform, urgent price.

Thus, a group of short jackets, box coats, three-quarter length coats of kersey, cheviot, melton, double-faced cloths, in wide assortment of colors and styles; some with luxurious fur collars, which were formerly priced up to $45 are to-day reduced to twenty-five dollars each

Our collection of velour jackets has been notable this year; the best makers of Europe and America were friendly rivals in its production. The remainder of these luxurious jackets, from the severely plain to those elaborately decorated with jet or passementerie, or beautifully braided; worth up to $75, now await your choosing at forty dollars each

Sealskin alone can exceed them in quiet richness and beauty.

BEDSPREADS and Comfortables

Whatever your bed-clothing needs, you'll find them satisfied here at less-than-elsewhere prices for goods of unquestioned quality. On these Marseilles spreads and comfortables we've even bettered our own prices, so there's a double saving for you in the prices quoted below:

Bedspreads—
At 90c—In white honeycomb Marseilles pattern.
At $1—Bedspreads in handsome white honeycomb Marseilles patterns.

Comfortables—

All Around the Store

$14 Box Couches for $9.75. The supply of these exceptionally low-priced lounges, though limited, is not yet exhausted. They are 6 feet long, 30 inches wide; box, 7 inches deep; muslin-lined; top is tufted; with best springs; upholstered in tow or moss; covered with imitation Bagdad in choice of patterns. A rare opportunity.

Allover Plaitings. There is an interesting showing of these fashionable goods for the coming season—the latest designs of skilful makers. There are new effects in fine white lawn, batiste, Swiss muslin, nainsook and embroideries; also plain plaitings in ecru batiste. Prices run from 30c to $4.50 a yard.

Fur Robes are essential for cold weather driving or sleighing. Excellent assortment here, of genuine skins carefully made and cured, such as gray fox, tiger cat, wolf and grizzly bear, at $22 to $125; also imitation black and grizzly bear and Japanese Marten; splendidly wearing robes at $8.50 to $35.

Umbrellas below value. Some women's umbrellas, 26-inch, of union taffeta, with fancy handles, are priced at $1.25 each. They are good-looking and durable, and a full $2 value.

Automatic Candle Lamps for dinner-tables. They are neat and sightly, always keep the candle shade at a uniform height, and obviate dripping of the wax. Though they are generally sold at 65c each, we have priced a small lot at 40c.

Walking Skirts and Suits at low prices. The skirts, of single-faced cloths, in blue and Oxford, finished with outside fold and trimmed with rows of stitching, $4.50 for good $6 values. The suits of double-faced cheviots, covert and broadcloth, in handsome styles, tailor stitched, formerly priced up to $45, are now twenty dollars each.

Ulsters for Men—$12. They're the best value in New York at the price; of all-wool Oxford frieze, with plaid lining of good quality; iron yarn sleeve lining; side pockets; warm and roomy.

Girls' Box Reefers Reduced. They were $8 and $8.50, but $5 is their new price. They're of plain and boucle cheviot, some plain with velvet collars, others trimmed with braid. In the most desirable colors. Sizes for girls of 6 to 12 years.

Alaska Sable Neck Scarfs, trimmed with tails. The fur man has gathered these handsome scarfs, which have sold at $5 and $6.50, with a few formerly priced at even more, and put a new price, $4, on them—which should quickly disperse them.

The "Hookon" Corset Hose Supporter. Fastened on lower stud of corset, it cannot possibly come undone, does away with safety-pins and bands, and greatly improves the figure. Here is a variety of styles. 35c to $1.25.

Long Trouser Suits for Boys. Some small lots of these, but aggregating a complete line of sizes for boys from 13 to 19 years, have been considerably reduced in price. They are of fancy cheviot and neat worsteds. Early season prices were $12 to $15, now they're $10 a suit.

Men's Overcoats And TROUSERS

A lot of handsome heavy overcoats, in various styles, has been rounded up and reduced in price for quick distribution. All new styles, and the most desirable of the new styles. Of rough-faced Oxford and brown mixed cheviots—the popular fabric of the day. Some of the swell Raglans in the collection. All sizes,—particularly good showing among the larger sizes. Some were $18, many other grades up to our $25 kinds, and all moderately priced at those figures.

Choice Now at $15

Trousers at $5 are always a bargain at Wanamaker's. Nowhere else are equal values procurable at that price. But this is even better than usual—much better. For this lot, that we count ourselves very fortunate in obtaining, are the sort that are rarely sold for less than $7.50. All of pure worsted in best, latest patterns. And now $5 each.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

BOYS' SUITS

Clearing out the incomplete lines, the many little lots in which all sizes are no longer represented. The December selling was enormous, and there has been no time until now to straighten up the stocks. Now there's no time to be lost in the closing-out plan. Hence these reduced prices:

125 three-piece suits of cheviot, with double-breasted vests; some of the very best patterns of the season's production; sizes 9 to 16 years. Values $5 to $8. Prices, $4.25 and $5.
100 boys' double-breasted jacket suits of cheviots and cassimeres; sizes 9 to 16 years. Values $9 to $11. Price, $5.
50 sailor suits of blue serge and cheviot; neatly trimmed; sizes 3 to 12 years. Values $7 and $7.50. Price, $5.

Wanamaker-Reliable $3 SHOES for Women

They are literally the last word in present-day making of popular-priced shoes. They represent years of experience and experiment on our part. On other people's, too, for we have taken their best $3.50 shoes—and there are some excellent shoes at that price—improved upon them, and then lowered the price to $3! This is the history, in brief, of the

Wanamaker-Reliable $3 Shoe for Women

They are splendidly and thoroughly made, of the best materials, full of style and comfort, and in a variety of shapes and leathers, suitable for all uses and occasions.

Some mention of the styles follows:

The REGINA Music Boxes

Music drives the tears away from the young and the blues away from the old. It makes play brighter and work easier. It entertains and refines. The mind's debt to music is almost as great as the body's is to food, for one only half lives, that lives without it.

Music by a musician is for the few and favored. Automatic music is for all.

The Regina Music Box is the perfection of automatic music, and on the Wanamaker Club Plan can be bought by almost any home. A little cash payment and easy amounts monthly afterward. Hear the boxes play. If you can't come, write for full particulars.

The SALE of WHITE

From every point of view, this is a remarkable sale. The goods at lowest prices are almost marvelous—yet that is the ordinary thing to find in such sales—the trouble with the usual sale is that effort stops with the obtaining of low prices. Here the value of a five dollar gown is even more remarkable than of those at 38c or 50c.

And our best effort is made right among the medium-priced goods that the thousands want. Broad and unmatched variety, as well as unequaled goodness and beauty in each style.

To-day's illustration tells about the various kinds of

The CHINA SALE

There was large selling among these bright and handsome wares yesterday, but you wouldn't miss anything from the collection to-day. More lots have come forward—different, but equal in every way to the splendid offerings of yesterday. It's a rare time for housekeepers when the Wanamaker holiday stock comes out for a clean-up. Dainty pieces of a hundred sorts can be picked up for a trifle of cost; and even such wares as are worth their full prices year in and year out are offered at

Congressional Notes.

Mr. Platt of Connecticut has introduced in the Senate a bill to encourage exports of manufactures of which domestic alcohol is a constituent part. It allows a drawback of the internal revenue tax paid on the alcohol used in manufacturing the article.

The Senate yesterday confirmed a large number of army nominations, of which the most important were those of Col. Samuel M. Whitside, (Tenth Cavalry,) Lieut. Col. James R. Campbell, (Thirtieth Infantry,) and Major Charles Bird, (Quartermaster,) to be Brigadier Generals of Volunteers.

Mr. McCall of Massachusetts has introduced in the House a bill providing that additional appointments to the Naval Academy hereafter shall be made each year by the President of the cadets or students standing first in the graduating classes of that year in the nautical training schools of States in which such schools are maintained by the States.

Senator Warren of Wyoming has introduced a joint resolution extending the thanks of Congress to Capt. C. E. Clark and the officers and men of the battleship Oregon "for bringing the battleship 14,000 miles at forced speed, from the Pacific to the Atlantic Station, in condition for instant service, and for gallant and meritorious services in aiding in the destruction of the Spanish fleet at Santiago."

MR. LODGE DISCUSSES AMERICA'S COMMERCE

Senator Asserts Large Army and Navy Are Indispensable.

NECESSARY FOR PROTECTION

Declares Growing Trade Must Be Guarded — Army Bill Amendment Against Veterinary Corps Adopted.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—A notable speech was delivered in the Senate to-day by Mr. Lodge, (Rep., Mass.) Addressing the Senate on the amendment of the Military Committee striking out the provision in the Army Reorganization bill for a veterinary corps, he discussed briefly, and principally in the form of a colloquy with Senator Bacon (Dem., Ga.,) the Philippine question and the necessity for an army of 100,000 men.

In conclusion, Mr. Lodge drew a brilliant word picture of the commercial future of the United States, declaring that the trade conflict with Europe already begun could result only in the commercial and economic supremacy of this country over the entire world. In this industrial conflict he apprehended no danger from a material contest with any nation of the world, but he urged the necessity for a strong and scientifically organized army and a powerful navy in order that the United States might be prepared to defend its rights against any possible foe. The speech created a profound impression.

During the afternoon the Senate ratified the committee's proposition to eliminate the House provision for the establishment of a veterinary corps in the army. Senator Teller (Sil. Rep., Col.,) gave notice of a substitute he will offer for the entire pending measure, continuing in full force and effect the act of March 3, 1899, increasing the size of the army for three years from July 1, 1901.

VETERINARIES IN THE ARMY.

When the Army bill came up for consideration, the pending matter was the committee amendments striking out the provision for a veterinary corps in the army. Mr. Kenney, (Dem., Del.,) the champion in the Senate of the proposed veterinary corps, urged that the committee's amendment be rejected. In the course of his speech, Mr. Kenney discussed to some extent the general features of the bill. He had serious misgivings, he said, about the creation of a standing army of 100,000 men. He doubted whether the United States could send an army to the Philippines strong enough to put down the spirit of independence and liberty which seemed innate in the breasts of the Filipinos.

He added, in conclusion, that if the necessity was demonstrated for an army of 100,000, he would vote for it, if it were limited to three years. He hoped the provision for a permanent standing army of great strength would not be adopted.

Mr. Sewell, (Rep., N. J.,) a member of the Military Committee, replied to the argument of Mr. Kenney, urging that a great injustice would be done regular army officers by the injection into the army of a new corps.

Mr. Lodge objected to the proposition to establish a veterinary staff corps. He had no objection to giving proper pay and even rank to veterinary surgeons, but he denounced as "bitterly unjust" to the officers of the regular army the effort to create as a Colonel, Majors, and Captains men who were to be taken out of civil life, and place them in authority over men who had devoted their lives to army affairs.

MR. LODGE'S SPEECH.

Discussing the general features of the measure, Mr. Lodge said he did not think any American citizen honestly believed that the liberty of the people was menaced by an army of 100,000. He did not believe an army of 100,000 was, in the circumstances, a large army. As to the situation in the Philippines, Mr. Lodge maintained that organized rebellion has ceased, and the local George Washington is in hiding."

"In a short time," said Mr. Lodge, "I believe there will be peace and order throughout the Philippine Islands." He did not think, however, that the probability of outbreaks among the Moros and the uncivilized tribes of the interior ever would be eliminated, but he believed there would be an end of the trouble for some time.

Mr. Bacon inquired how long Mr. Lodge thought a large army might be needed in the Philippines. Mr. Lodge replied that he could not say exactly, but believed that in a very short time, comparatively, there would be greater peace and order in the islands than they ever had known. After some sharp sparring Mr. Bacon put this question to Mr. Lodge:

"From your knowledge as Chairman of the Philippine Committee, of the conditions in the islands, will the army of 76,000 be needed there for a short time or for an indefinite time?"

"What is a short time?" inquired Mr. Lodge.

"Well, say, two years," Mr. Bacon replied.

"My judgment," replied Mr. Lodge, "is that at the end of two years we will be able to reduce very largely the army in the Philippines. That is my belief. Spain had an army of 15,000 men and kept very bad order—"

"And occupied little territory," interjected Mr. Bacon.

"Yes, and occupied little territory," assented Mr. Lodge. He maintained, however, that with a force of 25,000 in the Philippines, the United States would keep better order than ever had been known there. With that force in the Philippines there would be about 35,000 men left to man the fortifications of the country, a force which he believed totally inadequate. In addition, that force would be called upon to guard the Nicaragua Canal, which it was proposed soon to begin to build. On that canal there would be employed 50,000 laborers. They would have to be protected. When finished, the canal would have to be guarded.

THE NATION'S NEEDS.

In response to further questions, Mr. Lodge said that, in his opinion, at the end of two years the force in the Philippines could be reduced materially, and at the end of four or five years the force probably could be reduced safely to 20,000 men.

"Does not the Senator from Massachusetts think," inquired Mr. Foraker, (Rep., Ohio,) "that the time for the reduction of the force would be lessened materially if we could have the support of the other side of this chamber in passing this Army bill and other similar measures?"

Mr. Lodge replied that Mr. Foraker had expressed his idea exactly. He vigorously urged the passage of the pending bill, because it would provide for the army an excellent system, the necessity for which had been emphasized by the Spanish war. In conclusion, Mr. Lodge said:

"I am no alarmist, and I have no fears that we are in danger of war with anybody, and I do not believe there is a nation on the face of the earth that has any desire to attack us. But no man can tell what may happen at any time.

"We have come to that point in the process of our development where we have expanded far beyond our own markets commercially, and we are breaking into every market of the world. It is a part of our economic development. In my judgment, we are marching along toward the economic supremacy of the world. Look at Europe and compare it with the United States. It has been worked over for a thousand years at least in the endeavor to draw out all its resources.

EUROPE SURPASSED.

"Here in the United States we are holding all the best part of the North American Continent. Look at your map, a great symmetrical country, all under one flag, no separate Government, your railroads running in steady connections and carrying freight from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the lakes to the Gulf. Europe cannot beat that. Every separate State system, every separate railroad she has, enhances the cost of her articles. We are beating her in iron and steel. We can turn them out at a price Europe cannot meet. We are going to surpass her in other articles. She has to take coal from us. It is a mere question of time when her last stronghold, the carrying trade, will be invaded.

"We will build ships cheaper than she, we shall, in some way or another, equal her subsidies to steamships by our subsidies, and put our ships on an even plane of competition. Does any one suppose the other people like our industrial achievements? They are struggling to get an opening for an overcrowded population and for an overproduction. That is why they have seized Africa. That is why they have seized the islands of the Pacific. China got into trouble, and they thought there would come a new division and they could all get their share. It has been stopped. The Chinese Empire is going to be held together and its markets opened to all nations of the world.

"I do not say anything improper or boast unduly when I say that it was owing to the United States that that policy was adopted instead of the other. We believe in it. It is a great policy. We are all in sympathy with it, but do you suppose the other countries like it? I doubt it very much.

RIVALRY IN COMMERCE.

"Any one who has read the newspapers lately will have noticed that there has been continual talk about economic federations to shut out the United States from Europe. In other words, they feel the economic pressure that we are putting upon them. They will try to meet us, undoubtedly, in the great field of economic rivalry. I believe that, with our resources, with the character of our people, with our new country, with our great continent, that the victory can only be with us, and that there can be but one end to that conflict of economic forces.

"We occupy a great position economically. We are marching on to a still greater one. You may impede it, perhaps, by legislation; you may check it; but you cannot stop the work of the economic forces. We may blunder here in legislation, but the American people and the economic forces which underlie all are carrying us forward to the economic supremacy of the world. It is a great position, but, dazzled by its splendor, do not forget its perils. It carries its dangers with it, and I want to see the United States always prepared to meet those dangers. We have no quarrel with any nation, and I hope we shall have none. I see none who would wish to attack us, but I wish to see the United States so prepared that under these new conditions she always will be safe by sea and by land.

"The control of the ocean is vital to us. That is why I have always advocated a navy, and a powerful navy we must have. I wish to see our army, whether it is ten thousand or twenty thousand or a hundred thousand strong, organized with the utmost skill and the utmost science, so that if the hour of peril ever does come we shall have a system which can expand on the instant, one which will not immediately produce disaster and trouble, stumbling and hesitation, as it did at the beginning of the Spanish war. Make your army large or small, as circumstances demand, but make your organization of that army the best, the most flexible, the most elastic, in the world."

After some discussion of the veterinary corps amendment by Mr. Gallinger, (Rep., N. H.,) advocating the establishment of such a corps and reading telegrams from many prominent veterinarians in support of the proposition and by Senators Proctor, (Rep., Vt.,) Daniel, (Dem., Va.,) Spooner, (Rep., Wis.,) Carter, (Rep., Montana,) Cockrell, (Dem., Mo.,) and Butler, (Pop., N. C.,) opposing it, the action of the committee in striking out the provision for the proposed corps was ratified by a vote of 43 to 5. Those who voted against the recommendation of the committee were Senators Clay, (Dem., Ga.,) Gallinger, (Rep., N. H.,) Hale, (Rep., Me.,) Heitfeld, (Pop., Idaho) and Kenney, (Dem., Del.)

Without making further progress with the bill, the Senate went into executive session.

FILIPINOS TO BE EXILED.

MacArthur Orders Insurgent Generals to be Deported to Guam—Says Good-bye to Thirty-seventh Volunteers.

MANILA, Jan. 7.—Gen. MacArthur has ordered the deportation of Gens. Ricarte, Del Pilar, Hizon, Llanera, and Santos to the Island of Guam. Nine regimental and four subordinate officers, with eight civilians, including Trias, Tecson, and Mabini, notorious assistants of the insurrectionists, have also been ordered to be deported. It is Gen. MacArthur's intention to hold most of the active leaders of the rebels, who have been captured, in Guam until the resumption of a condition of peace has been declared.

The first municipal election was held successfully at Baguio, Province of Benguet, Saturday. The Igorrotes took part in the election.

The Filipinos in Manila have been enjoying recently a novel experience in the holding of free, open political meetings. Most of the addresses at these meetings were made by former officers of the insurgents, all of whom asserted that the best way of securing personal liberty is to accept the liberties guaranteed by the Constitution and Government of the United States, which is what American sovereignty stands for. The audiences were greatly interested, and many of those attending the meetings signed the Federal Party declaration.

Gen. MacArthur, accompanied by his staff, reviewed the Thirty-seventh Regiment of Infantry, United States Volunteers, on the Luneta Field this evening. All the companies were together almost for the first time since the regiment was organized. After the review the regiment was drawn up in close order and Gen. MacArthur, in a farewell address, congratulated the officers and men on their bravery, discipline, and judgment, concluding his remarks with a hearty, "God bless you, comrades!"

The Thirty-seventh will sail for home on the transport Sheridan Thursday. More than half the men and many of the officers came from Tennessee.

A. H. LAWSHE OFF FOR MANILA.

He Is to Investigate the Affairs of the Postal Department There.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Abraham L. Lawshe, Deputy Auditor for the Post Office Department, started to-night for Manila. Mr. Lawshe is the man who was sent to Cuba to investigate the proceedings of Director Rathbone, Charles F. W. Neely, Postmaster Thompson, and the other officials. His report on the conditions in Cuba was such that, according to the War Department, it is to be made the basis of a number of criminal prosecutions. The Senate has called for it, but Secretary Root has refused to let the Senate have it, on the ground that the interests of justice would be thwarted by giving the criminals an inkling of the Government's evidence.

Mr. Lawshe's success in unearthing the real state of things in Cuba is one reason for his assignment to conduct an examination of affairs in the Philippine Islands. The accounts at Manila have been audited, and it is asserted at the War Department that Mr. Lawshe is not going to readit them, but only to "examine" them. It is admitted, however, that what Mr. Lawshe finds out may be made the basis of future action.

Turkey Acts in Norton Matter.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The Turkish Government has furnished Dr. Thomas Norton, who was appointed United States Consul at Harpoot, what are known as traveling papers, constituting a safe conduct to enable the doctor to proceed to his post. There is reason to believe that this action forecasts a compliance by the Turkish Government with the request of the State Department for a regular exequatur for Dr. Norton.

REAPPORTIONMENT VOTE IN THE HOUSE TO-DAY

What Increase, If Any, Will Be Agreed Upon Is Doubtful.

Democrats Will Vote to Retain Present Membership to Prevent Gains for the Republicans.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—In accordance with a unanimous agreement made in the House to-day, a reapportionment bill will be passed before the adjournment to-morrow, but it is not at all certain to-night that it will be the bill reported by Mr. Hopkins from the Census Committee. Although Mr. Hopkins expresses the greatest confidence that the House will stand by his bill, he does not seem able to find his majority easily. In the course of the debate to-day he admitted that if the number of members was not kept at 357, as proposed by the reported bill, the increase would probably raise the number to 395 or 399. This increase would exceed the outside number of members proposed by the Burleigh bill.

All efforts to canvass the House to show just how the vote will stand have proved unavailing. Although the idea on which the Hopkins bill is based—the advisability of keeping down the membership—is admitted even by its opponents to have merit, the Republican desire to secure increased representation is so great as to threaten to overcome all notions of convenience in doing business. Mr. Hepburn of Iowa, who spoke for the bill to-day, once more aired his grievance that members cannot secure recognition under the rules they impose upon the Speaker and themselves, and he favored keeping down the membership in order that he might the sooner and easier win his fight for individual recognition.

From such inquiries as have been made it is apparent that a large number of Democrats, some members say quite half of them, will vote for the Hopkins bill. The only reason assigned for this favor of a bill that prevents any increase and cuts down representation in some States is that if the House goes to the other extremity and adds 30 to 38 members, the gains will go largely to the Republicans, who, in getting increased representation in the House, will also greatly increase their apparent vote in the Electoral College. The Hopkins bill will make no change whatever in the Electoral vote or the relative strength of the parties in the college.

New York is not united in its attitude toward the bill. The Democrats are against increasing the whole representation, and admit that if there is any increase for New York it is likely to be followed by a redistricting of the State that will be disadvantageous to the Democrats. A block of 75 or 80 Republican votes is counted against the bill. Pennsylvania is divided, with the understanding that a majority of the members will vote to increase representation on the demand of Mr. Quay. But none of the Pennsylvania members have heard that Mr. Quay has issued any orders in the matter, and Mr. Platt laughs at the report that he has issued orders of a like character to the New York Republican members of the House.

Another report heard here is that the New England Senators will stand solid against the Hopkins bill if it reduces Maine's representation. One New England Senator said to-night that he did not think the New England alignment included any other Senator than Mr. Hale, and Mr. Frye might vote with him sympathetically. The disposition in the Senate is to treat the Apportionment bill as though it were not much of their business.

It was expected there would be a sequel to-day to the exciting clash of Saturday between Mr. Littlefield (Rep., Me.,) and Mr. Hopkins, (Rep., Ill.) But the latter made no effort at rejoinder, and contented himself with the direction of the measure toward the final vote.

Mr. Kitchen, (Dem., N. C.,) the first speaker to-day, supported the Hopkins bill, but said he would vote against the amendment requiring the Congressional districts in the several States to be "contiguous and compact." He said he did not believe Congress had the power to designate the manner in which the States should make up Congressional districts.

Mr. Crumpacker, the member of the Census Committee who presented the minority report in favor of reducing the representation in Southern States proportionate to the abridgement of the franchise, then took the floor. As between the Hopkins and Burleigh bills he said, he favored the latter, because it kept pace with the growth of the country. He argued that during recent years the influence of the House in legislation had steadily diminished, a condition due to the fact that the members of the lower house allowed themselves to be dominated by the Senate and the Chief Executive. If the membership was to remain stationary as the years went on, its influence would continue to decrease.

He then developed his argument in favor of reducing representation in certain Southern States along the line of his report. He pointed out the voting requirements in Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, and South Carolina, and adduced figures to show that in Louisiana 43 per cent. of the male citizens over twenty-one years of age were disfranchised, in Mississippi 42 per cent., in North Carolina 34 per cent., and in South Carolina 43 per cent. Mr. Crumpacker was frequently interrupted by members of the delegations from Louisiana, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Mississippi. They besieged him with questions and denied many of his statements.

Mr. Hepburn, who spoke next, declared that the House was no longer a deliberative body, having become so bulky as to lose its deliberative functions. Moreover, the representative character of a member of Congress had become merged and lost in this unwieldy body so that individual action had become impossible. He expressed the belief that it would be better to decrease rather than increase the size of the House.

The whole scheme and place of the House under the Constitution, Mr. Hepburn declared, was subverted, destroyed, and annihilated by the rules of the House. Instead of representing his constituents, every member surrendered his political power into the hands of others, and was unable to be heard on any measure without the consent of officials and committees to whom the power was surrendered.

The House then agreed unanimously that the final vote on the measure be taken to-morrow.

SENATORIAL NOMINATIONS.

BOISE, Idaho, Jan. 7.—Ex-Senator Fred T. Dubois (Silver Republican) was nominated by the joint caucus at 3 A. M. for United States Senator. Mr. Dubois represented his State in the Senate from 1891 to 1897, having been elected as a Republican. In 1898 he left his party, and allied himself with the Silverites. The present nomination is to succeed George L. Shoup, whose term expires March 3, 1901.

PIERRE, S. D., Jan. 7.—Congressman R. J. Gamble has been selected as the unanimous choice of the Republican caucus for United States Senator. Mr. Gamble is a lawyer, residing in Yankton, and is a member of the present Congress.

ANOTHER CANAL REPORT.

Senator Morgan Declares There Is No Excuse for Dallying with Any Power Over the Matter.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Senator Morgan to-day presented Part IV. of the report of the Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals on the project of an isthmian waterway. It is chiefly interesting in being a reaffirmation that the House bill now pending in the Senate providing for the construction of the Nicaragua Canal "furnishes the true, safe, and honorable method of dealing with the rights, power, and duties of Congress with an isthmian canal." The report says:

"Each new development of facts, each apparent change of diplomatic situations, each lapse of concessions made to our citizens by Nicaragua during a half century, each suggestion or overture for a joint control of the canal by other Governments in connection with the United States, each effort to lodge the ownership and control of this canal in corporate bodies instead of the United States, each obstruction that was presented, whether openly or secretly by competitive lines of transportation, or by speculative enterprises chartered by States for the purpose of preventing the United States from executing its settled policy of the exclusive ownership and control of a canal through the Isthmus of Darien has the more firmly convinced your committee that the provisions of House bill No. 2,538 are the just, safe, true, and honorable method of providing this necessary part of our physical, commercial, and political geography and a maritime highway for all the nations of the world.

"It is needless that any Government, corporation, or combination of individuals should attempt to divert the United States from its fixed policy as to the ownership and control of such a canal, and that element of discussion is dropped. Neither is it necessary to consider any route for a canal beside those of Panama and Nicaragua, the search for any other route having demonstrated that only these routes are practicable."

The report then treats the Nicaragua route as the one "selected finally," stating that the decisive vote in the House—225 to 25—determines the location, "so that it remains only to vindicate that decision against the pretensions of the Panama route." The report then argues in detail on the advantages of the Nicaragua route over all others. It sets forth what is stated to be "conclusive proof of the fatal defect of the Panama route," the complications in the way of having the United States take up the Panama route, &c. After referring to evidence given by Panama Canal officials, the report says:

"The statements made on that hearing disclose the animus of these parties in seeking a hearing before the committee and in its (Panama Canal Company) plan of obstruction in an unmistakable way. It is not to obtain aid from the United States. That idea is disdainfully repelled. It is not to obtain aid from the United States to construct, own, and control a canal at Panama. Such a proposition is foreign to their purposes, while they claim the obligation of the United States to protect the canal as one of the valuable rights of the company, which also concerns the United States as an interested observer of events.

"These hearings and reports in connection with the letters written by Mr. Cromwell, lead to the unavoidable conclusion that the new Panama Canal Company is still endeavoring to defeat a canal through Costa Rica and Nicaragua, as it was in 1893."

Mr. Morgan sets forth seven headings in the "plan to secure delay," including the complications on the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. He says:

"No excuse remains for delaying the action of Congress either to gratify the new Panama Canal Company or to dally with any other power in negotiations over a measure that enters deeply into our national financial policy, and will shape the action of our Government and people in a great many other important matters that concern them. This is a great and controlling measure of public expenditure which is now safely within our means and Congress should now determine that it will provide a law to sanction it, or else that it is not worthy of consideration and abandon it. Suspense will add nothing to our ability to enter upon this work, while, if it is delayed by our trepidation we shall grow weaker by the indulgence of that odious infirmity.

"If the House bill is passed in the Senate and becomes a law it is safe to expect that an agreement can be made with Great Britain as favorable, at least, to the United States as that contained in the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty, as amended, after the House bill is enacted. This expectation is not based upon any supposed want of power, or of will, in that great empire, to maintain what she considers a just or advantageous position, not yet, upon her magnanimity, for that we do not ask, but upon the fact that the canal, when built, will be of incalculable value to all her North and Central American possessions, and that she can never realize these advantages without the consent and assistance of the United States. Neither Great Britain or any combination of powers construct and maintain a canal at Panama without our consent."

WARSHIP CONTRACTS AWARDED.

Moran Brothers May Be Only Firm to Comply with Terms.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Secretary Long to-day sent out the formal notice to the Bath Iron Works, Newport News Shipbuilding Company, and Moran Brothers of Seattle that they each had been awarded a contract for the construction of a sheathed battleship, upon conditions already set out relative to cost. The Bath Iron Works and Newport News Shipbuilding Company have not yet indicated whether they will accept the department's proposition. Moran Brothers, however, being personally represented in Washington at this time, have told Secretary Long that they will accept the award. They undertake to construct a battleship for $3,511,000, with 4 per cent. added under the law allowing that bonus on Pacific Coast construction.

The citizens of Seattle have pledged themselves to raise a fund of $100,000, to be paid to Moran Brothers, to enable them to accept the proposal to build a battleship at the figure named in the act of Congress. It is very much doubted that the other bidders will be able to accept. In that case a change in plans and readvertisement will follow to reduce the cost of the ships involving the sacrifice of about 1,500 tons' displacement.

NEW CURRENCY BILL.

Measure Making Note Issues Responsive to the Needs of Business.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Representative Lovering (Rep., Mass.,) introduced a bill to-day "to make the currency responsive to the varying needs of business at all seasons and in all sections."

It permits National banks to issue guaranteed bank notes to an amount not exceeding, after six years, four-fifths of the value of bonds deposited for circulation and not exceeding 40 per cent. of the capital. The Controller of the Currency is not required to issue guaranteed notes if, for any reson relating to the condition of the bank, the general state of the circulation or the foreign exchanges, he shall deem such action to be inexpedient. Neither shall he increase the ratio of issues of guaranteed bank notes beyond 10 per cent. of the bank's capital if the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem such policy detrimental to the money standard and to the public interests.

The guaranteed bank notes are to be protected in case of the failure of the issuing bank by a gold guarantee fund equal to 5 per cent. of the amount of notes issued, and this fund is to be maintained thereafter by an annual tax on circulation of one-half of 1 per cent. per annum. The original deposit by banks shall be returned to them when the proceeds of taxes shall have raised the guarantee fund to 5 per cent. of the outstanding circulation. Any excess of the fund above 5 per cent. shall be covered into the United States Treasury, which will be liable in case of need for the reimbursement to the guarantee fund. The guarantee fund is further safeguarded by adding to it the proceeds of the premium on bonds which are sold to redeem bond-secured notes.

SUBSIDY BILL'S CHANCES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Senator Pettigrew's answer to the announcement that the Commerce Committee expects to force a vote on the Ship Subsidy bill by resorting to night sessions, is a defiance of the programme that assumes that he is ready to submit rather than bear the weariness of night work, and will let the bill go through rather than "sit up with it." He says that this intimation is only a threat, and that he will not let the bill pass if he can prevent its passage.

But even without the opposition of Mr. Pettigrew, the bill is not assured of smooth headway to the President. Senator Aldrich (Rep., R. I.,) said to-night, in talking of the bill and the amendments proposed to meet the views of the Commerce Committee: "The bill seems to have been amended a good deal to suit the committee. It may have to be amended next to satisfy the Senate."

The character of the opposition to the Subsidy bill on the Republican side is such as to naturally give Mr. Hanna (Rep., Ohio,) concern. It is not loud or threatening, but it is influential, and is apt to be more troublesome than the opposition of Senators Pettigrew, Allen, (Pop., Neb.,) and Butler, (Pop., N. C.) Some of the amendments are alluded to by a prominent Republican Senator as so clumsy as to direct attention to the weakness of the measure. The proposed amendment to practically subsidize the coastwise trade, by giving bounties to vessels carrying cargoes to the Pacific by way of the Isthmus, was described to-day by a Senator as indicating that the Commerce Committee had lost its sense of humor.

The subsidy propaganda is endeavoring to bolster up the subsidy cause in the Senate by denying the report that the House has undergone a change of sentiment toward the bill, and is now against it. Gen. Grosvenor (Rep., Ohio,) is quoted as declaring that the contrary is the fact, and that while the opposition comes from free trade and free ship interests, the support of the bill is encouraged by organized labor. The demonstration in favor of the bill by organized labor will, he thinks, "prove a culminating influence in favor of the bill." Representative Ray (Rep., N. Y.,) believes it will pass, "because it ought to pass," and because "it is the American way, when a new industry comes to the front, and it begins to make a struggle for existence, that the representatives of the people help to give it a start by giving it some sort of protection."

The Subsidy bill may not be reached in the Senate before the end of the week. Mr. Aldrich hopes for a vote on the Army bill by Wednesday, but no one can tell what interruptions may occur to-morrow and the next day to carry it along for a day or two beyond that indicated as proper for disposing of it. Mr. Allen, who was expected to resort to filibustering on the Army bill, is away from the Senate suffering from temporary indisposition.

MR. McKINLEY HAS A COLD.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—President McKinley has a slight cold this morning and is denying himself to all callers. The cold is not serious and will not interfere with the reception to the Diplomatic Corps to be given at the White House Wednesday night. The President and Mrs. McKinley have abandoned their proposed trip to Canton Thursday, where they were going to attend the funeral of Assistant Paymaster of the Navy Barber, who was a nephew of Mrs. McKinley.

The prevailing epidemic of grip has caused quite a large Congressional sick list. Speaker Henderson is progressing well and is out of bed, but it was not deemed advisable to have him resume the duties of the Speakership to-day. Chairman Payne of the Ways and Means Committee was among those slightly indisposed to-day, and did not attend the session of the House.

Secretary Hay is still indisposed, and, although his cold has abated, it was not deemed prudent for him to go to his office this morning.

THE SUBSIDY FIGHT.

It will be a disgrace to the Democratic minority in the Senate if Mr. HANNA is allowed to carry out his threat to pass the Ship Subsidy bill at this session. Undoubtedly there is a majority of the Senate in favor of the bill. Mr. HANNA has arranged that with his accustomed energy and astuteness. The forces under his control are powerful and he knows how to use them. But the bill is not one that ought to be passed simply because a majority of the Senators have been induced to support it. On the contrary, it is one which ought to be fought with all the weapons of parliamentary opposition, and in the Senate these are ample to defeat the measure for this session.

The bill has not even the prestige of a party measure in the legitimate sense of that term. It is true that it has been more or less vaguely indorsed by the conventions of the Republican Party, but it does not involve any principle to which the party is really committed, and in effect it violates the principle of protection to American industries on which it pretends to be based. It offers a large share in the subsidies which it provides to foreign-built ships, and then impudently confines this favor to a few wealthy men who had planned for such ships in advance and in contemplation of this very bill, which they aided in drawing up. There have been mean things done in the name of protection in the past, but they have at least been for the profit of men dealing in American goods, and they have nominally been for the advantage of all Americans. This is the first time in the history of legislation that a small group of beneficiaries has been selected and all others excluded. That is not protection in any decent sense. It would be more decent and less offensive if the bill directed that the Secretary of the Treasury should pay money to these men on proof that they were among the authors of the measure.

The bill is intended, according to the claims of its advocates, to promote the creation of an American merchant marine, built in America, owned in America, manned by Americans, and carrying American products. It will not do any of these things, and the pretense that it will is hollow. A large proportion of the ships to which subsidies will go under the bill are, as we have pointed out, to be foreign built. None of the ships need be owned entirely by Americans. There is no adequate requirement that even a fraction of the crew need be Americans. By far the larger part of the subsidies will go to ships that do not and can not carry any considerable amount of freight. It is as absolute and shameless a piece of special legislation for the benefit of a small number of rich persons at the expense of the Treasury and the taxpayers as was ever devised, and it is decidedly worse than anything that has ever been undertaken by Congress.

The bill has no genuine popular support. There is no real popular demand for it, never has been, and never will be. It does not appeal even to the selfish interests of any large class. When it was in the Senate in the last session it was so strongly opposed by the representatives of organized labor, and by farmers' organizations throughout the West and South especially, that it was abandoned for fear of the effect on the approaching Presidential and Congressional elections. That opposition has never been appeased, but it is now thought safe to ignore it. The one class that could be relied on to support the measure if it really would accomplish what it is pretended that it will accomplish is the shippers of the United States, who are interested in obtaining as full and cheap service on the ocean as possible. This class does not support the measure, and some of the most active and influential members of the class oppose it strongly, as witness the Merchants' Association of New York.

In these circumstances, we repeat that it will be disgraceful to the Democratic minority in the Senate if the bill is allowed to pass at this session. They are bound by every consideration of party loyalty and of rational patriotism to defeat it. It not only violates every principle of Democratic belief in the matter of economic legislation, but it is such a flagrant and scandalous job that it ought to be killed for its ingrained viciousness. It is an offense to common honesty, and if the Republicans in the Senate have not the independence of party discipline needed to stand up against it, the Democrats should not hesitate to do so. Nothing but a total loss of voice should prevent them from talking the miserable thing to death.

MANCHURIA AND PEKING.

One of the most promising facts concerning the negotiations about to be opened at Peking is the reported inability of LI-HUNG-CHANG to take an active part in them, because that aged and foxy person has been, for at least a decade, the hired man of Russia in Chinese councils. Russia is the one Power which has an interest of its own, quite separate from the general interest of commerce, in Manchuria and North China. It is th t interest which she is pushing in the councils of Peking, and which she has taken advantage of the disturbances in China to advance, with her usual lack of scruple, by massacres which have sickened and appalled foreign observers. It is that interest which she will no doubt unscrupulously urge in the negotiations at Peking.

The letter which we publish in another column from Mr. WILLIAM BARCLAY PARSONS calls our attention to an article in The North China Daily News, which sets forth in detail the story, already familiar in outline, of the procedures by which, under pretense of gaining and protecting a railway concession, Russia has obtained almost complete control of Manchuria. Her efforts have so far prospered that a St. Petersburg paper the other day arrogantly gave notice to the Powers that they need not concern themselves about Manchuria. In other words Russia will endeavor to have her seizure of Manchuria regarded as an accomplished fact. She has, she will try to have it agreed, secured her share of the partition of China in advance.

Now, the Power which has the greatest interest of all in opposing this demand is the United States. The very remarkable statistical table appended to Mr. PARSONS's letter, which we also owe to him, shows the enormous growth, within the past decade, of American trade at the port of Niu-Chwang, which is the port of Manchuria, though it happens itself to be situated just across the line from that province. But Niu-Chwang is a treaty port, and the revenues derived from it are pledged for the obligations of China. Nevertheless, Russia, which owns 1 per cent. of the shipping that enters the port, and contributes a minute fraction of its revenue, has seized the Custom House and assumes, in direct defiance of the rights of all the world, to control the trade of the port.

We repeat, we are more interested than any other nation to upset this iniquitous arrangement. As Mr. PARSONS points out, we are the chief trader at the port, and the chief purveyor of the "hinterland." Next to us in commercial interest come Great Britain and Japan. The identity of interest among these three Powers suggests a concert of action at Peking, and a concert of action necessarily directed against Russia, which, in the commercial competition, is already negligible, but which clearly aims at winning by throwing her sword into the commercial scales.

What is to be done? We are not called upon at present to answer this question. Evidently the first thing to be done is to make it clear on which side our interest lies. And this elucidation ought to be especially impressive to the manufacturers in the North, and more particularly in the South, who have been reasonably looking for an enlarging market in North China which it is certain that they will not be allowed to get if Russia has her way. In the councils of Peking our natural allies are the nations which have a similar stake to our own in the freedom of trade in North China. These, as we have pointed out, are Great Britain and Japan. Any nation has the same interest which can sustain itself under free industrial competition. And this should mean that we can count upon the co-operation of Germany. But it is we who have the greatest stake in the commercial future of Manchuria, and so the greatest interest in preventing it from coming under Russian control. The first and most necessary point is that we should understand our own National interest in the settlement of the Manchurian question.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN GERMANY.

Germany is suffering from the lack of free capital. The symptoms so clearly described in the Berlin letter published in THE TIMES Annual Financial Review yesterday point unmistakably to overinvestment. Capital has been locked up, immobilized, almost as fast as it has been produced. There is no sufficient accumulation, no margin for the great trade of the empire. The money rate responds too quickly to the demands of borrowers because there is not sufficient free capital to steady it and keep it within bounds. It is altogether abnormal in an old and great industrial community to see the mortgage banks struggling ineffectually to maintain a rate of 3 per cent. for the securities in which they make investments, being finally forced to advance to 4 and 4½ per cent. It is abnormal to see the interest rate advanced on State and municipal loans. The tendency is the other way.

When the average earning power of capital in Germany declined from the long-standing rate of 5 per cent. to 4 per cent. or less, investors refused to accept the lower rate and sought securities and investments yielding a better return. This involved risk and loss, but it led to something else—an investment craze. Great numbers of companies were created with unwarrantably large capital, manufactures were overstimulated for a country not yet sure of its markets, and, most foolish of all, German capital that should have been kept at home for the development of the industries and business of the empire was invested in foreign Government loans, some of them of an exceedingly shaky nature.

The consequence of these follies is that Germany is now in a condition that excites apprehension in the money markets of the world. The plain truth is that the Germans are not yet rich enough to play these games. They are played recklessly on a much larger scale on the London market, but England has a capital reserve, a background for even her wildest speculations. We are a very much richer Nation than Germany, but we keep to our cautious habits. We loan some money to foreign Governments and to foreign municipalities, but we take only the best bonds. Egyptians and South Americans do not interest us in our present stage of financial development. In addition to our bond investments, as yet comparatively small, we loan large sums in Europe practically "on call," representing balances owed to us for our surplus exports. But this indicates a very strong position, which is further testified to by the ability of our Government to sell 2 per cent. bonds that command a premium, and by the low rate at which our municipalities borrow money.

Nations grow rich by the application of brains, industry, and existing capital to their natural resources. When accumulation has reached to the point of overflow the rate of increase is accelerated by sound foreign investments. But Germany has anticipated this overflow point, while we have been somewhat tardy in recognizing its arrival. The people of Germany have a thousand years of industrial history behind them, and we have barely a century and a half, but she never saw a time when her national wealth, in proportion to population, was increasing at the rate now attained in this country. Our mines alone, exclusive of iron and steel, yielded $255,000,000 last year, of which $76,000,000 was gold. Our exports reached a total of $1,440,000,000, or $640,000,000 more than our total imports. We sold in foreign markets manufactured goods to the value of $445,000,000.

These figures are prodigious, of course. They excite alarm in Europe, where there exists a vague apprehension that their industries are in danger of being ruined by ours. Serious economists even talk of a European customs union against us. That step has not yet become necessary, and will not have to be taken if Europe will study the methods by which we have come to this industrial pre-eminence and profit by the lesson. If we had attempted to do in 1880 what Germany has done we should not be the financial power that we are to-day. We had then recovered from the depression following the troubles of 1873, and business was extraordinarily prosperous. But instead of buying Argentine bonds or investing in the shares of overcapitalized companies we put our spare money into railroad building and began rapidly to develop the resources of the continent. Not only that, we borrowed hundreds of millions of dollars in Europe and put foreign capital at work beside domestic capital. Our ventures have been so successful that we have paid off a great part of the foreign loans, and our capital has accumulated so fast that we are now able to accommodate borrowers from across the sea. We, too, have put vast sums into corporate securities, emitted, some of them, in large-minded disregard of the value and probable earning power of the properties upon which they were based. But our sound investments are in so much greater volume that we are able to charge off occasional losses incurred in these risks, and although new companies with an aggregate share capital of four billions of dollars were formed in 1899 and an aggregate of two and one-half billions was reached in 1900, there is no lack of money in our financial centres, although there was never a time in the country's history when so much capital was in daily use in its staple industries.

Germany will find relief from her present straitened condition in free borrowing for all legitimate undertakings, supplemented by industry and economy on the part of her people. We cannot say very much about the cost of her standing army so long as we continue to pay out $145,000,000 of public money every year in pensions to soldiers who did their fighting forty years ago, but there is evident economic loss in the maintenance of her peace establishment army of 700,000 men. That is a pretty large deduction from the productive capacity of a country with a population of 52,000,000.

VETERINARIES AND "THE STAFF."

The Secretary of the New York State Veterinary Society has done himself and those whom he represents much credit by sending to Mr. ROOT the letter which Mr. ROOT in turn has sent to the Chairman of the Senate Military Committee with a commentary of his own.

The commentary we printed yesterday. The Secretary's objections to creating another semi-independent bureau in the War Department, of which the subordinates should be responsible only to the head, and the head practically irresponsible to anybody, are strongly and pungently expressed. They will command the sympathy of everybody whose memory goes back as far as the melancholy concentration at Tampa of the force which was to invade Cuba. Instead of furnishing an army corps ready equipped, the staff produced a disgraceful chaos, and when public indignation became too hot to be endurable, "they all with one accord began to make excuses." The exhibition of the unspeakable EAGAN was only the final expression of the insubordination which the organization of the United States Army had been for years fostering.

Mr. ROOT very strongly objects to adding another nest of barnacles in a "corps" of veterinaries, responsible not to the commander of the troops to which they are attached, but to the head of their "corps" in Washington. One can fancy the feelings of a Colonel of cavalry who could not hold any farrier in his command responsible for the condition of the horses.

But we do not think the Secretary makes the most of his case in saying that he has "no serious objection" to giving military rank to the veterinarians. What has doctoring horses to do with commanding men? There is an "Admiral" on the retired list of the navy who has been simply an engineer. There will soon be, if there be not already, another who has been a Chaplain. We ought to draw the line somewhere, before we come to addressing a veterinary or a dentist as "Colonel." Military rank ought to imply military command, or at least the capability to exercise it, or it is meaningless and mischievous.

The Senate bill does the obviously correct thing about the veterinaries, in giving them the "pay and allowances," but not the rank, of various officers of the line. But the principle is of wider application than has thus far been made of it. The barnacles of the staff have their own several excuses for the existence of their several corps and bureaus, which come to this, that they are, respectively, experts in some non-military art. An officer in the Commissary Department will tell you that Mr. ROOT's idea of aerating that department by means of a continual current of details from the line is "crazy," because an officer of the Commissary Department is a specialist of much experience and high grade in the matter of buying provisions. An ordnance officer will similarly tell you that the Secretary is "all off" in proposing to consolidate his "bureau" with the artillery, because an ordnance officer is really an expert in mechanical engineering, whose place cannot be taken without vast disadvantage by a mere line officer who has been giving his attention to nothing more serious or specialized than the tactics of his arm. But then, if an expert provision buyer, and not an army officer, is needed in one "corps," and a mechanical engineer, and not an army officer, is needed in another, and it would be ruinous to interchange either of these experts with common line officers, why should the experts have military rank at all, the hardships and perils of which they so generally shun? Why should not they also, like the veterinaries and dentists and Chaplains and engineers and doctors, be contented with the "pay and allowances" of certain grades of the real fighting line of the army, without asking also for the rank of which they object to the correlative duties? We confess we can see no good reason why, upon their own grounds, the barnacle-officers of the staff bureaus, who insist upon being continued as such, should not be put upon the footing of the "civilian employés" of whom they claim so many of the immunities. But we have a notion that they would not like that, either.

AMERICAN TRADE IN MANCHURIA.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I hand you herewith a copy of a letter which appeared in a recent number of the North China Daily News, written by a foreign resident of China of many years' standing, which gives an accurate description of the commercial situation in Manchuria, and the risks that other nations run in allowing Russia to become possessed of that section of the Chinese Empire.

Reports of the Imperial Maritime Customs show that about one-half of all the foreign goods received at Niu-Chwang are of American origin; the remaining half is divided chiefly between Great Britain and Japan. As to the development of the American trade, the customs official, himself an Englishman, wrote the report for 1899 as follows:

"The entry of 584,877 pieces of American drills shows the firm hold these goods have on the market, they having increased tenfold in as many years. American sheetings are even more sought after, over 1,100,000 pieces having come in. These two items alone testify to the value of the Manchuria market to American piece goods.

"The importation of American cotton flannel quadrupled in comparison with the total of the preceding year. American kerosene oil has leaped from 1,730,000 to 2,282,000 gallons. American flour increased from 38 piculs to 29,343 piculs."

These are the facts that American merchants should bear in mind in considering the trade of Manchuria, and they should remember that, in reading articles like the one that I incluse herewith, the nation whose interests are far away above those of any other in Manchuria is their own.

WILLIAM BARCLAY PARSONS.

NUGGETS.

Dumb.

"Doctor, don't you think that raw oysters are healthy?

"Yes; I never knew one to complain."—Baltimore Jewish Comment.

Knew When to Go.

"I will," he said, and flew away.—Philadelphia Times.

THE WISE MAN.

Newton Newkirk in Ohio State Journal.

There was a wise man in our town
Who thought he bore a life of charm;
But once he rose up in his sleep,
Fell down the steps and broke his arm.

The wise man pondered long and deep,
Then to an underwriter went
And took a gilt-edged policy
Insuring him from accident.

The months flew by, the wise man kept
Of swiftly passing time no track,
'Til one somnambulistic night
He fell again and broke his back.

"I'm insured!" the wise man gasped;
Then he sank back and spoke no more;
They hunted up his policy—
It had expired the day before.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL

Edna May as the Central Figure in a New Musical Burletta.

Edna May, wearing a gown which seemed to be made of cloth of gold and richly bejeweled, was revealed at 8:40 o'clock last evening on the stage of the Herald Square Theatre, standing in the centre of an iceberg which had just been struck by lightning in an artificial thunderstorm manufactured only six miles from the north pole, by a party of American scientists. Miss May had been in the iceberg 500 years, but she took her sudden and violent thawing philosophically, as that young acquaintance of Princes and Dukes seems to take everything, and was not even startled when she learned that if she did not drink from the golden cup of Olaf she would die in ninety days.

There was an exciting hunt, then, for the cup, which was missing, (as might have been expected of the golden cup of Olaf,) but Miss May did not get excited a bit. She simply changed her cloth of gold frock for a neat jacket, with closely fitting unmentionables, and tight leggings, and became a pirate. The pirates had possessed the cup, it was then learned, but the Disagreeable Man had bought it, and, just to be disagreeable, he would not let Miss May drink out of it, not even after Miss Virginia Earl had "jollied" him.

This Disagreeable Man was not the nice fellow out of "Ships that Pass in the Night," but was only Mr. Harry Conor pretending to be disagreeable. He was so very mean that, living in a town where sneezing on the streets was forbidden, he always carried a pepper box in his pocket. But when Miss May changed her pirate togs and came forth as a demure-looking but questionable Quakeress and deliberately sang for him—well, the Disagreeable May was moved to tears.

It may be well to pause here, for a historical note. The spectacle of Harry Conor weeping under the influence of song was first revealed on the stage of this very theatre, then called the Park, in a piece entitled "Little Puck," away back in the eighties. Afterward the same "turn" was a source of boundless public joy for some thousands of nights in "A Trip to Chinatown."

It is one of the funniest things in "The Girl from Up There," book by Hugh Morton, music by Gustave Kerker, produced by Charles Frohman at the Herald Square Theatre last night. But the very funniest "turn" of all is Charles Aldrich's new adaptation of his tramp burglar act, often seen in the music halls. This tramp burglar now steals the golden cup and takes it to Paris. Hence the gay boulevards in Act III. Hence more and more gorgeous clothes for Miss May. Hence chansonettes and grisettes.

The book of the new piece is not infrequently dull. There is not a flash of wit in Mr. Morton's dialogue, and as for his lyrics, few of them, except those allotted to Miss May, are sung intelligibly. That young lady certainly does enunciate clearly, and she makes, as it seems, the best use of her very few gifts. Her face is as hopelessly immobile as ever, and her motions as stilted. But there is a perceptible charm in everything she does, and her singing voice is not bad for musical pieces of this description.

It is better, for instance, than Miss Earl's. This once exceedingly popular performer seems to have forgotten all she learned in her term of service at Daly's. She lacks repose and sings badly. She is still young and good-looking, and perhaps she is waiting for a good part.

Of the other principals, Otis Harlan and Harry Kelly are a pair of clown kings, Mr. Kelly being by far the better clown of the two, because he is more amusing and a better acrobat; Harry Davenport is a tipsy officer, who is sometimes droll and never offensive, David Montgomery and Fred Stone are a brace of limber pirates, and Edna Aug leads a sort of rainbow dance, singing a song about "Seraphina and Her Concertina." Those, indeed, may be its only words. No others could be distinguished last night. But Miss Aug is nimble and comely.

Mr. Kerker's music is obviously and persistently Mr. Kerker's. It is the same old music. It has spirit, and dash generally, and once in a while there is an appreciable hint of sentiment. But the music alone will not make the new piece go.

The chorus girls and ballerines are well trained and look well. But there seems to be positively nothing new for them to do nowadays. A chronic grumbler, watching the posturing and gyration of these young women, finds himself wishing that chorus girls might be born with more than two legs, (or fewer,) so that their stage business might be varied. The scenery is sufficient, and the manner of the production of the new burletta is not open to cavil.

The display of "floral trophies," tributes to the heroine of international artistic triumph by the presumably gilded youth of this metropolis, turned the main foyer into a florists' exhibition.

WILLARD AS TOM PINCH.

At the Garden Theatre last night Mr. E. S. Willard made his first appearance in this city as Tom Pinch, the title character of a pleasing little play in three acts, being a dramatization of certain incidents in Charles Dickens's "Martin Chuzzlewit." The story of the play is simple. It treats of the love of poor Tom Pinch, one of Mr. Pecksniff's pupils, for beautiful Mary Graham, the ward of old Mr. Chuzzlewit. She is betrothed to young Martin Chuzzlewit, who has had a falling-out with his grandfather, and after a short stay at Mr. Pecksniff's, seeks his fortune in America.

While he is away Pecksniff makes advances to Miss Graham, who, with her grandfather, has moved into Pecksniff's house. Pecksniff charges Tom, in whom the girl confides, with his own indiscretion, and sends him from the house. In the last act Tom Pinch has found employment as the librarian of an unknown lover of books, who turns out to be old Mr. Chuzzlewit. The latter's grandson then comes back, is reconciled with the old gentleman, and marries the girl. Pecksniff falls in disgrace with every one, and everybody, including Tom Pinch, is happy.

The play was well received last night by an audience which, unfortunately, was not as large as it should have been. There were many curtain calls, though, and at the end Mr. Willard was greeted with a veritable burst of cheers, to which he responded with a few modest words of thanks for the appreciation of the work of his company.

Mr. Willard has a modest part in modest Tom Pinch, without fine speeches and grand climaxes, but he acts it with such charm that he must endear himself to the heart of the most blasé theatregoer. His support is excellent. Miss Maud Hoffman as Mary Graham has few opportunities, but she does her scene in the second act with Pecksniff and Tom Pinch with fine feeling.

Mr. J. G. Taylor, a veteran comedian, in the part of Old Martin Chuzzlewit; Mr. Ernest Stallard as famous Mark Tapley of the Blue Dragon, and Mr. Frederick Volpe as Mr. Pecksniff were excellent and as like-like, or rather as like the old pictures, as possible. Alice Lonnon and Laura Linden as Pecksniff's daughters, Mercy and Charity, were also very amusing. The remainder of the company did full justice to its parts.

CHAUNCEY OLCOTT'S NEW PLAY.

"Garrett O'Magh" Is Well Received by Fourteenth Street Audience.

Irish songs, jokes a plenty, and stirring love scenes were what made a big Fourteenth Street theatre audience outdo itself in applauding Chauncey Olcott last night. The play was a new one and was called "Garrett O'Magh." The star himself, clad in lavender fleshings and wearing a curly auburn wig, was vociferously cheered every now and then. When he sang "The Lass I Love" there were five encores, and his other songs, "My Sweet Queen," "Ireland A'Gra Ma Chree," and "Paddy's Cot," were received with equal enthusiasm.

Eileen Nagle was the name of the heroine, and the part was taken by Miss Edith Barker. Eileen was a sort of Lydia Languish girl, with long sighs, tears at every turn, dramatic hand-clasps, and all that kind of thing. She eloped with Garrett O'Magh, who was not romantic at all and thought to cure his lady-love of that fault by overdoing the thing and showing her what a silly thing eloping would be. They climbed down the regulation ladder from her window in the moonlight, rode fifteen miles to be married, had some adventures incidentally, and they were happy evermore.

A feature of the performance was the acting of a little girl, Tottie Carr being her programme name. She was a niece of the hero in the play, and said long lines without a falter, although she was so small that one hardly expected her to be able to talk at all. What the audience enjoyed most, probably, were the awkward love scenes between Rufus Hardy, a bashful American, and Josephine, a by no means bashful French maid. The cast follows:

Garrett O'Magh	Chauncey Olcott
Mrs. Mary Devlin, his aunt	Margaret Fitzpatrick
Robert Nagle, a Dublin attorney	Charles Abbott
Eileen Nagle, his daughter	Edith Barker
May Nagle, his daughter	Tottie Carr

"AIDA" AT THE OPERA.

A Superb Performance of Verdi's Work Last Night.

The performance of Verdi's great opera "Aïda," which was given at the Metropolitan Opera House last night, will not soon be forgotten by those who had the good fortune to hear it. It was a performance which started in a high key and seemed to reach a higher one before the evening was over. The joys of the occasion began when the curtain rose and revealed the stalwart De Reszke brothers, Jean and Edouard, as Radames and Ramfis. With the aid of Mr. Plon, the conductor, who was evidently determined to make a record for himself and set out to direct with energy and some distribution of light and shade, they began the performance on a level of art which called for all the prowess of their associates to maintain. Mr. Jean de Reszke sometimes omits the tenor's early aria, "Celeste Aïda," but he did not do so last night. On the contrary, he sang it like a transcendant master of lyric art and with a glorious splendor of tone. That achievement set the key for the evening and thenceforward all things went well. The grand finale of the second act, the pageant and ensemble, went with a magnificent swing and vigor and the enthusiasm of the house after it was great.

Mr. Jean de Reszke has not treated us to his Radames for several seasons. His singing last night must have given grief to those who have been hoping for his end, for he seemed to have more voice than he did when he was last here. And he sang with splendid freedom and declamatory power. It was a night of triumph for him. He made a splendid figure of the Egyptian hero, and when it came to the beauties of the Nile scene, he brought them out with consummate skill. And he did not forget the composition of the character, either. His Radames was an intelligible and sympathetic person. He had a most agreeable associate in Mme. Gadski, who was last night added to the long list of Aïdas already heard on the Metropolitan stage. This sincere and painstaking soprano was very successful with her first attempt here at this part. She sang the music with good judgment in the phrasing and shading, and with much feeling. Certainly her "Ritorna vincitor," and her "O patria mia" were admirable pieces of singing, while in the big finale of the second act her voice rang out with unexpected power, soaring over the mass of sound with abundant power.

Mr. Scotti's vigorous and magnetic Amonasro is already well known to this public. It was up to its highest standard last night, which is another saying that it is the best we have had since Pantaleoni's. Mme. Louise Homer deserves praise for a well-conceived treatment of the part of Amneris, which was marred only by her eagerness to give more tone than she could without undue effort. Mr. Edouard de Reszke was a sonorous Ramfis, and Mr. Journet was an excellent King. At the last previous performance he sang the High Priest, and Mr. Muhlmann was the King. It is by these constant changes of cast that Mr. Grau keeps up the interest of his audiences. It is not often, however, that the moves on his operatic chessboard result in such happy combinations as that of last night. With such a cast, "Aïda," a too much neglected work, ought to be performed several times in the course of the season. The mise en scène might be improved, but it is quite as good as the patrons of the house demand. We go to the Metropolitan to hear singers. If they will always sing as they did last night, we shall be happy.

To Succeed Mr. Grau at Covent Garden.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—André Mesager, the French composer, has been appointed manager of the Covent Garden opera, in succession to Maurice Grau.

THEATRES AND MUSIC HALLS.

MURRAY HILL THEATRE.—Bronson Howard's "Aristocracy" is the stock company's play this week.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.—"Hodge, Podge & Co." with Peter F. Dailey and Christie Macdonald, is this week's bill.

EDEN MUSEE.—The moving pictures, the good music, and the vast collection of waxworks combine to make an excellent entertainment.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Louis Mann and Clara Lipman appear this week in their mirth-provoking piece called "All on Account of Eliza."

KOSTER & BIAL'S.—Loie Fuller's extraordinary fire dances please as much as ever. Violet Friend has already secured a large following. The bill is rich and varied.

HAMMERSTEIN'S VICTORIA.—Marie Dressler introduced her familiar burlesque of opera, "The Village Beauty," as one of the divertissements in "Miss Prinnt" last night.

KEITH'S UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—Katharina Bloodgood, the contralto, is again in the bill this week. The programme is especially rich in acrobatism, but is good all through.

PROCTOR'S ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIFTH STREET THEATRE.—Marie Wainwright, in "Lady Di's Escapade," caried off the honors of the bill. There were many vaudeville specialities.

HURTIG & SEAMON'S MUSIC HALL.—Joe Hart and Carrie De Mar appeared in "The Quiet Mr. Gay," and Etta Butler presented her excellent caricatures of stage favorites. Streator's Zouaves were wildly applauded.

PROCTOR'S FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—The Four Cohans began their farewell week in vaudeville. The Marcel Livity, were also very amusing. The remainder of the company did full justice to its parts.

BRIEFS IN THE PORTO RICAN CASES FILED

Government Counsel Replies to ex-President Harrison.

Plaintiff's Counsel Contend Islands Are as Much a Part of the United States as Any State.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Solicitor General Richards, in behalf of the Government, to-day filed in the United States Supreme Court a brief in the cases brought by Ellas S. A. De Luna, Samuel B. Downes, Henry W. Dooley, Carlos Armstrong, and George W. Crossman against either George R. Bidwell, Collector of the Port of New York, or the United States directly, all involving questions of the taxation relations between the United States and our insular possessions. The cases will come up for argument to-morrow. The feature of the brief is the direct notice it takes of ex-President Harrison's address at Ann Arbor, and the response made thereto in behalf of the Administration.

The De Luna case concerns duties collected on sugars imported into New York from Porto Rico after ratification of the Paris peace treaty and before passage of the Porto Rican act; the Downes case involves duties on oranges brought from Porto Rico into New York after the passage of the Porto Rican act; the two Dooley cases and the Armstrong case, duties on goods imported from Porto Rico during military occupation, and partly before and partly after the ratification of the treaty, and also after passage of the Porto Rican Tariff act, and the Crossman case, duties on liquors imported from Honolulu into New York after the passage of the resolution annexing the Hawaiian Islands, and before the passage of the act providing for their government.

The reference to ex-President Harrison's Ann Arbor address is preceded by a statement of the Government's position, with reference to the extent to which the Constitution applies to newly acquired territory. The brief denies the doctrine of ex-proprio vigore and that all the limitations of the Constitution apply everywhere throughout the scope of the authority of the Government, but says there are limitations in the Constitution which do apply throughout both the States and Territories organized and unorganized.

"Because some limitations apply it does not follow that all apply. Those which do apply everywhere, both within and without the United States in its broadest sense, it says, are those securing the blessings of justice and liberty to all the people. Tyranny and oppression cannot Constitutionally exist under the sovereignty of the Republic, whose founders declared that all men are entitled to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That is what Mr. Justice Bradley meant when he said in Mormon Church vs. United States:

"Doubtless Congress in legislating for the Territories would be subject to those fundamental limitations in favor of personal rights which are formulated in the Constitution and its amendments, but these limitations would exist rather by inference, and the general spirit of the Constitution, from which Congress derives all its powers, than by any express and direct application of its provisions."

THE GOVERNMENT'S POSITION.

This statement of the Government's standing ground leads up to the notice which it takes of ex-President Harrison's address. Of this address Solicitor General Richards's brief says:

"In a recent address, a portion of which I understand has been brought to the attention of the court, a distinguished statesman and lawyer affects to believe that if the view of the Government is correct, Congress could, without Constitutional objection, pass a Porto Rican act providing for a number of shocking things. The Government has never asserted and does not believe that Congress has the power of a despot in Porto Rico. The fundamental limitations in favor of personal rights which are formulated in the Constitution and its amendments, referred to by Mr. Justice Bradley, stand in the way of everything suggested which shocks the moral sense.

"Congress could not pass any ex post facto law or declare an attainder, or grant any title of nobility, or provide for the trial or punishment of treason other than in the way marked out by the Constitution, all these things being prohibited by direct and applicable provisions. If the first ten amendments do not limit, by direct application, Congress in legislating for our new possessions, neither do they operate within the States which compose the Union.

"As this Court, speaking by Chief Justice Waite, said in United States vs. Cruikshank et al: 'The first amendment to the Constitution prohibits Congress from abridging the right of the people to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.' This, like the other amendments proposed and adopted at the same time, was not intended to limit the powers of the State Governments in respect to their own citizens, but to operate upon the National Government alone."

RIGHTS OF THE PEOPLE.

"'Protection to life, liberty, and property rests primarily with the States,' as Chief Justice Fuller said in In re Kemmler. 'The Constitution makes no provision for protecting the citizens of the respective States in their religious liberties; this is left to the State Constitution and laws,' said Mr. Justice Catron, in Permoli vs. First Municipality.

"The Constitution forbids the States to pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or to grant any title of nobility, and the fourteenth amendment provides that no State shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws; but outside the range of these limitations the people of the State, through its Constitution and laws, are supreme.

"They can define treason against the State as they see fit; they can limit the freedom of speech and of the press; they can restrict the bearing of arms; they can provide for the quartering of troops; they can regulate the right of search and of arrest; they can provide for the trial of capital or other infamous crimes upon information and without indictment and without a jury, and they have done so. They can do away with the trial of civil suits by a jury. And they may do many other things which I need not enumerate.

"The right of the people of the States to change their laws and system of procedure so as to make them conform to changed views of administration, or the exigencies of their social life, has been sustained. If the Constitutional guarantees relating to indictment by a Grand Jury and trial by a petit jury are not fundamental in character and therefore do not tie the hands of the inhabitants of a Territory when organizing a State, why should they tie the hands of the President and Congress in preserving order and protecting life and property in our new possessions?

PEACE TREATY'S EFFECT.

"It is a strange contention that as soon as the treaty went into effect, the power of the President and Congress to preserve order in the new possessions ceased. There were no Grand Juries, no petit juries, no machinery for punishing crime by the processes of the Anglo-Saxon law, and yet, if the limitations intended for the States at once of their own force applied in these new possessions, crime could be punished in no other way. The Constitution, which gave the United States the power to acquire territory by treaty, and imposed upon Congress the duty of disposing of and governing it, did not leave the National Government helpless by demanding impossibilities."

The brief then goes into the question of the validity of the duties assessed and collected on the several importations involved in the cases at bar, following the general lines of the argument heretofore made by Attorney General Griggs. It, however, contains some new suggestions, the most interesting being this:

"If Chief Justice Taney was wrong (referring to the case of Fleming vs. Page, holding that the United States may demand the cession of territory as the condition of peace, in order to indemnify its citizens for the injuries they have suffered, or to reimburse the Government for the expenses of war,') and we cannot take territory sub modo to indemnify or reimburse us, but only to make it a part of the United States, then, before the President carries a war into the enemy's country, he should send a commission ahead of the army to ascertain and report whether the territory he proposes to invade and conquer is fit to be made a part of the United States, for neither the treaty-making power nor Congress can prevent that result if a cession follows conuest.

"Before the President sent Dewey to Manila he should have satisfied himself that the Philippines were suitable for incorporation into the Union, for we could destroy the Spanish power there only at the risk of having to assume the burdens of sovereignty ourselves."

WHERE OPPOSITION STANDS.

Ex-Secretary Carlisle, who appears as leading counsel against the Government, will not file an individual brief, but will content himself with the verbal presentation of his views. His name, however, appears as of counsel in the brief in the Dooley cases. Henry M. Ward filed these briefs in the Supreme Court to-day. Following is a summary of the argument:

First—At all times since the ratification of the treaty Porto Rico has been a part of the United States.

Second—As a consequence of the treaty the entire sovereignty over Porto Rico has become vested in the United States, but the executive and legislative departments of the Federal Government have only such power in relation to Porto Rico as is granted to them by the Constitution.

Third—The President had not the power under the Constitution to make or enforce the order of Jan. 20, 1899, in so far as it imposed duties upon articles of merchandise brought into Porto Rico from other parts of the United States.

Fourth—Congress had not the power under the Constitution to impose the taxes or duties imposed by the act of April 12, 1900, upon articles of merchandise brought into Porto Rico from other parts of the United States or into other parts of the United States from Porto Rico.

In sustaining these points no time is spent in discussing the power of the United States to acquire and hold outside territory, that power having "become firmly established." In support of the first point it is contended that by the operation of the Paris Treaty Porto Rico has become as much a part of the United States as any one of the organized States or Territories.

The second point, relating to sovereignty, is elaborated in part as follows: "In using the expression 'sovereignty' or 'ownership' of the United States we mean not the sovereignty or ownership of the Government or of the President or of Congress, but the sovereignty or ownership of the people of this country, in whom the ultimate power is lodged, and by whom not all power, but certain enumerated powers only, have been delegated to the various co-ordinate branches of the Government. Consequently, it does not follow that because Spain has yielded her sovereignty Congress has unlimited sovereign powers.

THE PRESIDENT'S POWERS.

"Congress has no powers whatsoever, derived from any other source than the Constitution. It does not derive any additional powers from international law or from 'the fact that the United States is a sovereign nation,' or from the fact that the exercise of such power may be deemed necessary in order to carry out the policy of a particular administration."

There is also elaborate argument on the question of the lawful power of the President in connection with the order of Jan. 20, 1899, in so far as it related to duties. The contention is made that notwithstanding this step was taken by the Chief Executive as Commander in Chief of the Army, it was not a necessary military measure. "If this duty was lawfully imposed," is asked, "what limit is there upon this domestic military power?" Other similar questions follow:

"If the President could lay this tax upon commerce between Porto Rico and other parts of the United States on Feb. 1, 1899, does he continue to have this power until Congress should act, and what if Congress had not acted for years or had been prevented from acting by the President's veto? Is the military power omnipotent in a new territory until Congress acts? Is it the function of the President when Congress does not legislate to legislate in its place? What difference does the fact—if it be a fact—that the proceeds of these duties were expended 'for the benefit of Porto Rico' make?"

The conclusion is drawn that "the existence of any such power in one man, however exalted his office, is opposed to the whole spirit of our institutions."

The scope of the fourth point in the summary is indicated by the following questions: "What is meant by the term United States,' as here used? Does it include only the forty-five States and leave the trade between Porto Rico and Arizona, New Mexico, Alaska, and the District of Columbia free, or does it mean the United States as constituted before the late war with Spain, and hence not apply to the trade between Porto Rico and Hawaii, Guam, and the Philippines?'

"Is this an attempt to levy import duties upon commerce between domestic ports, or are these exactions of the nature of excises or internal revenue taxes? Has Congress any warrant for laying these taxes arising out of its power to govern the territory of the United States?"

The conclusion is drawn that the taxes are not imposts or custom duties, but in the nature of internal revenue duties or excises.

MORE STUDENTS FOR PRINCETON.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 7.—The university catalogue for the academic year 1900-1901 has been prepared for publication. It shows an increase in the number of students over last year's enrollment, but not in all branches of the university. The increase in the freshman class numbers 57 above that of last year's entering men. A slight falling off is noticed in the graduate department, but the net increase in all the classes is 55.

The university loses in its membership from the Middle West, and in some of the Southern and extreme Western States, but shows marked gain from all the Middle States. The five States which lead in number of students are: Pennsylvania, 345; New Jersey, 270; New York, 224; Illinois, 58; Maryland, 45. The number of students now in the university is 1,249. The classes number the following: Graduates, 84; seniors, 211; juniors, 264; sophomores, 260; freshmen, 348; special, 66.

SOCIETY IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. David Hill gave their first evening at home to-night, their residence on K Street being filled by a distinguished company from 9 o'clock until midnight. Mrs. Joel Dorman Steele of Elmira, who has arrived to spend the Winter in Washington, helped to receive and friends of the hostess contributed to an informal musicale.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Munn also gave a reception and musicale to-night at their home on Scott Circle. One hundred and fifty people were present, including almost all the members of the Diplomatic Corps, the Chief Justice and Mrs. Fuller, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Gage, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Root, and Miss Pauiding.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Tyler gave a cotillion this evening at their home on Farragut Square, their guests being chiefly the friends of their débutante daughters. The hostess was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Edmund Tyler and Mme. Alfred Von Bruening. George Howard led the cotillion with Miss Edna Tyler.

Mme. Bonaparte gave to-night a dinner to young people, friends of her son, Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte.

The announcement is made to-day of the approaching marriage of Senator-elect Blackburn of Kentucky to Mrs. Mary B. Blackburn of this city, the widow of a cousin. The day of the wedding, which will be private, has not been announced.

The engagement is announced of Miss Beatrice Allen Bates, daughter of Col. and Mrs. James Allen Bates of this city, to Capt. Robert Sewell, U. S. A., son of Senator and Mrs. William J. Sewell of New Jersey.

Stickney—Crosby.

BOSTON, Jan. 7.—Alpheus B. Stickney, President of the Chicago and Great Western Railroad, was quietly married to Miss May Crosby, daughter of Judge Josiah Crosby of Dexter, Me., at the home of the Rev. Thomas Van Ness in Brookline, this evening.

There was no bridesmaid, maid of honor, or best man. The ceremony was simple in every respect. The bride was given away by her father, Judge Crosby.

Asks $500,000 for Pneumatic Tubes.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith has asked for an appropriation of $500,000 for the "transportation of mail by pneumatic tube or other similar devices" for the fiscal year 1902. The item of the appropriation was omitted from the original estimates submitted by the Postmaster General for the reason that an investigation of the workings, &c., of the system, authorized by Congress, had not then been completed.

THE CHINA NEGOTIATIONS

America Said to Have Proposed Their Transfer to Washington.

Imperial Court Told the Envoys Not to Sign the Note—Russia's Alleged Designs on Manchuria.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Washington correspondent of The Daily Mail says:

"The United States Government has proposed to the powers the transfer of the Chinese negotiations from Peking to Washington."

In the opinion of the Foreign Office, there is likely to be a great deal more discussion before the Chinese imperial personages finally agree to the penalties insisted upon by the powers.

The British Foreign Office considers the reported agreement between Russia and China regarding the Manchurian Province of Feng-Tien as probably referring to military measures of a temporary character. There is nothing in the possession of the Foreign Office to show that any such agreement has the sanction of Russia and China.

PEKING, Jan. 7.—The report that the Chinese Court had instructed the Chinese peace envoys to refuse to sign the joint note of the powers to China is confirmed. The Court referred to the objections of the Southern Viceroys, which are the same as the Court's.

Prince Ching, however, informed the Court that it was too late, and a reply from Sian-Foo is expected shortly.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 7.—Bigoted Court officials, it is reported, still raise objections to signing an acceptance of the joint demands.

EXPEDITIONS NOT TO STOP.

PEKING, Jan. 6.—Count von Waldersee says that China's request, through her representatives at foreign Courts, that the expeditions should cease cannot be complied with at present.

No expeditions, the Field Marshal asserts, are sent out without adequate cause. Where there are scenes of bloodshed or disorder troops are sent to interfere, this being the only means of preventing outrage. He declares that the expeditions are not intended for punitive purposes, but merely for police purposes, with a view to giving the necessary protection to life and property.

A HUNDRED BOYS MASSACRED.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—A sister of charity, writing from the Maison de Jesu Enfant, at Ning-Po, on Nov. 20, describes the massacre at Nan-King of 100 little boys. Some of them, she says, were roasted alive in the church. Others, led by a brother, escaped to the orphanage outside the city, but all were killed and the place was burned.

"Inexplicable threats of torture and the frequency of most painful deaths," the sister declares, "apostasy was wonderfully rare."

PROPOSED COMMERCIAL TREATY.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 7.—Sir Ernest Mason Satow, British Minister to China, has proposed to the other foreign envoys the draft of a commercial treaty with China based upon the following conditions:

First—Freedom for all coasting vessels.
Second—Freedom for all vessels on inland waters, especially the Yang-tse-Kiang.
Third—Permission to import foreign salt.
Fourth—Adoption of regulations encouraging Chinese investments in foreign concerns.
Fifth—Steps extending China's exports and imports.
Sixth—Protection of trade marks.
Seventh—Protection of treaty ports.

The draft has not been accepted by the powers, and discussion regarding it has been postponed.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY'S NEEDS

Appeal for $100,000 a Year to Meet Interest on Floating Debt.

Announcement was made by President Low of the bequest of $50,000 to the university by the late Henry Villard. Other bequests were announced, as follows: Six thousand dollars by the Misses Maria L. Campbell and Catherine B. Campbell, in memory of their brothers, Robert and Henry, who were graduated in the classes of '44 and '47, respectively. Gifts of $450 were announced to the American School of Oriental Study, in Palestina.

The following appointments were announced: Dr. Ernest V. Hubbard, Assistant in Pathology; Dr. Stuart P. Jessup, Assistant in Normal Histology; Myron H. Falk, Assistant in Civil Engineering; Joseph S. McCord, Assistant in Mineralogy, and Dr. James D. Voorhees, Secretary of the faculty of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the university.

The following statement of the financial condition of the university was issued by the Trustees, showing briefly what has been accomplished since the removal to the new site: Cost of land and development at Morningside Heights, $6,516,300.17; improvements of College of Physicians and Surgeons, $870,688.43; total, $7,395,988.60; interest to June 30, 1900, $586,519.92; total, $7,982,508.52.

"Of this large sum, the university has succeeded in paying, mostly out of gifts and legacies, $4,250,000. Of this outstanding debt, the sum of $750,000 is provided for. It still owes $3,000,000 that is not provided for, upon which the annual interest payable is $98,500.

"Careful computation justifies the Trustees in saying that in eight years from now the university will be able, by the increase of income from its fees and endowments, to care for its floating debt without embarrassment to its educational work. The falling in of continegent interest already definitely established may hasten this result importantly.

"If our interest payable can be taken care of for eight years, the problem of the university, growing out of its removal to the new site will be solved.

"The trust fnud of the university has been increased by $1,250,000; the library has grown from 120,000 to over 300,000 volumes, the teaching force from 226 to 361, and the number of students from 1,064 to 2,060. These figures do not include either Barnard College or the Teachers' College.

"Since removal, also, an educational deficiency of more than $48,000 has been overcome, and the university, after this academic year, will be running within its income, after assuming the full care of its enlarged plant.

"For a few years, and for a few years only, the university needs help to prevent its debts from being further swelled by borrowed interest. To meet this situation, appeal is made to all the friends of the higher education in New York. Friends of the university, including the President and Trustees, have already pledged $38,000 for this purpose. For the rest, the university confidently turns to the citizens of New York who value the things for which Columbia University stands in this metropolitan city."

ANOTHER HALL OF FAME HINT.

Harvard Professor Suggests that Electors Meet and Talk the Matter Over.

The Council of the New York University held a meeting yesterday afternoon at the University Building, on Washington Square. It was announced that the alterations to the Carnegie Laboratory, in East Twenty-sixth Street, had been completed. The top story has been rebuilt since last Spring, and the entire building has been refitted for the purposes of a bacteriological laboratory. Mr. Carnegie has defrayed the entire expense of the work done.

It was also announced that the electors for the Hall of Fame, who were all recently invited to serve again in 1902, had, so far as heard from, accepted. Out of the fifty famous Americans who were to be chosen at first, only twenty-nine received the requisite number of votes last year. There are, therefore, twenty-one to be selected next year. A letter was received from a well-known Harvard professor suggesting that before another ballot is taken a conference shall be held in New York some time next year, at which all the electors who can make it convenient shall be present. At this conference, it was suggested, a better understanding might, perhaps, be reached. There has been some fear that, through a possible oversight, some very eminent names might be omitted, an omission which the electors themselves might regret.

Another letter was received from Prof. Hermann Grimm of Germany. He congratulated the university upon having received such a gift as the Hall of Fame, and he was especially pleased to know that Emerson had been put in the first place among American authors by the votes of the electors.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The gayeties of the present week are crowding on one another to such an extent that those who are going out this Winter will find it difficult to meet all their engagements. The men and women who were at Mrs. Astor's last evening will rise late this morning, and it will be well into the afternoon before there will be any particular movement in the fashionable up-town districts. Mrs. James B. Haggin will give a large reception at her residence, 587 Fifth Avenue, this afternoon; other receptions will also take place, among them one to be given by Mrs. George Crocker and the Misses Rutherford, at their residence, 1 East Sixty-fourth Street. The wedding of Clifford V. Brokaw and Miss Nannie Inman will be celebrated at 3:30 o'clock at the bride's residence, 42 West Fifty-seventh Street. This evening will bring the third Tuesday Evening Assembly, at Delmonico's, the second Junior Cotillion, at Sherry's, and the third Fortnightly, at the Astoria.

***

Among late announcements of coming entertainments are a musicale at Mrs. George Gould's, to follow a large dinner on the evening of Tuesday, Feb. 5; a dance to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gurnee, Jr., for their daughters, on Wednesday, Jan. 23, and a theatre party of forty in honor of the Misses Elsie, Ethel, and Edith Cryder, to be given by Miss Callender on Thursday evening, Jan. 31, to be followed by a supper at the Callender-De Forest apartment. It is also reported that James Henry Smith will in the near future give a dinner dance in the Frederic Benedict house, which he is occupying this Winter.

***

The Christmas dance of the Fortnightlies did not take place on Dec. 18 last, as intended, owing to the illness of Mrs. Lewis Livingston Delafield, but is scheduled for to-night in the Astor Gallery of the Astoria. The favors will be extremely pretty, as something special is always gotten up for the Christmas dance. J. V. S. Oddie, Jr., is to lead the cotillion. Master Carrol Winslow is to impersonate Santa Claus and distribute the gifts in the Christmas figure.

***

The second Junior Cotillion is to be danced to-night at Sherry's in the large ballroom. There will be a large attendance, as there are only three of these dances during the Winter season, and the débutantes usually attend in full force. Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge will receive, assisted by a number of the other patronesses.

***

Mrs. Frederic Gallatin has recalled the invitations issued some four weeks since for a dance at her residence, 670 Fifth Avenue, on Thursday evening, Jan. 10. An old domestic who has been in the family's employ for more than a score of years is lying at the point of death, and Mrs. Gallatin, with rare appreciation and consideration of her faithful service, does not care to give the dance.

***

Mrs. George Bird (born Moorhead, and whose first husband was Mr. Metcalf) has sent out invitations for a dinner dance in honor of Miss Frederica Vanderbilt Webb, who made her formal début last Saturday at a reception given by her mother, Mrs. W. Seward Webb. Mrs. Bird's dinner will be given in the banqueting room at Sherry's, on the second floor, and the dancing, which will be informal, will take place later in the small ballroom. Dinner will be served at small tables. Some sixty to seventy guests have been invited.

***

One of the largest dinner dances of the season will be given at Sherry's on Feb. 7 by a woman prominent in the smart set. The second and third floors will probably be reserved, as they were for the Cornelius Vanderbilt dinner dance at the same place last week.

***

Mrs. Frederic Neilson and Miss Neilson of 100 Fifth Avenue gave the first of a series of four "at homes" yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Neilson's three succeeding receptions will be given on the coming Mondays of this month. Miss Neilson gave a large luncheon to a number of her young women friends yesterday.

***

There were numerous receptions and days "at home" yesterday. Among them the first of a series of "at homes" of Mrs. Frederic Neilson and Miss Kathleen Neilson; Mrs. Robert Ralston Crosby, Mrs. William M. V. Hoffman, and others. Mrs. William Gray Park of 67 Fifth Avenue gave a dinner in the evening in honor of Miss Krumbaar of Philadelphia, who is visiting Mrs. Park. Another dinner was that of Mrs. J. Frederic Kernochan. Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, and Miss Susie Dimock gave the first of three receptions at their residence, 25 East Sixtieth Street. Mrs. H. Mortimer Brooks gave a dinner of forty covers at her residence, from which her guests went to the Aster ball.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. McVickar of 9 East Thirty-ninth Street will leave town this morning for Aiken, S. C., where they will spend some weeks. Mr. and Mrs. McVickar have only recently returned from Europe.

***

Mrs. James E. Martin, (Miss Florence C. Brokaw,) who has been seriously ill with typhoid fever at her residence, 803 Fifth Avenue, is now convalescent. Drs. Delafield and Vedder, who have been in attendance on Mrs. Martin, held a consultation on Saturday, and report that she is progressing well toward recovery.

***

Mrs. Charles Boyd Curtis (Miss Isabel Douglas) of 9 East Fifty-fourth Street, has issued cards for two coming-out receptions on Tuesdays, Jan. 8 and 15, respectively, for her daughter, Miss Isabella W. Curtis.

***

Mrs. Robert Hoe and Miss Hoe of 11 East Thirty-sixth Street have issued cards for Tuesdays in January and February, and Mrs. John R. Harris and Miss Harris of 14 East Fortieth Street have cards out for Tuesdays in January. Mrs. Marlé of 2 West Thirty-sixth Street and Mrs. Morgan G. Barnewell, also of 2 West Thirty-sixth Street, (the Lenox,) also have cards out for Tuesdays in January.

***

The Cymric, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool, brought among other passengers Norman M. E. Anderson, the Countess of Antrim, La Comtesse Dendrios, Viscount Dunluce, Capt. W. O. Forbes, Mrs. T. Metcalfe, Mrs. T. F. Nicholas and family, Parker F. Soule, Dr. W. Warren, and the Rev. Harry Wilson.

***

Under the patronage of Mrs. Henry Burden, Mrs. Louis M. Ogden, Mrs. Charles Grenville Peters, Mrs. Walter W. Rutherfurd, Mrs. Townsend Ashmore, Mrs. John V. L. Pruyn, Mrs. Myles Standish, Mrs. Carles de Heredia, and others, Miss Martha Strickland will give a recital at Carnegie Hall on the afternoon of Thursday, Jan. 10. Miss Strickland will be assisted by Theodore Bjorksten.

***

Sunday is growing in favor more and more as a day for entertaining in New York society. On Sunday afternoon last there were a number of informal receptions, notably those given by Mrs. Astor and Mrs. Seth Barton French. At several of these music was rendered. The most important entertainment of the day was given by Miss Callender and Miss De Forest, and some 150 people assembled in their apartment to hear sung Liza Lehman's "Daisy Chain," first produced at the Astoria last Thursday afternoon. Miss Callender and Miss De Forest sent out no formal cards for this musicale, and those who were present came in response to verbal invitations. As yet the distinction is made between entertainments on Sundays and those on other days, save for dinners, in that invitations are either written by hand or delivered verbally for functions on the first day of the week.

Arrivals on the Servia.

Among the passengers who arrived yesterday on the Cunard Line steamship Servia, from Liverpool and Queenstown, were Capt. Armstrong, Charles Clive Bayley, British Consul, New York; F. E. Bond, E. J. Morgan, and Lieut. J. D. Rodgers of the British Navy.

GEN. DE WET MAY INVADE CAPE COLONY

If He Does So, a General Rising Is Said to be Certain.

British Gain a Victory at Naauwpoort, but a Small Force Suffers a Reverse Near Lindley.

PIQUETBERG ROAD, Cape Colony, Jan. 7.—The Boers boast that their present incursion is only a big patrol, preparatory to an invasion in force by Gen. De Wet. The latter's influence over the Dutch is so enormous that there is no doubt his actual presence would result in a general rising.

The Dutch have unbounded faith that, if he had a sufficient supply of arms and ammunition, Gen. De Wet, who is regarded as the Napoleon of the campaign, would even now be able to bring the war to a successful termination.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 7.—It is reported that 1,500 Boers are nearing the town of Sutherland, and that other parties are close upon Richmond.

The invaders have reached Calvinia, and are expected at Clanwilliam within a few days.

Scouts report that the Boer commandoes under Delarey and Steinkamp in the Bufferspoort district number 5,000.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Reporting to the War Office, under date of Jan. 6, Lord Kitchener says:

"Yesterday Babington engaged Delarey's and Steinkamp's commandoes at Naauwpoort. The enemy was forced to retire to the northwest. Our casualties have not yet been received, but are reported slack. A Boer doctor admitted that twenty Boers were killed or wounded. Commandant Duprez was taken prisoner.

"It appears from reports of the wounded who have arrived at Heilbron that a detachment 120 strong belonging to Knox's command came into contact with a superior force near Lindley. I regret to say that Lieut. Laing, two other officers, and fifteen men were killed and two officers and twenty men wounded. No details have come from Knox of this action."

The Naauwpoort mentioned in Gen. Kitchener's dispatch must not be confounded with Naauwpoort Junction, Cape Colony. There are several Naauwpoorts. Possibly the scene of the fight is the Naauwpoort on the railroad between Potchefstroom and Frederikstad, Transvaal.

CAPE TOWN EDITOR ARRESTED.

P. H. Malan of the Leading Afrikander Organ, Ons Land, Charged with Seditious Libel.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 7.—P. H. Malan, editor of Ons Land, the principal Afrikander newspaper here, has been arrested on the charge of seditious libel, consisting of reflections upon the conduct of Gen. French and his troops.

He is a member of the Cape Parliament, and his arrest has long been demanded by the extreme loyalists. The authorities accepted bail in the sum of £500.

Martial law has been proclaimed in the districts of Calvinia, Clanwilliam, Piquetberg, Tulbagh, Paarl, and Stellenbosch.

At a meeting of Afrikander members of the Cape Parliament to-day it was resolved to send Messrs. J. X. Merriman, ex-Treasurer of the Cape Colony; J. W. Sauer, ex-Commissioner of Public Works, and J. H. Hofmeyr to England to represent the state of affairs in South Africa to the Government, Parliament, and people of Great Britain.

Gen. Brabant has arrived here to complete the organization of the colonial forces.

Christian De Wet in Germany.

BERLIN, Jan. 7.—Christian De Wet, nephew of the Boer General, is making speeches in South Germany in behalf of the Boer cause, and arousing great sympathy. The meetings which he addresses adopt resolutions protesting vigorously against the overthrow of the two republics, the resolutions being telegraphed to Count von Bülow and Mr. Krüger.

Arbitration Proposals in Spain.

MADRID, Jan. 7.—The Federal Republican Party has introduced resolutions in the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies declaring that Spain should adhere to the first proposal of arbitration between Great Britain and the two Boer republics, whether coming from Holland or some other power, and that if no such proposal is forthcoming, Spain should take the initiative.

For a Gordon Highlanders' Institute.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—As a memorial of her only son, Lieut. Percy F. Forbes-Leith, of the First (Royal) Dragoons, who died last week at Newcastle, Natal, Mrs. A. T. Forbes-Leith (who was Miss Marie Janaury of St. Louis) of Fyvie Castle, Aberdeenshire, and formerly of New York, has offered to present a building at Aberdeen, worth £4,000, to be used as a Gordon Highlanders' Institute.

£5,000 Subscription by W. K. Astor.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—In response to the appeal of the Princess of Wales for further contributions to the fund for the families of the men at the front, William Waldorf Astor has contributed £5,000.

A Gift by Mr. Stead Declined.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—The Board of Poor-Law Guardians of Weebly, Herefordshire, has declined, on patriotic grounds, to accept a gift of pictures and books from William T. Stead for the workhouse, forwarded through Lady Henry Somerset.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Gen. James Cavanagh.

Brevet Brig. Gen. James Cavanagh died yesterday morning at his home, 44 Third Place, Brooklyn, from acute bronchitis and heart trouble. He was born in Ireland about seventy years ago, and came to New York in 1852, entering the carpenter's trade. He joined the Sixty-ninth Regiment and went to the front in 1861 with that regiment as a Captain. He led a gallant charge at the first battle of Bull Run, and was highly commended for his bravery on that occasion. When the "Irish Brigade" was organized Capt. Cavanagh was gazetted Major of the Sixty-ninth Regiment. He was in every engagement in which the Irish Brigade took part. He was praised for his bravery at the battle of Antietam. With Col. Nugent, he led the historic charge of the Irish Brigade at Fredericksburg, and fell seriously wounded within a hundred feet of the enemy's position. Gen. Meaghor reported concerning Major Cavanagh that he hoped he would recover, as "there never was a stouter arm or braver heart." Major Cavanagh returned from the war as acting Colonel of the Sixty-ninth. He was made Colonel in 1867 and continued as such for twenty-six years. In recognition of his work in the militia he was named by Gov. Flower as Brevet Brigadier General of the National Guard. He had been a special Inspector of Customs of this port for a number of years. Gen. Cavanagh is survived by his three daughters. Complete arrangements have not as yet been made for the funeral. It will be held from St. Stephen's Roman Catholic Church, Brooklyn.

Frederick Clark Withers.

Frederick Clark Withers died at his home, 163 Glenwood Avenue, Yonkers, yesterday. Mr. Withers was born at Shepton Mallet, Somersetshire, England. He studied architecture in London and came to the United States in 1853. He opened an office in Newburg, where he followed his profession until the outbreak of the civil war. He went to the front as a First Lieutenant of the New York Volunteers. He was invalided home in 1862, and in 1863 he opened an office in New York. He became very successful and an authority on architecture.

He designed the Hudson River Asylum at Poughkeepsie, the Jefferson Market Court House and Prison in New York, the New York Asylum at Islip, St. Luke's Church at Matteawan, and many other well-known buildings. He published a work on church architecture.

In 1867 he married Emily A. Dewint, a descendant of President Adams. After her death he married Bushia A. Higbie, a great-grandniece of Martha Washington. He is survived by four daughters and one son.

Obituary Notes.

JOHN W. CHURCH, a leading attorney of Norwich, N. Y., died in Passaic, N. J., yesterday.

T. FRANK BROWNELL, a lawyer, whose office was at 302 Broadway, died yesterday in his home, at 504 West Eighty-second Street.

ISAAC ALTMAN, a well-known clothing dealer, died suddenly in Buffalo, yesterday, aged fifty-four. He was born in Rochester.

CARL MORTON, President and General Manager of the Glucose Sugar Company, died yesterday at Omaha from pneumonia. He was the fourth and youngest son of J. Sterling Morton of Nebraska.

The Rev. THOMAS A. FULLERTON, a prominent minister of the Presbyterian Church, died yesterday at his home, in Cincinnati. He had served as pastor at Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, Springfield, Ohio; Erie, Penn., and Georgetown, D. C.

OSCAR E. EGGLESTON, a prominent breeder of fancy stock at West Winfield, N. Y., went to his barn yesterday morning to care for his stock. He climbed to the haymow and fell forward dead. He was sixty-eight years old, and owned several large farms.

ELIZABETH F. LUDLAM, widow of Silas Ludlam, who was a well-known city surveyor of Brooklyn, died at her home, 176 Remsen Street, that borough, on Sunday. She was born in this city in 1813, and had lived in Brooklyn since 1848. She is survived by four children, sixteen grandchildren, and nine great-grandchildren.

AUGUST MADLUNG died at his home, at 71 Gardner Avenue, Jersey City, on Sunday from paralysis. He was born in Germany on Feb. 4, 1821. He came to this country in 1849, and for thirty years had lived in the house in which he died. He was a veteran of the civil war. He left an estate of $200,000 to his widow and only daughter.

MICHAEL KILCOMIN, for eighteen years an employe of The Brooklyn Eagle, died on Sunday at his home, 16 Sidney Place, Brooklyn, of pneumonia. Mr. Kilcomin was chief clerk of the counting room of The Eagle. He was fifty-seven years old and was born in Ireland. He is survived by three brothers and five sisters.

WILLIAM LE COUNT, sixty-six years old, formerly Superintendent of the Iselin estate, died yesterday at New Rochelle. He was a member of the Board of Education for ten years. During the civil war he served with the Seventeenth New York Volunteers. He was a member of the Royal Arcanum, and was an exempt fireman. After leaving the employ of the Iselin family he engaged in the real estate business, and then in the laundry business.

Mrs. MARGARET J. FERRIS died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. F. O. Herring, on Park Avenue, Plainfield, N. J. She was seventy-six years of age. She was born at Woodbury, Conn. She was first married to L. A. Booth of Connecticut, and after his death married Leonard W. Ferris, a lawyer. In 1853 Mr. and Mrs. Ferris went to California; then for a time they lived at Virginia City, Nevada, and in 1878, after her husband's death, Mrs. Ferris went to Plainfield to live with her daughter.

JOHN T. MELLOR, seventy-three years of age, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. H. D. Fink, on Atlantic Street, Hackensack. He was born in England, but came to the United States when young. He learned the builder's trade and started the Columbia Foundry at Newark in 1850. He lived much of his life in Jersey City, and belonged to Hudson Lodge, No. 41, I. O. O. F., of that city. He was a volunteer fireman, and was foreman of Phoenix Engine of Jersey City for several years.

Patrick Madden's Injury Fatal.

Patrick Madden of 123 Fremont Street, Jersey City, who was taken to the City Hospital on Thursday with a fractured skull, of which he knew nothing until his injury had been diagnosed by a physician, died yesterday morning. William Horn, whom Madden accused of knocking him down on New Year's night, was arraigned before Police Justice Hoos on a formal charge of murder, and Michael Killeen, who was with him at the time of the assault, was held as an accomplice after the fact. Both men were sent to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Diet Kitchen Association Meeting.

The annual public meeting of the New York Diet Kitchen Asssociation will take place at the residence of Mrs. Henry Villard, 145 West Fifty-eighth Street, to-morrow at 11 A. M. All persons interested in the work of this charitable organization are invited to be present. Distributing food to the sick poor is the main object of the charity.

JAMES C. LED HIS OPPONENTS

Fast Pacer Was First Over the Line in Several Hot Tilts—Louise Mac Beat Birdie R.

Close finishes marked the majority of the brushes on the Harlem River Speedway yesterday afternoon, where there was a select gathering of trotters and pacers. Among the early brushes was a three-cornered tilt between Louise Mac, driven by A. B. Gwathmey; Birdie R., driven by A. E. Thompson, and Malacca, driven by Nathan Straus. At the start Louise Mac took the lead, but did not hold it long against Malacca, who had a fair chance of winning, when he broke out and spoiled his prospect, Louise Mac crossing the line a half length in front of Birdie R.

The Queen, 2:10¾, driven by M. Thomas, proved herself to be in fine form by winning two heats out of three from Phyllis, driven by C. Schildwachter. The first heat was an easy one for The Queen, but Phyllis took the second, and only lost the third by a head. Louise Mac defeated Hattie Walters, driven by George Coleman, in two very lively brushes, and the gelding Harry Davis took the green mare Sprightly, driven by Thomas F. Russell, into camp. Coxey, driven by George Spear, gave the spotted trotter Malacca a pretty race, but did not have staying power enough to hold out to the finish, Malacca winning by an open length.

H. O. Armour's team, composed of Erin G. and Windsor, driven by their trainer, were stepped down the stretch several times, and finally in company with The Dude, driven by E. Jarvis. It was a nip and tuck race from start to finish, The Dude just winning. Had the finish post been fifty yards further away the team would have won, as they did not seem to reach their speed until almost upon the line. Elmer Stevens, driving Dombey, Jr., won a very pretty brush from the green mare Sprightly, driven by Thomas F. Russell. Tioga, driven by Dr. Moore, and Hattie Walters, driven by George Coleman. They finished in the above order, Sprightly crowding Dombey, Jr. for first place.

The crack pacer James C., driven by J. C. Campbell, did some fast work and won several very creditable trials. Among the fastest was one with Tioga and Royal Rene, driven by M. Kilpatrick. All the horses were bunched until within a hundred yards of the finish, when James C. shot ahead and was across the line before his opponents could reach him. In a second brush James C. carried Tioga to a break after covering a fast quarter. James C was finally turned to a good start with Mariana, 2:19¼, driven by J. Schroeder. Mariana led the way to the first quarter post, and looked very much like a winner until James C. made a spurt and placed himself on even terms. Both horses came down the stretch under the whip at a furious gait, neither seeming able to gain over a head. When close upon the line James C. drew out a trifle, which Mariana failed to recover, James C. winning by a head. Another very close finish marked the brush between David B., 2:09¾, driven by J. W. Cornish, and Bel Esprit, driven by C. Reilly. David B. took the lead at the start, and was never headed, Bel Esprit holding him until near the finish, when he began to close the gap so rapidly that David B. only had a head to the good when the line was crossed. Tioga defeated Royal Runner in a final brush, and Highland Lassie came home a length ahead of Dombey, Jr.

Richard Croker Buys More Horses.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 7.—Senator P. H. McCarren, when he visited the Kentucky stock farms here last Fall, declared he was on a pleasure trip. A rumor that he had purchased a lot of brood mares from Col. Barnes was denied, though Richard Croker, Senator McCarren's brother-in-law, has entered in important English stakes the colt Beau Imperial, a yearling half brother to Beau Gallant, who is still at Col. Barnes's farm. Now the announcement is made that Mr. Croker has bought from Col. Barnes about eight head of his choice colts, paying for them $21,000. Among these is the bay colt by Prince of Monaco-Bonita Belle, by Falsetto. This colt is a splendid one, and, being a half brother to the third largest two-year-old winner of the year, is expected to win a share of English stakes in 1903. The other colts are by Prince of Monaco and Jim Gore, and from the best mares at this noted breeding establishment.

Brooklyn Pleasure Drivers to Meet.

An important meeting of the Pleasure Drivers' Association of the Borough of Brooklyn will be held to-night at the clubhouse of the organization, on Bedford Avenue, near Fulton Street, Brooklyn. It is anticipated that the annual election of officers of the club will be passed over, as President William M. Clark has had a most successful administration. There will be several matters of interest to be considered, chiefly in connection with the Brooklyn Speedway and the use of the driving path prepared for the light-harness horses for motor vehicles. A large attendance is expected, as much work is to be done. The session promises to be a lengthy and interesting one.

YALE HOCKEY TEAM BEATEN.

College Skaters Lost to Quaker City in a Hot Game.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Jan. 7.—Yale University Hockey team played its first match here to-night, and gave the Quaker City champions the hardest game of the season. The score of 3 goals to 1 in favor of Philadelphia inadequately shows the character of the struggle, which from start to finish was fast and brilliant. The visitors unquestionably are fine hockey players, and though last night was their first appearance of the season, and they were to a certain degree unfamiliar with the local rink, they early demonstrated that collectively they were not to be held lightly. In team work, passing and dribbling, in the sinking of individuality for the good of the team, the Yale skaters were marvels, and the way the forwards would race up the rink, passing the puck from one to another whenever either was threatened by a Quaker foe, caused the greatest enthusiasm in the galleries, which were uncomfortably crowded with spectators, who were about evenly divided in their sympathies. The lineup:

Yale.	Positions.	Quaker City.
Talbot	Goal	Rhoades.
Sturgis	Point	Robertson
Coe	Cover Point	Gorman
Bronson	Rover	Devine
Stoddard	Right Forward	Varney
Snow	Centre Forward	Orton
Inman	Left Forward	Rogers

Goals—Orton, (2,) Rogers, Bronson. Referee—H. G. Farmer, Pennsylvania Dental College. Umpires—Ewing, for Quaker City, and Klipper, for Yale. Timekeeper—Mr. Rosen. Time of halves—20 minutes.

Hockey at St. Nicholas Rink.

In the contest for the amateur championship at hockey the New York Athletic Club and the St. Nicholas Skating Club teams will meet to-night at St. Nicholas Skating Rink. This will be the first time these teams have met this season. The line-up will be as follows:

ST. NICHOLAS.	N. Y. A. C.
Hayward	Goal O'Donnell
Mortimer	Point Hunt
Campbell	Cover point Fenwick
Conway	Forward Howard
K. Gordon	Forward Belden
D. Gordon	Forward Hornfeck
Walton	Forward Cobb

DR. O'CONNELL LED SHOOTERS.

Won All But a Single Event at Oceanic Tourney.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCKAWAY PARK, L. I., Jan. 7.—Dr. Louis H. O'Connell of New York all but swept the programme at the trap-shooting tournament of the Oceanic Rod and Gun Club on the club grounds, near here, today. Albert A. Schoverling won the single event not credited to Dr. O'Connell, and was second in a majority of the events. Good scores were made by B. Mull, S. Charles, and John Jones. The summaries:

Twenty birds, sweepstakes.—Dr. Louis H. O'Connell, 15; Albert A. Schoverling, 13; John Jones, 13; S. Charles, 12; Thomas F. McKenna, 8.

Renewal, same conditions.—Dr. O'Connell, 17; Charles, 13; Schoverling, 12; B. Mull, 13; Jones, 10; McKenna, 8; J. H. Falco, 8.

Triangular sweepstakes, ten birds.—Jones, 8; Charles, 8; Mull, 6.

Match, ten birds—Mull, 6; Charles, 8.

Sweepstakes, twenty birds—Dr. O'Connell, 18; Mull, 17; Schoverling, 14; Jones, 12; Charles, 14; Falco, 8; McKenna, 9.

Sweepstakes, fifteen birds.—Dr. O'Connell, 14; Jones, 13; Charles, 10; Schoverling, 8; Falco, 8; Mull, 6; McKenna, 4.

Club shoot, twenty birds.—Dr. O'Connell, 18; Schoverling, 16; Charles, 14; Mull, 14; Jones, 12; Falco, 12; McKenna, 8.

Trap Shooters' Remarkable Score.

At Inter-State Park, Queens, L. I., yesterday, A. H. Fox, the trap-shooting expert of Baltimore, beat his own record and also the record for the new shooting ground by killing 129 live birds out of 130 shot at. Mr. Fox, shooting at thirty yards' rise, killed straight up to his ninety-second bird. This was hard hit and fell in bounds, but, fluttering in an effort to get away as the dog was sent to retrieve it, managed to get on the edge of the boundary and then topple over, dead out of bounds. The gunner continued until 130 birds had been shot at, again killing straight until he finished. Mr. Fox holds the record, in clay bird shooting, at double targets, of having broken 98 in a possible 100.

ELVA WON A DOUBLE VICTORY.

J. W. Edwards's Ice Yacht Took Two Pennants at Branchport.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Jan. 7.—The calculations of ice yachting experts were upset to-day in what was expected would be the finals for the club pennants in the ice yacht races of the South Shrewsbury Ice Yacht Club at Branchport. The two events on the card were for the first and second class championship pennants. The former was held by E. E. Taber's Leroy, and the latter by W. A. Seaman's Harold. These yachts had only to win the pennants once more to decide the club championships, but it happened that neither was victorious in the events to-day. The Leroy was laid up for repairs, and could not contest for the first-class pennant. The Harold was badly beaten in the two events by J. W. Edwards's Elva, which won both pennants.

The conditions were not as favorable as on Friday and Saturday. The ice was soft in places and only a light westerly breeze prevailed. Both events this afternoon were sailed over the five-mile triangular course. The race for the second-class pennant was decided first. The Elva, after losing much ground at the start, passed the Harold and Leota on the second mile and won handily, covering the five miles in 17 minutes and 54 seconds. The Harold finished in 20 minutes and 10 seconds. The Leota's time was 20 minutes and 35½ seconds, giving her second place on time allowance.

In the race for the first-class pennants the Elva had an easy thing of it. She led at the start and steadily increased her lead to the finish, making the five-mile course in 19 minutes 1½ seconds. The Leota was second, finishing in 22 minutes and 36 seconds. The Harold withdrew on the last leg.

Princeton Takes to Basket Ball.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 7.—A project is on foot for the organization of a university basket ball team at Princeton. Baskets will be placed in the gymnasium this week, and it is expected that the call for candidates will be made on Wednesday and the team organized a few days later. The students having the movement in charge are making inquiries into the arrangement of a schedule. The games that will be played by the team this year will be considered only as practice games, played with a view to the development of a representative team for next year.

Cornell Oarsmen Set to Work.

ITHACA, N. Y., Jan. 7.—Coach Courtney and Capt. Van Derhoef of Cornell's 'Varsity crew began the regular training for the 1901 crew this afternoon on rowing machines. About thirty men responded to the call for candidates. The absence of five members of last year's eight was noticeable, former Capt. Dalzell, Beardslee, Smallwood, and Hartley all having left the university. Francis, former No. 6, has decided to give up eight-oared shell rowing and devote his time to single-sculling. He seeks to equal the record made by his father, C. S. Francis, who was Cornell's champion single-sculler in 1876. Van Derhoef, Petty, and Stroke Robbins are three men left for this year's eight. The majority of the oarsmen probably will come from the present sophomore combination.

Ball of Company H, Twelfth Regiment.

HANDICAPS AT BILLIARDS.

Tournament for Three Classes Started in Knickerbocker A. C.

Billiard activity was continued last night at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club with a new members' tournament, as the club championship was finished on Saturday night, with Charles S. Norris the winner and John A. Hendrick in second place. The contest last night was the first game in a club handicap, the first competition of its kind held in the history of the club. Dr. W. Duff Bullard arranged the handicap games, the competitors being divided into three classes, known as X, Y, and Z. The players in Class X are required to play 150 points at fourteen-inch balkline. In Class Y the competitors play 125 points straight rail, and in Class Z the contestants play 100 points straight rail.

F. W. Andrus and W. Lissburger opened the competition last night. They belong to the Class Y list, the former being handicapped at 125 and the latter at 115. The match was an easy one for Andrus, as he defeated his opponent by 125 points to 63, actual count. Hereafter two games will be played each evening. The winners in each class will finish the contest by playing together, and on this basis the handicap victory will be awarded.

The other billiardists who have entered for the club handicap honors are Dr. F. H. Beauneis, Joseph Steiner, L. A. Joysa, A. M. De Leew, H. White, F. Staylor, W. Frayley, Addison Bennett, W. A. Bracken, C. R. Fletcher, W. G. Hewitt, Bird M. Cole, and E. Serrenson.

NEW TERRIBLE TURK IS HERE.

Nouroulah, the "Terrible Turk," arrived here yesterday on the French Line steamship La Bretagne. When he came out on the pier just after the vessel reached her dock, he was the centre of attraction, and everybody on the dock rushed up to take a look at him. He is 6 feet 7 inches in height and weighs 300 pounds. His age is twenty-seven years, and he claims to be the greatest wrestler on earth. His manager, who came with him, says that he will challenge the best wrestlers of America, having already vanquished most of those abroad.

Nouroulah was clad in tight-fitting trousers, a blue Zouave jacket, and a closely-fitted shirt of many colors. Around his waist was a sky-blue sash, and he wore on his head a scarf of bright green. He said that he had learned to wrestle under the tutelage of Yousouff, the original "Terrible Turk." He can train down to 290 pounds, and during the next few weeks, previous to the arranging of any matches, he will go into training at Bath Beach. He expects to remain in the United States for four months.

CHICAGO BOWLING TOURNEY.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Chicago will be the Mecca for bowlers this week. All the leading tenpin artists in the country will be here within the next few days to exhibit their skill on the lacquer-covered alleys. The tournament competition for the championship of the United States begins tomorrow afternoon, and if the hopes of the local promoters are realized the tourney will be the greatest in the history of the game. Great interest has been manifested, and a larger number of entries has been received than for any similar event ever held in this country.

In numbers the field is the largest ever gathered, and unless signs fail the standard of play will be raised during the tournament. Six alleys, fresh from the hands of the builders, are waiting to accommodate the contestants. The new alleys will be formally opened to-morrow afternoon, just before the first tournament match begins. Before the bowlers begin play they will hold a short business meeting. President H. Timm of New York will call a session of the American Bowling Congress, which is the National organization, to prepare for the transaction of business. The chief matters to come before the congress are the election of officers, the revision of rules, and the question of professionalism. Sessions will be held from time to time through the period of the tournament.

A set of revised rules has been prepared by Mr. Langhenry to be presented to the congress. The old rules have been amended, and a few new ones inserted. The new rules provide for the substitution of new pins for damaged ones, regulate the height of the partition between alleys to two feet, and give the umpire power to call a game in case rowdyism interferes with the play.

The coming tournament is divided into three classes of competition. The first, which begins at 3:30 o'clock to-morrow, will be for teams of five men each. Clubs from all the principal cities will be represented in this competition. The second class is for teams of two men each. This will begin as soon as the quintets finish their contests, which, according to the schedule, will be on Thursday morning. The third class is the individual championship contest, open to all. This will begin at the conclusion of the two-man teams contest Friday morning.

The prizes offered amount to $1,200 in the aggregate. Eight premiums ranging from $200 to $25, will be presented for the five-man teams. Nine prizes are announced for the two-man teams, ranging from $50 to $10. The individual winning the championship will receive $50, and the nine men next in order will get prizes ranging from $45 to $5. In addition to the cash prizes, the winners in each event will receive gold medals, emblematic of the championship of the United States. President Timm has presented a handsome trophy, but has not designated what event it is for.

While the men are settling their championships the women will hold the first National tournament for women. The tourney is under the management of the Women's Bowling League of Chicago.

Among the bowlers who arrived this afternoon and night were teams representing the Monarch Cycling Bowling Club, Corinthians, Empires, Fidelias, Spartans, Grove Hill, and Cyclone Bowling Clubs of New York, and the Monarchs, Palaces, Prosperitys, Imperials, and Elephants of Brooklyn.

ON LOCAL BOWLING ALLEYS.

The New York Athletic Club bowlers lost two of their three games with Our Council of the Royal Arcanum in the National League tournament last night, winning only the first one of the series. The scores:

The games in the Harlem League Tournament were postponed last night on account of the absence of some of the teams who have gone to Chicago. The games scheduled for to-morrow and Thursday evenings will be postponed for the same reason.

M'DONNELL HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY

Eleven Coroner's Jurymen Favored Self-Defense Verdict.

Prisoner, Released on Bail, Rearrested on Charge of Felonious Assault—Witnesses Contradict Each Other.

Miles McDonnell, who shot and killed George Price and wounded three others in a shooting affray in the Onawa Café Dec. 29 last, was yesterday prevented from going scot free for Price's killing, by Arthur Blue, a Coroner's juryman, at the inquest before Coroner Hart.

The case went to the jury at half past three o'clock in the afternoon. The first ballot stood eleven for a verdict of self-defense and one, Blue's vote, for homicide. The contention of Blue was that it had been shown that McDonnell was the only man who had a pistol. Many witnesses testified, however, that Kennedy not only had a pistol, but shot twice with it before McDonnell drew his. Blue, by 5 o'clock, had won John Hoopes, W. Himmelmann, and Sigmund Klein, over to his way of thinking, and at that hour a divided verdict of eight to four, for self-defense was handed up.

The verdict was a surprise to McDonnell's friends, who had confidently expected his discharge. Coroner Hart said that in view of the division of opinion he would hold McDonnell in $5,000 to await the action of the Grand Jury. Bail was given by John Rascome, a liveryman of City Island, but Capt. Dean of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Station immediately rearrested McDonnell on the charge of feloniously assuting Eugene Courtney, now in the Harlem Hospital. McDonnell was taken to the station house and an effort was made to find Magistrate Meade, so that bail could be fixed, but the Magistrate could not be found, and McDonnell was locked up for the night. He will be arraigned in Harlem Police Court to-day.

The inquest yesterday was not altogether devoid of sensational developments. Joseph McDonald, a barfender, testified that he saw Kennedy with a pistol; that McDonnell held Kennedy's pistol hand and that two shots were fired in the air. At the second shot he ran out into Park Avenue. In a few minutes Kennedy also ran out and handed him a pistol. The next day the witness gave the pistol to Thomas McClatchey, he said, in the latter's saloon in the presence of John Kennedy and John Fitzsimmons. McClatchey was called to the stand.

"Did you receive a pistol from McDonald?" asked Coroner Hart.

"I did not," answered McClatchey, contradicting McDonald flatly.

"Is this the man you gave the revolver to?" asked the Coroner, pointing at the witness.

"I solemnly swear that it is," said McDonald.

"I solemnly swear that you didn't," returned McClatchey.

"And I solemnly swear that you lie," replied McDonald.

McClatchey denied that Kennedy was interested in his saloon or that the latter introduced him to brewers.

"I am going to show," said Lawyer Abraham Levy, when Assistant District Attorney Carr objected to this line of questioning, "that Peyser went into McClatchey's saloon and to Kennedy said, 'that — McDonnell is at the Onawa,' and that Kennedy drew a revolver and examined it and then with his friends he went to the Onawa. I am going to show that there was a deliberate premeditated attempt to murder McDonnell. I want to say also that I will later submit affidavits showing that efforts have been made at the very door of this courtroom to tamper with and suborn witnesses I have subpoenaed. They have been threatened and intimidated."

Thomas Kennedy took the stand. His testimony was brief. "As far as I know," said he, "McDonnell had a revolver at my side, and Freeland pushed it aside and it went off. The bullet went through my coat. I never carried a revolver in my life." He contradicted all the statements of the other witnesses relating to his remarks to McDonnell and the latter's to him.

HARVARD ATHLETES TO TRAIN.

Track Team, 250 Strong, to Begin Work Next Week.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 7.—Harvard's track team began training for the season's work to-day, when 125 men reported to Capt. Hallowell and Trainer Graham for light gymnasium work. Real work will not begin until next week, when it is expected 250 men will be in training. The prospects of a good team are very bright. The material is good, and with a Captain like Hallowell to inspire the men, Harvard expects to have her honors well supported on track and field.

For several weeks past the candidates for the shot-put and pole vault have been at work in the gymnasium, and the progress has been of a most encouraging nature. Sawyer and Goodhue of the freshman class are doing exceedingly well in the pole vault. Of last year's track team Haigh, Butler, and Clark are on hand for the sprints, Applegate for the half mile, Knowles, Foote, and Richardson for the long distances, and Capt. Hallowell, with Abercrombie and Willis, for the hurdles. Boal, for the hammer throw, and Daly, for the broad jump, are also in training. The first meet which Harvard will compete in will be that of the Boston Athletic Association, in Boston Feb. 16. A team race with Pennsylvania will be pulled off at that time.

Work on Cup Defender's Frame.

BRISTOL, R. I., Jan. 7.—The work of bending the frame for the new cup defender progressed rapidly to-day, there being a large force of men in the boiler shop on Burnside Street, as well as in the construction shop. The bulbed steel angles, as soon as they were heated, were placed on tables and bent into the required shape. Afterward they were taken to the construction shop, where they were trued up on the scribing board, on which the lines of the sections of the bow, midship, and stern are laid down. It is expected that by the end of the present week the new boat will take on a definite form.

PROF. WOOD A SUICIDE

A VICTIM OF OVERWORK

Had Come to Visit His Brother, in an Attempt to Recover from Attack of Melancholia.

Charles D. Wood, thirty-three years old, an Assistant Professor in English Literature in Brown University, committed suicide yesterday afternoon at the home of his brother, Dr. Walter C. Wood, 80 Halsey Street, Brooklyn, by hanging himself to a doorknob in his room. Prof. Wood came to Brooklyn yesterday on a leave of absence from the university to rest and try to recover his normal state of mind. He had been suffering from melancholia for some time.

Prof. Wood was unmarried, and his home was in Northampton, Mass. He was a graduate of Amherst College and had also attended Heidelberg University, in Germany.

He had been an instructor at Brown University, Providence, R. I., for two and one-half years. His associates there began to notice a change in him about six weeks ago and became concerned about him. He appeared to be suffering from deep melancholia and efforts to get him back into his usual cheerful state of mind failed. Prof. Wood's condition was attributed to overzealous application to his duties as an instructor. In addition to his regular duties he had been working hard in the preparation of a special course in English literature, embracing that of the nineteenth century. In this he is said to have overworked himself and to have succumbed to the strain on his physical and mental powers. He came to Brooklyn just before Christmas to spend the holidays at the home of his brother, Dr. Wood, and when he returned to Providence he was thought to have regained his normal condition. But soon after his return to his duties he again lapsed into a state of melancholia.

Friends communicated with his brother in Brooklyn, advising that the professor be taken away for a long rest. Dr. Wood sent a friend of his brother to Providence on Sunday to bring the professor to Brooklyn. Prof. Wood, accompanied by his friend, arrived in Brooklyn yesterday morning.

Soon after reaching Brooklyn the professor went over to Manhattan, where he transacted some business. He then returned to his brother's home, where he spent the remainder of the morning writing letters of a business nature. After luncheon he went up to his room. He was found there a short time later by one of the members of the household hanging from a doorknob, dead. Prof. Wood had used a silken portiere rope to strangle himself with. He had placed a noose about his neck, tied the other end of the rope about the doorknob, and then contrived to suspend the weight of his body on the rope, so that strangulation ensued.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 7.—Prof. Charles D. Wood, who committed suicide in New York, had been an instructor in English at Brown for several years. The news that he had killed himself was a great shock to the students and those who had been associated with him at the university. He was very well liked by all who knew him here, and although somewhat despondent at times, it was generally supposed that he was satisfied with his prospects. He had not been advanced as rapidly as some others who started at work at the university about the time he did, and it is likely that this fact preyed on his mind to some extent. Students who have studied under him stated tonight that they had noticed fits of depression which they had attributed to his feeling that he had not been advanced with a rapidity equal to his merits.

AARONS WILL BRING SUIT.

Manager Will Claim Damages from Henrietta Crosman.

On the rialto the controversy between Miss Henrietta Crosman and Alfred E. Aarons is still the principal subject of gossip. Mr. Aarons has engaged a lawyer to institute a suit for damages. Mr. Campbell, Miss Crosman's husband, still affirms that Mr. Aarons "broke every clause in his contract."

Since Miss Crosman came before the curtain on Saturday night and announced that she would play no more because the manager of the Savoy Theatre, Mr. Aarons, was persecuting her, Mr. Campbell has been busy arranging dates for the interval between next Monday and the appearance of "Mistress Nell" in Philadelphia on the 28th. He will fill short dates in small towns during that period.

"After leaving Philadelphia," he said yesterday, "we shall travel, as arranged, to various cities, not returning to New York until next season. We shall be here then certainly."

Mr. Proctor, the vaudeville manager, has offered to book Miss Crosman for a sketch in his Fifth Avenue Theatre, but she has not accepted the offer. It is certain that she will not do so.

Maurice Meyer, Mr. Aarons's lawyer, explained last night his side of the controversy from a legal point of view.

"I have carefully examined the contracts and papers in the case," he said, "and have advised Mr. Aarons that he has an absolute and positive action against Miss Crosman in damages arising out of last Saturday's episode. The nature of the action we shall institute, or in what form it will be, I will not tell at present, but it will be begun very soon. In my judgment the question is only one of amount; the only issue will be just what Miss Crosman will have to pay Mr. Aarons as a remuneration for the injury she has done him.

"No matter if he has done everything she alleges, she has no ground for complaint, and he can get damages."

Both the manager and his lawyer said that they proposed to establish a precedent "to prevent stars from being able to impose on their managers in such a high-handed fashion."

Mr. Aarons added that he believed the whole controversy had been planned by the actress and her manager for advertising purposes.

It is claimed by Miss Crosman, as has been told before, that Mr. Aarons, formerly an anti-trust man, is now under the trust's influence; that the syndicate has enlisted his aid in its efforts to ruin her business. Meanwhile, the Savoy Theatre will remain vacant for a while. The interesting question is whether or not the next attraction there is to be a "syndicate play."

FOUR MORE SMALLPOX CASES.

Referring to the statement of Dr. Leverson that he had not been in the habit of reporting smallpox cases attended by him, Assistant Sanitary Superintendent Dillingham said yesterday, "I shall have certain evidence to present to the board to-morrow. I will not tell now what the nature of that evidence is. If Dr. Leverson has violated the law, he will be brought to task."

Commissioner Crosby said that the reports of smallpox contagion was driving business people out of the city. He said that a friend of his, a business man in Boston, sent him a clipping from The Boston Herald, in which it was stated that there were from 2,000 to 3,000 cases of smallpox in this city. This, his friend from Boston said, deterred people from coming to this city.

Four cases have been reported to the Health Board since Saturday. The first case was that of Alice Haworth, thirty years old, at the Manhattan State Asylum. She was removed to North Brother Island, and two nurses accompanied her, to prevent her doing violence to herself or to others at the island. She will be isolated from the rest of the cases.

The three other cases came from Brooklyn. They were: Lizzie Kelly, seventeen, of 122 York Street; Kate Malletto, twenty-six, of 149 Freeman Street, and Joseph Shaddack, a Polander, of Kent Avenue, near North Seventh Street.

Kid McCoy Remarried.

BOSTON, Jan. 7.—Norman Selby (Kid McCoy) and his former wife Julia, were remarried at Gould's Hotel to-night by the Rev. W. T. McElveen, in the presence of four personal friends.

Mr. Carnegie Calls on George Gould.

Andrew Carnegie is reported to have paid a visit to George J. Gould in the latter's office, 195 Broadway, yesterday. The purpose of Mr. Carnegie's visit was not disclosed.

COTTON.—Covering and profit-taking carried prices up and down yesterday, influenced by bullish news in the morning and bearish receipts estimates in the afternoon. Speculation was by no means particularly active, though during the first two hours there was a very noticeable growth in investment business and more confident operating by the talent. It was kept clearly in mind, however, that prices were up 49 points from the level at which the late rise started, leading to anticipations of a reaction under realizing. The Liverpool market had been counted upon to show very little change from the closing of Saturday, but advanced 3@4 points in futures and 1-32d in spot cotton before we opened. All the forenoon the feeling was firm, and many talked of a much higher close. But shortly after the noon hour there was a turn for profits and a falling off in backing from the outside, due to larger estimates from New Orleans and Houston for to-day's receipts than anticipated. Whereas the more stanch bull traders were undisturbed by the estimates, the big figures gave timid holders the chance looked for to liquidate and grasp the tempting profits within easy reach. At the close the market was barely steady, with prices net unchanged to 7 points lower, latter on January only. Spot cotton ruled dull, with quotations unchanged, on the basis of 10¼c for middling upland and 10½c for middling Gulf. Sales, 100 bales. Southern spot markets were telegraphed as follows: New Orleans firm, 1-16c advance, at 9⅝c; Mobile quiet, unchanged, at 9½c; Savannah firm, unchanged, at 9 9-16c; Charleston firm, ⅛c higher, at 9½c; Wilmington firm, ⅛c advance, at 9½c; Norfolk firm, 1-16c advance, at 9⅝c; Baltimore nominal, ⅛c advance, at 10¼c; Augusta firm, 1-16c advance, at 9 15-16c; St. Louis steady, 1-16c advance, at 9 9-16c.

BREADSTUFFS.—WHEAT—The public did not appear to be so much interested in wheat yesterday along bull lines as it was at the close of last week, rather disappointing the rank and file of local traders who had looked to see a renewal of good speculative trade and possibly another excited upturn in prices. About the only time during the session when outsiders came to the front in an unmistakable manner was during the last half hour, when an attack by bear operators at a time when prices had just passed a buying point proved so successful that the succeeding sharp reaction caught a lot of stop orders at Chicago which made the break an important one, and left the market very weak at the close, with prices at the lowest point of the day, 1@2¾c below Saturday's official close, and about 1¼c below the highest curb point of Saturday. Throughout the early part of the day the market was very irregular, having no decided tendency one way or the other. May wheat sold up to 84½c, matching Saturday's best price, but this advance attracted a good deal of profit taking all around, and did not hold therefore for any length of time. Quotations of cash wheat, free on board, afloat basis: No. 1 hard, Duluth, 92c, nominal; old No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 88¼c; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 87½c; No. 1 Northern, New York, 85½c; No. 1 Northern, Chicago, 85c; No. 2 red, New York, 83½c, afloat; No. 3 red, New York, 80¾c; No. 2 corn, Jan. 23 to Feb. 14, 47¼c; No. 2 corn, last half February, 46¾c.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

New York City.

JOSEPH ABRAHAMS.—A meeting of the creditors of Joseph Abrahams, wholesale dealer in tobacco at 204 Pearl Street, was held yesterday at the office of Davis & Kaufman, 280 Broadway, and a settlement was agreed upon at 50 cents on the dollar, 25 cents cash, and 25 cents in six and nine months. The liabilities are about $10,000.

SOLOMON BERMAN.—Judge Brown of the United States District Court has appointed Theodore M. Taft receiver of the assets of Solomon Berman, dealer in mirrors at 49 Bowery, against whom creditors filed a petition in bankruptcy on the 4th inst., on the application of Jacques Kahn, a creditor. Mr. Berman, it was stated, owes at least $5,000.

RICHARD W. VAN HOHENHOFF.—Richard W. Van Hohenhoff, dealer in cloaks, suits and furs at 273 Sixth Avenue, made an assignment yesterday to Edwin A. Bayles, giving preferences to Elizabeth Holmes, $550, and John W. Bouvier, Jr., $500. Mr. Van Hohenhoff began business in September, 1898, on West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, Harlem, and moved to his present location on May 1 last, when he claimed a capital of $6,500.

GREAT AMERICAN FIVE AND TEN CENT STORE COMPANY.—Judge Brown of the United States District Court has appointed Charles M. Hough temporary receiver of the assets of the Great American Five and Ten Cent Store Company of 10 West Fourteenth Street, and at Syracuse, on the application of A. L. Tuska, a creditor. It was stated that Herman Finkelstein has a controlling interest in the corporation, although the stock is not held in his name, and that Mr. Finkelstein filed a petition in bankruptcy on Nov. 2, 1898, with liabilities of $100,000 and no assets, and has not yet been discharged.

Out of Town.

FRANK T. KELLEY.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Frank T. Kelley, grocer at Sing Sing, show liabilities of $8,878 and nominal assets of $5,792, consisting of outstanding accounts, $4,995; cash, $22; horses and wagons, $251; fixtures, $50; realized from sale of stock, $474.

JACOB D. WEAVER.—Jacob D. Weaver, as a partner of the late firm of Weaver Brothers, composed of Jacob D. and Milton D. Weaver, was yesterday adjudged a voluntary bankrupt in the United States District Court in Philadelphia. Liabilities, $48,638.64; assets, $292.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

OTTO EMMERICH.—Otto Emmerich, a clerk, residing at 178 East Eighteth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $5,532 and no assets. The debts were contracted when he kept a restaurant at Chambers Street and Broadway.

GOTTSCHALK COHN.—Gottschalk Cohn, employed as a clerk at 214 Canal Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $256,156, due 140 creditors, and no assets. He was formerly of Samuel Cohn & Brother, shoe dealers, which firm dissolved in 1894.

SOLOMON SILVERMAN.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Solomon Silverman, wholesale grocer of 28 and 30 Avenue A, show liabilities of $49,593 to 110 creditors and nominal assets of $37,000, consisting of debts due, $25,000; stock and cash, $12,000, all in the hands of the assignee.

MORRIS SCHLESSINGER.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy has been filed against Morris Schlessinger, who did business as the Brazilian Diamond Company at 248 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, by these creditors: Henry W. Mayer, $188; Ignatz Mann, $316, and Victor Jonest, $101. It was alleged that he committed an act of bankruptcy by making an assignment on Jan. 4.

CHARLES L. PETTIS & CO.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Charles L. Pettis and Harry J. Hunter, composing the firm of Charles L. Pettis & Co., cash produce buyers at 204 Duane Street, by the following persons: Norman F. Kerr, $2,498; George R. Wood, $53, and Irving L. Kelley, $56, all on assigned claims from out-of-town produce dealers. It was alleged that the firm had committed an act of bankruptcy by making an assignment on Dec. 29.

I. KRISS & CO.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy has been filed against Israel Kriss and Henry Nathan, doing business as I. Kriss & Co., manufacturers of cloaks and suits at 319 Canal Street, by two creditors—the H. B. Claflin Company, $617, and Charles W. House, $33. It was alleged that they transferred, while insolvent, a portion of their stock of cloaks, suits, capes, and piece goods and paid money to certain creditors to give a preference. The present firm was formed in January, 1898, succeeding the Metropolitan Cloak and Suit Company, and a year ago claimed a capital of $14,000.

W. TESCHNER'S SON & CO.—Emil W. Teschner and Jacob Lichtenstein, who compose the firm of W. Teschner's Son & Co., manufacturers of women's underwear at 190 and 192 Greene Street, have filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $13,466 and nominal assets of $3,546, consisting of stock, $1,000; machinery and fixtures, $2,500, and debts due, $46. Mr. Teschner has individual debts of $1,760, of which $1,700 is secured by a life insurance policy of $2,000. In 1892 he made an agreement to pay Josephine Teschner $20 a month during the life of petitioner's father, Wolfgang Teschner, who is still living, and there is now due her $60 for three months' payments. Emil W. Teschner has been in business about ten years, and Mr. Lichtenstein became a partner in February, 1895. Judge Brown of the United States District Court has appointed William Ford Upson receiver of the assets.

GEORGE BULLWINKLE.—George Bullwinkle, who formerly kept a restaurant at 524 and 526 Columbus Avenue, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $55,967 and nominal assets of $31,228. Mr. Bullwinkle has been in the liquor business for about thirty years. In 1894 he fitted up the Aulic Hotel and saloon, at Broadway and Thirty-fifth Street, which he carried on until March 1 last, when he exchanged the business for the restaurant at 524 and 526 Columbus Avenue, receiving, it was said, $12,000 cash and some other consideration in the trade. On Dec. 30 last Mr. Bullwinkle gave a bill of sale of the Columbus Avenue place to Richard Noize for $10,000. Of Mr. Bullwinkle's liabilities, $25,630 is to B. Valentine & Sons for money loaned, secured by a chattel mortgage on the leasehold of the Aulic, which mortgage has been assumed by Henken, Haaren & Rust, and $10,208 to Henken, Haaren & Rust, contingent liability upon the unexpired lease of 524 and 526 Columbus Avenue, which has been assigned to Richard Noize, who executed a mortgage. Mr. Bullwinkle's assets consist of debts due, $14,247, from 220 customers; two shares of stock of the Bullwinkle Purveying Company, $200; life insurance policies, $7,000, payable to his wife, no surrender value; claim in suit, $200; cash, $10; cemetery plot, $500, exempt, and mortgage on restaurant 524 Columbus Avenue, $9,000.

Against R. B. Patterson & Co.

The Sheriff has received an attachment for $3,950 against R. B. Patterson & Co., (corporation,) wholesale dealers in woolens at 15 West Twenty-eighth Street, in favor of Edward A. Brigg, doing business as John F. Brigg & Son, for merchandise sold between June 30 and Sept. 5. The attachment was obtained on the ground that the concern is a New Jersey corporation.

The Sheriff received an execution yesterday against James P. McDonald of 35 Nassau Street, in favor of the Southern Railway Company, for $13,218, on a judgment obtained against him at Madisonville, Tenn., on June 6, 1899.

REFINED SUGAR GOES UP.

Advanced Ten Points by All the Refiners—Various Reasons Assigned.

All grades of refined sugar were yesterday advanced ten points by all the refiners, the American Sugar Refinery Company, the National Sugar Refining Company, and the Arbuckles.

Various reasons are assigned for this action by the refiners following so closely after the late reduction of five points. The refiners themselves say that a great many orders were received shortly after the beginning of the day which put them in oversold condition. Some brokers claimed they had advised their customers to put orders in, as if the market for raw sugar held steady an advance in the refined product might be looked for.

There is a difference in opinion, however, as to the reason for the advance. In some quarters it is said that the advance was not altogether due to the improvement in demand for the refined product, and it was intimated that the advance in price was another indication of the settlement of the sugar war.

President Post of the National Sugar Refining Company said yesterday that the advance was brought about by the large demand.

"I will say positively," he said, "that there has been no meeting of the refiners. The American Company advanced the price, and, as they are in a position to establish it, we gladly follow it. This action does not indicate harmony."

At the office of Arbuckle Brothers it was stated that the advance followed the receipt of a great volume of orders, and that the demand exceeded the supply.

KATZ BROTHERS WITHDRAW.

Will Make No Further Effort to Secure the Rogers Locomotive Works.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 7.—Bernard Katz of the brewing firm of Katz Brothers, which has been endeavoring to complete arrangements for the retention of the Rogers Locomotive Works in this city, says that the offer by the firm of $200,000 toward the keeping of the works in operation is now withdrawn. Mr. Katz says he is convinced, in view of the attitude of the meeting held Saturday night, that the citizens of Paterson are not willing to bestir themselves in the matter, and as Mr. Rogers is not willing to agree to the terms proposed by him and his brother they have decided to make no further effort in the matter.

Mr. Katz called on Mr. Rogers yesterday and suggested that an appraisement be made to ascertain the value of the works. If Mr. Rogers had agreed to this the Katz Brothers would have been willing, they say, to take charge of the plant on their own responsibility. Mr. Rogers refused, however, to consent to an appraisement and no agreement could be made.

Mr. Rogers says he has under consideration two offers for the machinery of the plant, one from a Southern firm of locomotive builders and the other from a Boston firm.

Essex and Hudson Gas Company.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 7.—The Essex and Hudson Gas Company held its annual meeting this morning. The Board of Directors was increased to fourteen members. John F. Shanley was re-elected President and George R. Gray was chosen First Vice President; Senator Thomas N. McCarter, Second Vice President, and James P. Dusenberry, Secretary and Assistant Treasurer. The new Board of Directors will be composed of the four officers and Dr. Leslie D. Ward, Elisha B. Gaddis, Peter Hauck, Sr., James Smith, second, Spencer Weart, Uzal H. McCarter, Halsey M. Barrett, Randal Morgan, William J. Davis, and George Spottiswood.

To Develop Property In Cuba.

CAMDEN, N. J., Jan. 7.—A mortgage for $750,000, given by the Carbon Steel and Iron Ore Company to the Girard Trust Company of Philadelphia, was filed in the Camden County Register's office this morning. The mortgage covers a railroad and real estate in the Province of Santiago, Cuba. Its purpose is the insurance of a bond issue about to be made by the Carbon Steel and Iron Ore Company, to be used in the development of the company's possessions in Cuba.

Talk of Another British War Loan.

Talk of the possibility of another British war loan to meet the expenses of the protracted campaign in South Africa was heard in local banking circles yesterday. It was generally believed that the flotation of such a loan would again find American bankers ready to take up a large share of it.

Increases Capital to $5,000,000.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 7.—The Indiana Portland Cement Company, which was incorporated some time ago, to-day filed a certificate increasing its capital from $1,500,000 to $5,000,000. The certificate is signed by R. H. Evans, President, and V. O. Faulk, Secretary.

London's Imports and Exports.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—The statement of the Board of Trade for the month of December shows increases of £5,707,800 in imports and £1,573,500 in exports.

Jersey City to Perth Amboy by Trolley.

Local officers confirm the report that the Raritan Traction Company has secured from the Freeholders of Middlesex County, N. J., the right to extend its lines to New Brunswick and to Woodbridge, thereby giving it connections with the Consolidated Traction Company of New Jersey and enabling the company to run from Perth Amboy to Jersey City by trolley. The Raritan Traction Company is a consolidation of the Perth Amboy Railroad and the Raritan Trolley Company, and is owned by New York capitalists.

the season that, although the company had earned, during the past year, 8 per cent. on its common stock, it was not deemed prudent to distribute the money among the stockholders, in view of the very large expenditures already made and to be made in new construction now in progress for which no new securities have been issued. The company is now building and expects to finish by Aug. 1 next a continuous billet and rail mill, which will enable the company to put its entire steel output; not deliverable to the Alabama Steel and Wire Company, into finished form salable in the South.

During the past year the company has expended on its steel plant at Ensley, large sums in excess of the money raised for that purpose by the sale of bonds. The company has also expended out of its earnings for other permanent improvements large sums, and in view of these facts, the committee considers that it would be for the best interests of the stockholders not to distribute at this time surplus earnings in dividends. The committee unanimously approved the selection of D. H. Bacon, now President of the Minnesota Iron Company, as Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company.

Two per cent. has been paid on the stock in each of the three preceding quarters.

TALK OF GOLD EXPORTS.

Wall Street was yesterday taken somewhat by surprise by a sudden advance of ⅝ in the rate for sterling exchange, bringing the figure near to what is admitted to be the gold exporting point. In fact, it was declared by experts that were the Bank of England to offer any inducement whatever—such as the allowing of interest in transit—gold might be shipped from here profitably. One international house, indeed, was reported to be negotiating for a shipment, but no actual engagement was reported.

Yesterday's rise in exchange represents an advance of 1¼ cents on the pound since the first of the year and of about 2½ cents in the last three weeks.

One banker declared that he would not be surprised if $10,000,000 in gold were to be shipped—an amount, he declared, that could easily be spared without in the least disturbing the local money market.

La Bretagne of the French Line, which arrived here yesterday, brought twenty-five packages of specie and some gold, the whole aggregating about $12,000, consigned to bankers in this city and elsewhere.

MISSOURI PACIFIC EARNINGS.

The following statement is prepared by a representative of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, and shows approximately 8 per cent. dividends earned on the stock:

By the acquisition of the Texas and Pacific second income bonds, all the surplus earnings of the Texas and Pacific over the interest on the first mortgage bonds up to $1,100,000 goes to the Missouri Pacific income account.

In view of this fact the following figures have a very direct bearing on the net earnings of Missouri Pacific for the year just closed:

FOURTH WEEK OF DECEMBER.

Texas and Pacific increased	158,000
Total increase for fourth week of December	$320,000

MONTH OF DECEMBER.

Texas and Pacific increased	363,000
Total increase for month of December	$722,000

FISCAL YEAR ENDED DEC. 31, 1900.

Texas and Pacific increased	1,339,000

In view of the fact that in 1899, the Missouri Pacific income account was charged with over $1,000,000 of additions to property and $930,000 of commissions and premiums paid, the result of the above increase in gross should be a showing of at least 8 per cent. on the stock for the year 1900.

The Missouri Pacific starts the year 1901 with the order of 2,500 new box cars, 500 new flat cars, and 80 new locomotives, due for spring delivery. With this additional equipment, the extensive grade reductions which are being made, and the additional income from the Texas and Pacific, the showing on the stock for the year 1901 should be at least 15 per cent. Holders of Missouri Pacific stock feel that the great strength of their security lies in the fact that money which might have gone for dividends has all been put into the property or the treasury, in the past few years, amounting to ?0 per cent. on the stock.

WALL STREET TOPICS.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—Money was easier today. The supply was augmented by the release of consols and dividends. Discounts were affected sympathetically.

Business on the Stock Exchange opened irregular, on the approach of the settlement, fear of failures, and adverse influences. Home funds were fairly steady, due to the hope that the monetary squeeze is over for the time being.

Americans started weak, grew firmer, rose to above parity, reacted slightly, and improved at the close. Readings were the feature. There was some profit-taking in Milwaukee, owing to the absence of confirmation of the report of its lease by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific. Grand Trunks were dull. Kaffirs were flat on Gen. Knox's reverse.

On the Street Americans were active and recovered further. Baltimore and Ohio being quoted at 96. St. Paul at 164, and Erie at 30¼. Other stocks went up fractionally.

Consols for money, 97 1-16; consols for the account, 97 5-16; Atchison, 47⅛; Canadian, 95; St. Paul, 161¼; Illinois Central, 135; Louisville, 89; Union Pacific preferred, 86; New York Central, 147; Erie, 29⅝; Pennsylvania, 77½; Reading, 48⅝; Erie first preferred, 69½; Northern Pacific preferred, 89; Grand Trunk, 7⅛; Rand Mines, 37⅛; Anaconda, 9⅞.

Money, 3@3½ per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 3⅞@4 per cent. and for three months' bills, 4@4¼ per cent.

Spanish fours closed at 70⅝.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Buenos Ayres, 130.70; Madrid, 34.45; Lisbon, 38.50; Rome, 5.40.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 7.—Prices opened firm on the Bourse to-day, but later, influenced by the decline in Kaffirs, the general tendency was unfavorable. Rentes were easier. Spanish 4s and Italians were strong. Rio Tintos were somewhat easier. At the close, business all around was dull, in spite of a slight hardening of Kaffirs.

Three per cent. rentes, 102f. 10c. for the account. Exchange on London, 25f. 11½c. for checks.

Spanish 4s closed at 71.15.

BERLIN, Jan. 7.—Foreigners were firm on the Boerse to-day, especially Italians. Home funds were easier, Americans were dull, Canadian Pacifics advanced, and minea were in demand, on bear covering.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 45¾ pfenigs for checks. Discount rates—Short bills, 3½ per cent.; three months' bills, 4 per cent.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 7.—There was heavy trading to-day in Atchison, both common and preferred, over 7,000 shares selling in the morning. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy sales also were heavy, over 10,000 shares being disposed of in the first half of the day. Union Pacific, Sugar, and Federal Steel also were in brisk demand. Erie Telephone came down from 83 to 77, rallying to 85, later 80; Arcadian Mining fell 1½, to 17½; Copper Range was up 1, at 37; Tri-Mountain was off ½, to 21, and Centennial ½, at 23¾; Agricultural Chemical rose ¾, to 32¾.

Money loaned at the Clearing House at 2½ and 3 per cent. and New York funds, still in excellent demand, sold at par and 5 cents' premium.

Money on call is offered to the strongest borrowers at 4 per cent., though the average going rate is about 4½ per cent.

Closing bid and asked:

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.—The anthracite stocks ruled the Philadelphia market to-day. All other interests were subordinated. Reading common sold at 18½, the first preferred at 37¼, and the second at 23½. Long patient holders jumped at the opportunity and many of them exchanged their stocks for cash. An enormous demand arose for Lehigh Valley, the stock selling up to 33⅞, compared with 30¼ Saturday. This is the highest it has reached since 1896. The Street argued that if the Drexel-Morgan interests could afford to pay around 28 to 29 for 75,000 shares, the stock should be worth all that it is selling for in open market under the brilliant prospects in store for the company. Lehigh Navigation moved up to 66½. It is thought it will be placed on a 7 per cent. basis. It is now earning 10 per cent. and paying 6 per cent. The rest of the stock list was lifeless, with weakness in the Asphalt issues on account of the serious appearance of the Venezuelan situation.

The close was steady at the following bid and asked prices:

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Business in the outside market yesterday was fairly well distributed, but the volume of transactions was small. Trading was probably more active than at the close of last week, but attention was so diverted by the enormous trading on the board that little interest in outside issues was manifested. The events of special interest were sharp advances in several stocks which recently have been very inactive. Prices, however, were irregular, and at the close some substantial declines appeared.

DISTILLING OF AMERICA was not very active, but in spite of the small transactions the preferred stock suffered a sharp decline. After selling to the extent of a few hundred shares at 30, it was offered there till the close, when 29 was bid, a decline of 2 points from the figure quoted at the end of last week.

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER, on transactions in about 1,500 shares, sold up to 23, a new high price. Later the price went off fractionally, and at the close a net gain of only a quarter of a point was shown. The continued advance in this stock is attributed to inside buying.

TENNESSEE COPPER was another of the copper shares to show some activity, and this issue made one of the largest gains of the day. The highest price reached was 18¾, and this was bid for the stock when the market closed. This showed a net gain of 2¼ points, which was accompanied by trading in about 2,000 shares.

STERLING COPPER was traded in for the first time. Sales of 500 shares at 5½ were reported.

COMPRESSED AIR was decidedly weak. For some days past there has been little open demand for this stock, and though little was offered for sale, the price had gradually fallen off a number of points. Yesterday, on the sale of perhaps 500 shares, the price declined to 38, and the best bid quoted at the close was 35.

INTERNATIONAL SILVER preferred, which jumped up sharply a couple of weeks ago as a result of the improvement in the silver market, was forced down yesterday to 45. Early in the day a sale was reported at 49, but it was said that at the time the stock was offered below that figure.

CAST IRON PIPE preferred was bid up about 4 points without calling out any selling orders. Within the last few days this issue has advanced about 8 points on very light transactions.

BUFFALO GAS bonds remained very strong. At the close 75 was bid and none was offered within several points of that figure. They showed a net gain of 1⅛ points for the day.

NEW YORK TRANSPORTATION was active for the first time in many days. It sold down to 5⅝, but subsequently rscovered to 6¼, and closed at 6 bid.

STANDARD OIL sold up about 10 points and closed with a net gain of 9 points, at 799 bid.

HERRING-HALL-MARVIN.—Distribution of the new Herring-Hall-Marvin stock against the certificates of deposit of the Continental Trust Company was begun by the Trust Company yesterday.

Closing quotations yesterday, compared with those of Saturday, were as follows:

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

West Broadway Corner Sold—Other Dealings by Brokers and in the Auction Room.

F. A. Bruen has sold for David V. Johnson and another to Mary Y. Morton the four-story building 88 West Houston Street, northwest corner of West Broadway, 20 by 100.

George W. Brown has sold for the estate of David Hepburn the lot on the east side of Fifth Avenue, 50 feet south of One Hundred and Thirteenth Street, 25.3 by 100. The buyer, Louis L. Jaffer, will erect thereon a six-story flat.

The seven-story apartment house known as the El Nido, at the junction of One Hundred and Sixteenth Street and Seventh and St. Nicholas Avenues, is reported to have been sold by Michael McCormack, the builder, to Max and Simon Bernheimer. Paul Mayer, the broker in the deal, would say nothing in regard to it yesterday, beyond admitting that negotiations are pending.

Gordon, Levy & Co. have sold 256 and 258 East Tenth Street; also, 377 and 379 East Tenth Street. The same firm has bought 210 Second Street and 24 Orchard Street.

John J. Moriarty has sold three lots on the east side of Eleventh Avenue, 25 feet south of One Hundred and Seventy-fourth Street.

Slawson & Hobbs were the brokers in the recent sale of the Clark estate's plot on the south side of Fifty-sixth Street, between Broadway and Seventh Avenue.

Title passed yesterday in the recently reported deal by which John Noonan and another acquire from Charles Du Vivier the southeast corner of Sixth Avenue and Twenty-seventh Street, 74.1 by 70. The consideration was $190,000. The new owners have mortgaged the property for $100,000.

TO FORECLOSE BIG MORTGAGE.

Plans for Apartment House at Forty-third Street and Sixth Avenue Receive Set-back.

The plans of the General Carnegie Company for improving the site of the old Sixth Avenue car stables with an apartment house will probably suffer a serious setback through proceedings begun yesterday to foreclose an eight-hundred-thousand-dollar mortgage on the property held by the Sixth Avenue Railroad Company.

This property, covering the block front on the east side of Sixth Avenue, between Forty-third and Forty-fourth Streets, and being 240 feet in depth, was conveyed by the Sixth Avenue Railroad Company to the General Carnegie Company early in June, 1900, for a consideration of $1,000,000, as indicated by the revenue stamps on the deed. Of this amount $800,000 remained on mortgage at 4 per cent., the mortgage falling due on Dec. 27 last.

The structure which has been planned for the site was to be primarily an apartment house, while in the basements on the street frontage facilities for the storage of the company's motor vehicles were to be provided.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyance should therefore show the true consideration:

A BATTLE WITH A STORM.

The Transport Ingalls Badly Bruised and Battered by Heavy Seas.

The little United States transport Ingalls arrived here yesterday, after an exciting voyage from San Juan and Havana. Off the Florida coast she encountered a gale that lasted forty hours. Her steering gear was badly damaged, the big wheel being smashed to pieces and the wooden grating around it washed overboard. One big wave smashed in the door of the saloon and flooded the interior, rolling unchecked across dining tables and tearing up the stationary iron chairs that were riveted to the floor. There was not a part of the vessel but what suffered more or less damage.

From Havana the Ingalls had good weather until Fernandina, Fla., was sighted, on last Wednesday. Then there arose such a terrific northerly wind that Capt. Stevenson ordered low speed, and no sooner had the engines slowed down than huge waves began to beat over the decks fore and aft. The wind shifted. The waves grew fiercer. A stationary iron ladder leading to the bridge was torn away and hurled overboard. Another ladder was twisted to pieces and fell on deck with a crash.

Twenty-four hours after the storm arose, the vessel having meanwhile been kept on her course with difficulty, the steam steering gear went wrong. First the wheel, five feet in diameter, was smashed. Then the wooden grating around it, which was also used as a platform, was washed away. The engineers got to work and repaired the gear so that it was in shape for steering again, but in the meantime the crew had to work hard to keep the transport's head up by means of the hand-steering apparatus.

All the while heavy seas were breaking over the vessel. Besides the wave that smashed through the saloon, there was one which broke into a special suite of cabins on the upper deck—quarters prepared for the use of State officials like the Governor of Cuba or Generals of the army. Everything in these apartments was either ruined or badly injured. The pumps got out of order, and a bucket brigade worked steadily, bailing out the water as it poured down hatchways, through broken portholes, and into deck cabins through shattered skylights. Much of the freight in the hold was stowed in and utterly destroyed. For forty hours the strain continued, and when the sea and the winds moderated the transport presented a right sorry appearance, with splinters strewn all over her decks and with the most of her superstructure glasswork smashed.

The Ingalls was formerly the Clearwater, and was built for the fruit trade between here and Honduras. She is small, but a "speeder." Of late her duty has been that of a transport between Cuba and Porto Rico, and Gen. Wood has used her in his visits of inspection to different island ports. Her crew is composed largely of West Indians.

VICE CRUSADER ON HORSEBACK.

Consternation and excitement were spread among the pedestrians on Third Avenue in the vicinity of Sixty-fifth Street Sunday afternoon by the appearance of a well-dressed young man mounted on a large white horse riding in Paul Revere fashion along the middle of the sidewalk. The young man, who was being jolted considerably, found time between gasps to shout "Down with vice!" "To h—l with Richard Croker!" "The butchers are all right!" and other things calculated to cause excitement. The populace ran into doorways, threw themselves into areaways, and dodged behind lamposts until this new kind of vice crusader had passed.

As the horse and rider approached Sixty-fifth Street the animal, which was plainly unused to service under the saddle and had been speeding along at a gait between a gallop and a canter, fell off into a species of fox trot which left the rider no breath with which to warn the people, and the young man was holding on with hands, feet, and teeth when Policeman McGuire of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station arrested him just as he was about to ride down a baby carriage.

The prisoner was taken to the station house, where he said he was Valentine Schaeffer, Jr., eighteen years old, a butcher of 1,123 East One Hundred and Fifty-sixth Street. He told the Sergeant he was commissioned to stop all the vice in the city and incidentally to kill Richard Croker. He said he had gotten the horse at the Johnson House, at One Hundred and Fifty-sixth Street and the Southern Boulevard, and had ridden down town to the place where he was arrested. The young man's father was telephoned for and told the Sergeant that his son had been acting queerly for some time, having evidently gone crazy on the subject of vice.

The prisoner was arraigned yesterday morning in the Yorkville Police Court and committed to the Bellevue insane pavilion.

WEST POINT REVELATIONS

BOOZ'S TENT MATE A WITNESS

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.—The Congressional Committee appointed for the purpose of inquiring into the alleged hazing of former Cadets Oscar L. Booz of Bristol, Penn., and John E. Breth of Altoona, Penn., resumed the taking of testimony at the Lafayette Hotel this morning. The committee attached much importance to the testimony of to-day's witnesses. The members of the Breth family, who firmly believe that John Breth died indirectly from hazing at West Point, and Anthony J. Burnam, Jr., of Frankfort, Ky., Booz's tentmate, were heard during the day. None of these witnesses testified before the military board of inquiry.

Burnam was the first witness called. He was told to state in his own way what he knew of the matter under consideration. Burnam said he went to West Point in June, 1898. He asked Booz to become his tent mate when they went into camp in July of that year. Booz, he said, was a nice sort of young man, and up to the standard of other cadets.

The elder cadets, Burnam said, had a lot of fun with Booz on account of his name. He was ordered out to fight by the "Fighting Committee." After the contest Burnam saw Booz lying in his tent. He looked dejected, and had been crying. Booz told him he had been "called out," and that he had received a blow in the stomach which rendered him absolutely helpless. Other cadets said that Booz had "laid down." The upper class men kept taunting him, saying he would make no soldier. This was kept up until he resigned.

Oscar told Burnam how upper class men ordered him (Booz) to take tobasco sauce. They gave Booz a small bottle of tobasco sauce, and told him to take all of it before he left the table. He took it by teaspoonfuls. On one occasion Booz said he put a lot of sauce on a piece of steak, intending not to eat it. An upper class man noticed this, and ordered Booz to eat the steak. Oscar told Burnam the stuff was ruining his stomach.

Burnam added that Booz was compelled to take the sauce quite often. He believed that Booz resigned because he was dejected on account of hazing and failure in his studies.

Mr. Dick asked: "If a complaint had been made, do you think Booz would have been treated better?"

"Booz was very unpopular, and if he had made a complaint he would have been treated still worse," was the reply.

"Do not the officers of the academy try to prevent hazing?"

"They do, but the officers are not always around when hazing is going on. When any hazing was in progress a number of cadets were usually on duty to watch for the officers and warn the hazers if one should come along."

Burnam said it would be hard for a cadet to make a secret complaint. If, however, a secret complaint were made and an investigation followed, the hazers would quickly come to the conclusion that the hazed cadet had made the complaint, and the result would be that life would become more miserable for him.

Reverting to Booz's fight, Burnam said that Booz was ordered, while at drill, to step out of line by an upper class man. If he had done so it would have been a violation of the academy regulations. His refusal to break the rule resulted in his being "called out" to fight.

While Burnam was in the fourth class, a period of about twelve months, there were about ten men "called out" to fight. All of the contests were severe, and the fourth class men were usually badly battered. Fighting was prohibited at the academy, and, although every contestant's face showed much evidence of his having been in a fight, no action was taken by the academy officers to punish any one, as far as Burnam knew.

The case of John Breth of Altoona, who died from an ailment which, it is alleged, he contracted indirectly as a result of hazing at West Point, was then taken up. The first witness called was Dr. E. E. Goodman of Altoona, the Breth family physician. Dr. Goodman said Breth entered West Point in June, 1897, and died last October. His physical condition before entering the Military Academy was excellent. Dr. Goodman treated him two weeks after he came home from West Point for hemorrhoids. Later on young Breth went to Pittsburg, where he was employed as a salesman by a Pittsburg tobacco house. He returned home two months later suffering from nervousness and insomnia, but soon returned to Pittsburg. Last October the doctor again treated him, for typhoid pneumonia, from which he died. Young Breth never told Dr. Goodman anything about hazing at West Point. He became very nervous about a year after he returned from West Point, and the physician often wondered what could have caused it.

It had been reported that Dr. Goodman said if this were the case it would have explained his physical condition on his return home.

Samuel J. Breth, father of Cadet Breth, testified that his son was appointed by Congressman Hicks in March, 1897, and was dismissed from the academy because of deficiency in mathematics in January, 1898. Mr. Breth said the family had received letters from the son in regard to hardships at West Point. The father and mother knew that the boys at the Academy were more or less hazed, and Cadet Breth and his brother Harry had an understanding between them that if John had anything to write about hardships he would write to Harry only, so that the parents would not worry.

Harry and one of the daughters visited John at the Academy in August, 1898, and on their return home they said John had been severely hazed, and that he had nervous prostration.

Mr. Breth said he learned from Harry that John had been "coo-chooed." On his death-bed the boy went through the "choo-chooing" motions.

Harry Breth, the brother, was called, and offered to submit copies of letters he received from John. The committee decided that it wanted the originals, which are now at the Breth homestead in Altoona. Harry Breth was excused until the letters could be produced, and in order that Miss Rosa M. Breth, a sister, might return home and send them to the committee, her testimony was then taken.

Miss Breth said she received a letter from her brother while he was in West Point Hospital in which he said the surgeon told him he had a light attack of nervous prostration from over-work. John, however, told other members of the family, when they visited him at West Point, that his condition was due to hazing. John said he was hazed three times in one night. On his deathbed John told the witness that "West Point is the cause of the breakdown in my health." He mentioned Bender, Wood, and Yonge as being "awful hazers."

While John was in the hospital, Miss Breth said, he was visited by upper-class men and told that he "had better get out of here to-morrow." In his last illness John told Harry some things to make Harry believe that Cadet Breth was even subjected to hazing in the hospital.

"When John came home he told me that he had to do so much "eagling" that he often became exhausted, and his muscles felt like leather. A cadet named Bender made him sit on the point of a bayonet until he fell off. He was made to sit on it again, and during this operation Bender played a violin. On a hot July day, after a hard day's drill, he was compelled to don a rain coat and hold out dumbbells. One night he was dragged out of bed and over rough stones in the company street. On another occasion he was so hardly exercised that the next morning the officer in charge of the drill compelled him to drop out of line because of his weakness. My brother considered West Point Military Academy the best in the world, but said the upper-class men ran the place."

Mary C. Breth, another sister of Breth, was called, and corroborated the testimony of other members of the family. She said her brother told her that one night he was hazed by three separate sets of cadets. He stood the first two, but fainted during the third act of hazing. When he regained consciousness he saw several men rubbing him. They appeared to be greatly frightened. Miss Breth also said that her brother, in speaking of hazing, said he often ate soap and chewed rope ends at West Point.

At 6 o'clock the committee adjourned until 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

An Anti-Hazing Amendment.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—To the pending Army Reorganization bill Senator Vest of Missouri to-day offered the following amendment: "The officers in charge of the West Point Military Academy shall make and enforce such rules and regulations as will prevent the practice of hazing; and any cadet found guilty of participating in such practice shall be expelled from the Academy, and shall not be reappointed to the corps of cadets therein."

LEGAL NOTES.

INHERITANCE TAX.—John Crerar, who died in 1889 in Chicago, where he resided, owned the property 91 John Street, in this city, and personal estate amounting to about $250,000, consisting mostly of stocks in New York corporations, the certificates and securities being kept in Illinois. In October, 1892, in proceedings before the Surrogate, asking that the property be appraised as being subject to the inheritance tax, the appraiser appraised 91 John Street at $58,000, stating it to be all the property in this State of the decedent subject to the payment of the tax. The amount of the tax, $3,900, was then paid to the Controller. In July, 1894, Crerar's executors accounted in the Probate Court, in Illinois, and were discharged. In September, 1896, the New York Controller petitioned the Surrogate for a reappraisal, and upon that petition the order of the Surrogate made in 1892 was amended so as to include the personalty, as being subject to the tax. On appeal to the Appellate Division, the question was presented of the authority of the Surrogate to amend the order and his jurisdiction to appoint an appraiser of the personal estate. It was insisted, on behalf of the Contreller, that the personal estate was never brought to the attention of the appraiser. The Appellate Division does not agree in that view and has reversed the order, holding there is no authority in the statute for such proceeding. Justice Hatch, giving the opinion, says that at the time the appraisal was made it was very generally believed that the only property of a non-resident which was taxable under the transfer act was real estate, the Appellate Division having then recently held that neither stocks nor bonds owned by a non-resident decedent, where the certificates were held at the domicile of the decedent, were taxable under that law. The Court of Appeals has since decided otherwise.

***

TITLE TO REALTY.—Fanny Turner Wharton refused to accept a conveyance of certain premises which had been sold to her, subject to the approval of the court, by the trustees under the will of Eugene A. Livingston, claiming the title was not a good and marketable one, for the reason that the power of sale contained in the will pursuant to which the trustees assumed to sell, had ceased to exist at the termination of the trust, and was no longer operative. Mr. Livingston by his will gave the remainder of his estate to his executors upon trust to receive and pay the rents to his children until the death of both of his sons, Richard M. C. Livingston and Walter E. Livingston, or until Richard should become thirty-seven years old, or Walter arrived at the age of thirty-five, whichever of the three events should first happen. Immediately after the termination of the trust the remainder of the testator's property was to go to such of his five children as might then be living, and to the lawful issue of such as should be dead. There was a direction to then partition the real estate, with power to sell any or all of such realty. Mrs. Wharton claimed that as the event terminating the estate had happened, the trustees had no power to sell the premises to her. In a suit brought by Richard M. C. Livingston and others against Elizabeth E. Livingston and others, for a construction of the will, a judgment was rendered authorizing such sale to Mrs. Wharton, but she claimed that was insufficient to make the title marketable. The Appellate Division, in an opinion by Justice Hatch, has affirmed an order of the Special Term compelling Mrs. Wharton to take title. Justice Hatch holds that whether or not the Court at Special Term correctly construed the will, the judgment was binding on all parties to the action, and would continue to bind them so long as it stands unreversed, and that it is binding upon and protects all who deal upon the faith of it.

***

THE EAST RIVER BRIDGE AS AFFECTING TITLE TO REALTY.—Isidore Schweitzer, after having contracted on Dec. 1, 1898, to purchase the property 56 Ridge Street from Walter E. Warner for $18,000, and paid $300, objected to the title and refused to take the property because of the laws of 1895 and 1896 creating the East River Bridge Commission. He claimed that the map (filed before the making of the contract) for the erection of the bridge, included this property as lands to be taken. In Warner's suit to compel Schweitzer to specifically perform the contract, the latter insisted that although no proceedings had ever been taken to condemn the premises, the title was rendered unmarketable and defective. The Appellate Division, in this city, has affirmed the judgment of the Special Term in favor of the plaintiff, holding, by Justice O'Brien, that, as the defendant, when he made the contract, knew the property was likely to be condemned and taken for bridge purposes, he could not afterward object to taking the title.

Buchanan Will Contest on Again.

The second fight over the will of the late Dr. Alexander Buchanan began yesterday in the Supreme Court before Justice MacLean and a jury. Mrs. Margaret Buchanan, the widow, is suing Mrs. Kate M. Belsey, now the wife of Francis P. Belsey, but formerly Mrs. Kate M. Foster, who is the principal beneficiary under the will. Dr. Buchanan died in 1896, leaving his wife $50, and giving to each of his three daughters the sum of $5. The balance of his estate, estimated at $200,000, he left to Mrs. Foster, in addition to having deeded considerable property to her during his lifetime. Dr. Buchanan died at Mrs. Foster's home, and before his death Mrs. Buchanan recovered a verdict of $50,000 against Mrs. Foster for the alienation of her husband's affections. There was a long contest over the will, which was finally admitted to probate by Surrogate Ransom, and then the present action followed. Mrs. Buchanan was on the witness stand yesterday, and told of the family life before Dr. Buchanan went to Mrg. Foster's house to live.

ANSONIA, Conn., Jan. 7.—The largest foreign order ever filled in this city is now completed and awaiting shipment. It consists of 1,000,000 pounds of wire for a trolley road in India.

A train of between fifteen and twenty cars will be needed to ship it to New York to be placed aboard a steamer.

DENOUNCED THE PARK POLICE.

Refuge for Police Department Pets, President Guggenheimer Says.

President Guggenheimer said yesterday that the park police under the present system had become a refuge for pets of the Police Department, and that the system should be changed.

"Every time I go up to the Park I find two or three of the policemen hobnobbing together. The Police Department of the Park has become the rendezvous of pets. The old system of having a separate park police should be reinstalled, and legislation should be adopted by the Legislature to this effect," said Mr. Guggenheimer yesterday.

President Guggenheimer also announced that he had received letters from the West End Association commending his plan to have policemen stationed at a number of the dangerous up-town crossings for the protection of pedestrians.

THE MAYOR'S ANNUAL MESSAGE.

Announcement that He Will Take Time to Reflect on It Causes Comment.

The Municipal Council held a meeting yesterday, in accordance with the provisions of the charter. There were few members in attendance, and no public business of importance was transacted. President Guggenheimer, after waiting half an hour after the time set for holding the meeting, appointed Councilmen Goodwin, Brice, and Connelly a committee to wait on Mayor Van Wyck and see if his Honor had any message to communicate to the Municipal Assembly. On the return of the committee it was announced that the Mayor would not transmit his annual message at once, but would wait and reflect on the contents.

This news caused the City Hall politicians to wonder if Mayor Van Wyck is going to recommend any startling innovations in municipal government. Mayor Van Wyck has been silent on the city's affairs since the last message, a year ago, and some of his friends think that he will send a strong message this year to the Municipal Assembly recommending certain legislation for the good of the city.

Seventy-five Municipal Appointments.

The Municipal Civil Service Commission announced yesterday the appointment of 75 men to positions, 67 of which are men appointed firemen in the Fire Department. Five men were appointed to the Rapid Transit Commission at a salary of $1,200 per annum, four as assistant engineers, and one as cement tester. They are Daniel L. Turner, Rosebank, S. I.; Charles A. Hunt, 140 State Street, Brooklyn; Jesse A. Martin, 2,141 Fifth Avenue, and Tyrrell B. Shertzer, 1,425 Broadway, assistant engineers, and Samuel T. Adams, 339 McCartney Street, Easton, Penn., cement tester.

AMERICAN PROPOSAL REGARDING CHINA

LIKELY TO BE AGREED TO

Attitude of Imperial Court Threatens Serious Complications—Partition of China May Result.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The United States has laid before the powers a plan for taking the indemnity question out of the hands of the envoys at Peking and having it settled by a conference of representatives of the powers. The State Department, in making this proposition, has suggested Washington as the place of conference. No formal replies have yet been received.

As before stated, the President has had under consideration two plans for having the indemnity question settled outside of Peking—the one which he has now adopted and the plan for having the matter referred to the Court of Arbitration at The Hague. The latter was the plan suggested some months ago by Russia and indorsed by the President in his message to Congress. The other plan, which has now been adopted, was the one originally favored by the President before the Peking negotiations began.

The President and the Secretary of State have had this method of ending the difficulty in mind for nearly two months, and have only awaited a favorable time to propose it. It has not been suggested before because it was evident that a majority of the powers were not convinced that negotiation on the subject at Peking was hopeless. The fact that it is now proposed is taken to indicate that the State Department believes the powers to have reached this conclusion and to be ready for a change. The assent of Russia is believed to be absolutely certain. Intimations that other powers would look upon the plan with favor have been received, and it is highly probable that the American plan will be adopted.

A statement has been printed to the effect that this plan originated with Minister Conger. This is not true. The basis of that story is simply that Minister Conger has recently admitted the difficulty of completing the negotiations at Peking. The plan was ready for submission to the powers before any such expression of opinion was received from Mr. Conger.

Important as the indemnity question is, it is overshadowed just now by a more threatening problem. This problem is how the powers are to get out of the complication into which they have gotten themselves by overruling the protest of the United States and inserting the word "irrevocable" in the joint note. The Empress Dowager has ordered Prince Ching not to sign the note. The powers will insist that he sign it. They cannot do anything else, having made the note irrevocable. They cannot modify it or accept anything but an unconditional signature.

If the Empress Dowager still refuses to sign, a very serious situation will confront the powers. Either they must go to war with China or they must make their occupation of Peking and Pe-chi-li indefinite. Not more than one of them would welcome war. The probability is, therefore, that they will make their occupation indefinite. This, of course, means partition. It is not believed for a moment by any experienced diplomat that the military forces of the powers would continue to remain cooped in Peking in joint occupation for a term of years. They would certainly stake off sections of the north, at least, and that would end in partition.

The United States is out of this dilemma, for in signing the joint note Minister Conger, by order of the State Department, made a reservation expressly exempting the United States from any obligation to make war or to occupy any part of China. The new complication will be received with pleasure by those powers which want partition, but it is extremely disagreeable to those which have been trying to avoid it, and it indicates the wisdom of the United States in endeavoring to keep the word "irrevocable" out of the note, and in subsequently signing it with a reservation.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Mr. Choate had an interview regarding the Chinese situation with Lord Lansdowne at the Foreign Office yesterday, but little headway was made. The discussion was confined to the difficulties of the powers in agreeing to China's answer to their demands, which will necessitate further negotiations.

Great Britain has not yet replied to the circular of the United States Government inviting the powers to confer in Washington. The Associated Press is authorized to say that she is willing to agree to the proposal if the other powers will also agree, but the impression prevails in London that the other European powers are not likely to accept Mr. Hay's suggestion.

British officials generally are disheartened over the latest muddles in Peking, and fear that a long time will elapse before matters are made straight. It is pointed out that a conference in Washington would be a cause of serious delay and inconvenience to many powers, which would be obliged to send special representatives.

If it is decided to hold a conference in Washington, Lord Pauncefote will probably represent Great Britain.

The success or failure of Secretary Hay's latest effort appears to depend chiefly upon the powers in the Triple Alliance, which are now exchanging dispatches on the subject. The indications are that they would only accept the proposal as a last resort.

The suggestion of Washington as the most suitable location creates no feeling whatever, for it is a rule of European diplomacy that powers responsible for such suggestions have the right to name their own capitals as the places of meeting.

PEKING, Jan. 8.—The protest of Chang-Chi-Tung against the signing of the joint note has caused little surprise here, but the fact that the other southern Viceroys also have protested, causing the Court to instruct the plenipotentiaries not to sign the note, has created a great sensation in Peking. The Ministers believe, however, that Prince Ching is too irrevocably bound verbally, and think he will sign the note.

The objections of the southern Viceroys are precisely the same as those which the Court originally telegraphed to Prince Ching and Li-Hung-Chang, and concerning which the Court eventually agreed to endeavor to make better terms after the signing of the note.

The Court doubtless was influenced by the protests from the south, because it is generally felt that the dynasty has less influence there than in the north.

Chang-Chi-Tung has strongly urged the Court not to return to Peking, but to establish a capital in the Yang-tse Valley. He says this will strengthen the south toward the Chinese cause, and that the signing of the agreement as it exists at present would be a most serious menace to the dynasty, as the state of the country is doubtful.

Li-Hung-Chang is invisible to the public. His attendants claim that he is suffering from a serious relapse, though many persons think his relapse is made a convenience, so that the signing of the note can be delayed until the Court can be heard from again.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 8.—The Empress Dowager's favorite three officials, according to Chinese intelligence, are Lu-Chuan-Lin, Wang-Wen-Chao, and Chen-Chun-Hsuan.

The Empress Dowager, repenting of the execution of those who favored the foreigners during the outbreak of the Boxers, intends to bestow posthumous honors upon them and to grant money to their families.

GERMANS ROUT 3,000 CHINESE.

PEKING, Jan. 8.—A German expedition in the northern district encountered at Sze-hai-Kong, twenty miles northwest of the junction of the great wall, 3,000 Chinese. The Germans retired toward Luitin-Foo, where they were reinforced.

The country is exceedingly mountainous, and the village is in an inclosed valley, with a walled entrance. The Germans advanced to attack the wall, on which the Chinese had mounted ten cannon, including four old Krupps. A mountain battery bombarded the place for an hour, and the position was then taken at the point of the bayonet. Three hours' further fighting took place before the enemy was driven out of the valley. The Chinese loss is estimated at 200, and the Germans lost one killed and four wounded.

NINETY LIVES IN PERIL.

Mail Steamer from Algeria Stranded on French Coast—All Efforts to Save Those on Board Fail.

MARSEILLES, Jan. 8.—A terrible disaster threatens the mail steamer Russie, from Oran, which stranded yesterday on the coast near the village of Faraman, while a violent storm was raging. Fifty passengers and a crew of forty are on board.

The vessel has heeled to the starboard and the waves are sweeping over her. Desperate attempts to rescue her company by lifeboats and steam tugs were made yesterday, and have been repeated to-day, but thus far (up to midnight) the rough seas have prevented every effort to approach her from succeeding.

The wind is still blowing a hurricane, with no signs of abatement. A great crowd is assembled along the shores, excitedly watching the endeavors to communicate with those on ooard the doomed ship, which is bumping heavily as the seas dash over her.

Rockets have been fired, but each time the line has fallen short.

Rear Admiral Besson, Naval Prefect of Marseilles, has telegraphed to Toulon for the dispatch of the powerful tug Travailleur immediately to the scene.

The latest dispatch from the lighthouse keeper at Faraman describes the position of the steamer as hopeless. It is probable that the vessel and all on board will perish.

The Russie seems to have stranded amid shifting sands, into which she is gradually sinking. Some years ago the Alix was lost with all hands near the same spot.

ASK BISHOP POTTER FOR HELP.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 8.—By invitation from over a score of prominent men of this city, Bishop Potter will to-morrow inaugurate an anti-vice crusade in Philadelphia. He will be the principal speaker at a "meeting for good government," to be held at the Academy of Music, and already thousands of tickets have been distributed. The meeting, according to the plan, will be one of speech-making only, but a committee to battle for reforms is expected to be its outcome.

Bishop Potter is expected to give some interesting points on municipal reform, picked up in his crusade against Tammany in New York City. The letter inviting the Bishop to inaugurate the crusade in this city said of the existing conditions:

"Valuable public franchises are given away; contracts are openly disposed of to favorite bidders in the face of lower offers by responsible parties; crime runs rampant; policy shops, gambling houses, the illegal sale of liquors, and houses of ill-repute are not only tolerated, but are protected by the powers that should suppress them. Civil service rules and regulations, though the law, are violated whenever violation of the law will serve the purposes of the men in power, and our offices are filled with tools of the political machine, instead of capable servants of the people."

Among the signers were ex-Senator George F. Edmunds, S. Weir Mitchell, Bishop O. W. Whitaker, Bishop Cyrus D. Foss, Philip C. Garret, William Sellers, Howard B. French, and William C. Hannis.

WOMAN CHASES ROBBER A MILE.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—After being pursued for more than a mile by a woman, Andrew Thomas was arrested to-day on a charge of highway robbery. He was placed under arrest after he had been severely beaten by three men who went to the assistance of the woman and recovered her pocketbook for her. Mrs. N. Steffens of Wilmette was the victim. She was returning home when the robbery occurred. As she reached Hill Street, near Fifteenth, a man stepped from behind a tree and demanded her valuables. Mrs. Steffens hesitated, and the bandit struck her a severe blow on the arm. The force of the blow caused her to drop her pocketbook, containing $7.50 and two gold rings.

The thief immediately grabbed the pocketbook and fled north in Fifteenth Street. Mrs. Steffens started in pursuit. She ran with all her might and kept her assailant in sight for over a mile. Then he went into a saloon owned by Peter Schitznel. Mrs. Steffens followed. She found the thief seated at a table drinking. She told the proprietor that his customer had a few minutes before robbed her and that he had her valuables. With the assistance of two customers the saleswoman captured the robber as he was about to resume his flight. They searched him and found the pocketbook. They restored this to its owner. The man gave his name as Andrew Thomas when taken to the police station.

PRISONERS PLAN TO ESCAPE.

Special to The New York Times.

DOVER, Col., Jan. 8.—A frustrated attempt to blow down the walls of the penitentiary at Canyon City and murder the warden and guards has just come to light. The plot was to place dynamite in the stone yard, destroy the walls, kill all the officers, and escape.

A trusty weakened on account of the Warden's kindness and revealed the plot. Sunday the prisoners were kept in their cells the entire day, and the explosion did not come off. The trusty was suspected, and yesterday when he went to the prison barber to be shaved the latter slit his throat from ear to ear. The victim is still living and may recover.

INVENTOR VANDERBILT EXPLAINS HIS FIREBOX

DEBUT AS A PUBLIC SPEAKER

The Lecture Is Illustrated with Numerous Charts and Stereopticon Slides.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, inventor of the newly patented locomotive firebox, received his first official acknowledgment as a mechanical engineer last night, when he responded to the invitation to read a paper on his invention before an audience of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, 12 West Thirty-first Street. It was Mr. Vanderbilt's début as a public speaker.

As was remarked by several old and noted engineers in the audience, the young inventor handled his subject like a veteran. He spoke purely from the technical standpoint of his invention, which included corrugated fire boxes, stay bolts, and other things, but he was talking to a hallful of mechanical engineers, and at no time did he allow the interest in his subject to flag. When he finished his paper he was generously applauded, and thereafter for an hour came a cross-fire of questions and cross-questions from men grown gray in the profession.

The result of these was the general conviction that the youthful inventor knew what he was talking about, as was said generally among members of the society after the meeting had adjourned. Angus Sinclair, editor of Locomotive Engineering, arose after the discussion and cross-questioning had ceased.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I am conservative in my judgment and slow to admit success before it has been absolutely proved. But, if the invention of Mr. Vanderbilt's fire box continues to prove as satisfactory as it has been thus far, a step ahead will have been taken in the construction of locomotive boilers which stands unparalleled in the history of the world. The locomotive boiler of to-day is practically of the same model that it was in the time of Stephenson. This is the first step in advance which seems to have been taken in the right direction."

The announcement that young Vanderbilt was going to speak about his new firebox crowded the halls of the society with a record-breaking audience. To the interest in his invention, the development of which is being eagerly watched by the foremost engineers of the world, was added the personal interest of seeing a young multi-millionaire who could speak and think and act for himself.

The meeting was to have begun at 8 o'clock, but not until 8:30 did Mr. Vanderbilt appear. As he passed through the aisle of the crowded seats there were few in the audience who recognized him. He walked to the front row, where he sat down. Meanwhile huge charts with figures and progsteorous hyeroglyphics were stretched on frames, and the white screen for stereopticon views was set in place.

Then the lights in the hall were put out, save a single one at a reading desk at the foot of the screen. The speaker stood within the arc of this light. He was dressed in black, cutaway coat, double-breasted vest, soft black and white shirt, a "Cardinal collar," and a black tie.

Standing in the rays of the one electric light, he looked somewhat above the average height and of decided athletic build. Except that his face was flushed, he showed no sign of nervousness. When he began to read it was in a voice well modulated and at a rate neither too slow nor too fast.

The lecture was begun with a brief rehearsal of the early history of locomotive boiler construction, including several negatives that were thrown on the screen to illustrate the text. Then he entered the details of his own invention, enumerating its advantages and its possibilities, what tests of the invention in practice had shown, and what they had not yet shown, and wherein experiments up to date had not been completed.

And as he read, keeping up the interest in his subject, so that a pin dropping might have been heard, negatives of erecting cards from the Baldwin Locomotive Works and pictures of the locomotives already provided with the new firebox, were projected on the screen. It was then that there came the incomprehensible language in which none but the soul of a mechanical engineer can find delight.

The Vanderbilt locomotive firebox is pretty even from a lay standpoint. The invention is not a new one, except in its adaptation from marine to locomotive boilers. To make this adaptation all the more remarkable, it had been tried before by an eminent German engineer, who blew up the boiler and came near going with it. The invention relates purely to that part of a locomotive boiler known as the "firebox."

The "fire box" in a steam boiler is the compartment surrounding the fire on the grate bars. It is herein where the heat is brought into contact with the water, causing steam. The more surface of the fire box is exposed to a certain degree of heat, the quicker and the more copiously steam is generated.

In the ordinary boiler the fire box is, as the name implies, box shaped. To increase the heating surface of such a box it is necessary to build it larger, consequently, to provide for a larger fire and for a larger and more cumbersome boiler all around. The problem, therefore, was to increase the heating surface without increasing the size of the fire.

To accomplish this Vanderbilt built a firebox that was cylindrical and which was corrugated around and around with grooves 1½ inches deep and 6 inches wide. In the saving of fuel on locomotives equipped with this new boiler the result expressed in engineering data is remarkable. Further advantages of the corrugated firebox are that it may safely be used with water, which in the ordinary boilers would form deposits on the inside.

These frequently lead to explosions. That crusts cannot stick to the inside of the boiler is explained by the fact that the variable temperatures to which the metal is subjected cause an "accordeon motion," this causing the crust to break and to detach itself as quickly as it forms.

Two locomotives provided with the Vanderbilt firebox are now in use on the Union Pacific Railroad, where, in order to test them for resisting the formation of boiler crust, they are detailed to a section of the road known for the poor condition of its water.

Another advantage of the invention is cheapness of construction and maintenance. In ordinary boilers there are from 1,400 to 2,000 so-called stay bolts. These are used as braces and stays on the inside of boilers to support the shell.

They are the chief source of trouble in locomotives, as they frequently work loose and require overhauling and repair at short intervals. In the new firebox these will be almost wholly done away with.

In all, five locomotives with the new fire box are now in operation, two on the Union Pacific, two on the Baltimore and Ohio, and one on the New York Central Railroad.

The New French Submarine Boat.

PARIS, Jan. 9.—Le Figaro has a dispatch this morning describing a voyage of two hours in the submarine boat Morse during the trials at Cherbourg on Monday. "In less than two minutes," says the correspondent, "the vessel reached a depth of eighteen feet, when she performed her evolutions with ease and perfect safety. By means of an ingenious instrument, the periscope, floating invisibly upon the surface of the water, everything above was visible. The problem of the supply of air has been solved satisfactorily, and the crew were able to remain submerged for sixteen hours without fatigue of the lungs."

STEAMERS AND STORES BURN.

Beard's Stores in Brooklyn in Danger—The Idlewild and the St. Dunstan Burned.

A fire which started in the excursion steamer Idlewild, which was moored on the western breakwater known as Beard's Winter farm, at the foot of Richards Street, South Brooklyn, at 1:05 o'clock this morning, caught the transatlantic steamship St. Dunstan and threatened to wipe out Beard's Stores.

About 1 o'clock the steamship Idlewild was in flames close to the breakwater. There was a strong south wind blowing, which carried the vessel across toward the stores.

On the South side of the breakwater, the trans-Atlantic steamer St. Dunstan from Liverpool was moored. The excursion steamer struck the St. Dunstan in the stern, the steamship immediately taking fire. On board at the time were Capt. Forthay and a crew of thirty-eight men. In the hurry to escape one man fell overboard, but was rescued by Policeman Thompson of the Hamilton Avenue Station.

Beard's stores are 500 feet long, roofed over, and filled with nitrate of soda and jute. As soon as the flames reached the chemicals a series of explosions began which continued at intervals to a late hour.

The St. Dunstan is owned by Rankin & Gilmore of Liverpool. The Idlewild in Summer runs along the north shore of Long Island.

At 2:30 A. M. the fire was blazing fiercely and there seemed no prospect that any part of the stores could be saved.

Dr. McAuley Wants $100,000 Indemnity for Alleged Ill-Treatment in Africa.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—A suit for $100,000 indemnity has been brought against the Portuguese Government by Dr. Herbert McAuley, a well-known North Side physician. The case is now in the hands of the State Department officials in Washington.

Dr. McAuley is one of the Irish contingent which left Chicago for Red Cross service in South Africa. When the company got to its destination Dr. McAuley did not take up arms in the Boer cause, as most of his companions did.

He says that when coming home eight weeks ago he was arrested on Portuguese territory and imprisoned without cause. He says $10,000 worth of surgical instruments and property belonging to the Red Cross Society was confiscated by his captors. Two weeks afterward he was put on board a vessel and received 200 Krüger sovereigns left for him by Gen. Botha. At Paris he made complaint to the American authorities, and was advised from Washington to make his report to the State Department.

REAR ADMIRAL PHELPS ILL.

Taken to the New York Hospital Suffering with Pneumonia.

Rear Admiral Thomas S. Phelps, retired, of Washington, who has been stopping recently at the Hotel Kensington, Fifth Avenue and Fifteenth Street, was taken to the New York Hospital last night suffering with pneumonia.

He was placed in a private ward, and is said to be in a critical condition. The Rear Admiral is seventy-six years old, and came to this city about three weeks ago, since when he has been stopping at the Hotel Kensington.

It was later learned that not only was the Rear Admiral ill at the hospital, but that his wife also had been a patient there for the last three weeks, suffering from nervous prosration and a general break down in health. Mrs. Phelps also occupies a private ward.

THE NEW POLICE BILL.

ALBANY, Jan. 8.—The bill providing for a single Police Commissioner for New York, who is to be appointed by the Mayor, and subject to removal by the Governor and the Mayor, will be introduced in the Senate to-morrow night by Senator Stranahan and in the House by Representative Kelsey.

The bill is now in the possession of Senator Ellsworth, the Republican leader of the Senate, who will have copies made and given to Senator Stranahan and Mr. Kelsey before to-morrow evening. It was stated by a Republican leader to-day that the programme was to have the bill through both houses and signed by the Governor by Feb. 1.

READY TO REPEL ROBBERS.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—After six elevated railway agents had been held up and robbed on the various lines, E. J. Lewis of the St. Louis Avenue station of the Metropolitan Road has fitted up a gun trap which he hopes will prove successful in case he is attacked. A view of the inside of the booth shows three revolvers pointing different ways, which menace the life and limbs of any highwayman that has the temerity to demand the company's money. Strings are tied to the trigger of each revolver, and the other ends are fastened to pieces of wood near the floor of the station.

Mr. Lewis's scheme is to drop to the floor when the robbers appear and work the revolvers from this safe position. The sides of the booth are lined with one-and-one-half-inch curly maple. He figures that even the most daring thieves would be frightened away by the fusillade that would follow. Sad experience has been the spur which has urged on the ticket agent's inventive genius. He has been the victim of three hold-ups. No later than Sunday morning he was relieved of $14, his watch, and a revolver. Still he has not lost faith in his invention.

EIGHT KILLED IN TRAIN SMASH.

FAIRMONT, West Va., Jan. 8.—An eastbound engine with twenty-three empty cars collided with a west-bound engine, running light, on the bridge crossing the mouth of Koon's Run, above Everson section, on the Monongah Division of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to-day, killing eight men and injuring three others, one fatally. Both engines were going at full speed to reach a switch, as the Pittsburg flier was nearly due.

The heroic action of Brakeman O'Leary in running a mile to signal the flier saved the lives of many of its passengers.

TO HELP THE LONDON AND GLOBE.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The Daily Telegraph in its financial column this morning says:

"We learn that pressure has been brought to bear upon the syndicate which caused the troubles on the Stock Exchange of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited, with the result that the syndicate will advance cash to relieve the difficulties of the next Stock Exchange settlement. An effort will be made to carry through a new construction scheme on the basis of pound shares for the new company, with 15 shillings paid, and leaving a li[illegible] 5 shillings per share. FOUR PERISH IN A TENEMENT FIRE

Bodies of Two Women and Two Children Found.

Firemen Summoned to the Scene While Fighting Another Blaze—Exciting and Solemn Scenes.

Two women and two young children were burned to death in a fire which started shortly after 9 o'clock last night in the five-story double-decker tenement 357 East One Hundred and Thirteenth Street. The building is occupied by eighteen Italian families, composed of about 85 people, and had the flames broken out later in the evening the loss of life, the firemen think, would have been far greater, as the place was a human beehive, and the only means of escape was by way of narrow winding stairs in the rear of the structure and the fire escapes at the front windows.

The dead are Mantimetta Mora, twenty-six years old, wife of Donato Mora, a barber, and her two children, Louis, three years old, and Frances, ten months, and Rosa Mora, thirty-two years old, the wife of Joseph Mora, a fruit vender, who is the brother of Donato. The entire family occupied three small rooms on the third floor of the burned building, where they had resided since their arrival in this country about a year ago. The mother and the children were found in bed, and Rosa Mora lying across the doorway of the 8 by 10 room used as the common sleeping apartment, and which was without light or ventilation and had but one small door.

The fire was remarkable for incidents, no alarm being rung in for it until after the firemen had arrived on the scene. At 9:05 o'clock an alarm was rung for a fire in the five-story double tenement house 2,165 Second Avenue. On the arrival of the firemen a brisk fire was found to be burning in the cellar. While they were working on it an unknown person forced his way through the fire line and up to Capt. Thomas J. Doherty of Engine Company No. 53, whom he told there was a big fire at One Hundred and Thirteenth Street and First Avenue.

Capt. Doherty gathered his men and started for 357 East One Hundred and Thirteenth Street. When he arrived there he found the two upper stories burning fiercely and flames breaking from both the front, rear, and side windows, the building standing on the northwest corner. As there is only one fire truck between Eighty-seventh Street and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, and that one was busy at the Second Avenue fire, a special call was rung for Truck No. 13, which is located in Eighty-seventh Street. By this time all of Little Italy was out, and it took all the reserves from the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Police Station to handle the crowd.

The fire had started in the cellar, and burning up through the air shaft in the rear of the building, burst out on the third, fourth, and fifth floors. Many of the families fled to the roof, and escaped by way of the adjoining building, while those who could not reach the hallways, which were filled with thick, black smoke, reached the street by means of the fire escapes. By the time Truck No. 13 arrived on the scene the fire was about out, it having been drowned with several powerful streams of water. About this time Chaplain Smith arrived from Twenty-eighth Street and Third Avenue, and he entered the building with Chief Breslin and two men of Engine Company No. 53. It was believed that everybody had escaped.

The firemen started to grope their way through the narrow, dark hallway, which was still filled with smoke. They reached the third floor after much difficulty, as the halls were littered with trunks, boxes, bedding, &c., which the inmates had tried to save. Pushing open the door of one of the inner rooms, one of the firemen stumbled over the body of Rosa Mora. Then, in the light of the lanterns, Antoinetta Mora was seen stretched in the bed and clasping her infant in her arms, while the other child, Frances, lay at the foot of the bed. The bodies were taken to a near-by undertaker's shop, and Chaplain Smith read the office of the dead over them, while the crowd, its excitement suddenly abated, gazed on appalled.

There were several rescues before the firemen arrived, and in one case Pietro Muilano carried his two children down the fire escape, followed by his wife, with her three-months'-old child.

The cause of the fire, which did about $4,000 damage, is unknown.

WESTERN RAILROAD COMBINE.

Canadian Pacific Not Interested, Its President Declares.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Jan. 8.—T. G. Shaughnessy, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, returned from his trip to Milwaukee to-day and denied that the Canadian Pacific was interested in James J. Hill's consolidation of the Northern Pacific and Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul and other roads to secure a new transcontinental line. The story that individual Directors or stockholders of the company have put up large amounts of money, he said, to insure the success of Mr. Hill's supposed scheme came to the men whose names were mentioned as a surprise.

"I have known for some time past," said Mr. Shaughnessy, "that negotiations were going on between Messrs. Rogers, Coal Company and James J. Hill, the President of the Great Northern. No doubt the statement made by Mr. Rogers, the Managing Director of the coal company, that the negotiations have merely resulted in a contract under which the Great Northern is to take 800 tons of coal a day, is quite correct.

"But in view of the fact that the coal company is unable now to meet anything like the requirements of the railway companies, the smelters and other coal consuming industries of British Columbia, a proposal to divert such a large additional tonnage causes a considerable degree of apprehension. It is to be hoped that if the coal company has made any such contract for the shipment of coal to the United States it will not take effect until the output of the company's mines is sufficient to supply Canadian wants."

CARNEGIE COMPANY'S PLANS.

To Build Huge Pipe and Tube Plant at Conneaut, Ohio, at Cost of Over $12,000,000.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 8.—In explanation of the extensive land purchases of the Carnegie Company at Conneaut Harbor, Ohio, President Charles M. Schwab to-day made clear the plans of the company with respect to these purposes.

Mr. Schwab states that for over a year the Carnegie Company has contemplated entering into lines of manufacture other than those in which it has been engaged hitherto, and the first step in carrying out this purpose is to be taken at once by the establishment of the largest pipe and tube manufacturing plant in the world at Conneaut Harbor, Ohio, which is the Lake Erie terminal of the Carnegie-Pittsburg, Bessemer, and Lake Erie Railroad, 153 miles from Pittsburg.

The company has purchased 5,000 acres of land immediately east of the Conneaut Harbor docks, and a large part of this vast tract will be utilized as a site for the tube works. The works will stretch over a mile of the lake front and will be the most extensive and complete plant of its kind in every branch ever built. The investment exclusive of ground, will reach about $12,-

SYMPATHY FOR FILIPINOS.

Missouri House Passes Resolution Indorsing the Insurgents in Their "Struggle for Freedom."

Special to The New York Times.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Jan. 8.—The House went on record to-day as favoring the Philippine insurrection. Representative Kendrick introduced the following resolution, which was adopted by a vote of 75 to 47:

"Whereas, The sympathies of the American people go out to all nations and all people struggling for liberty; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the House of Representatives of the Forty-first General Assembly of Missouri extend sympathy to the people of the Philippine archipelago in their heroic struggle for freedom."

The adoption of the resolution created amazement among State officers and members of the Senate, some of whom pronounced it to be little short of treason.

A DEPARTMENTAL MYSTERY.

Who Requested that the Hartford Carry the Asphalt Trust's Attorney from Curacoa?

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—An investigation is being made at the State and Navy Departments as to the circumstances of H. W. Bean's trip from Curaçoa, on the warship Hartford. Mr. Bean is the attorney of the Asphalt Trust, and has been very active in that company's conflict with the Government of Venezuela. He has since been at Washington endeavoring to get the Administration to take up the trust's cause.

The question was raised as to why an American war vessel should be at the disposal of Mr. Bean. The Navy Department investigated the case, and found that the Hartford carried Mr. Bean from Curaçoa at the request of the State Department. The State Department is now investigating to find out which of its representatives, if any, made such a request. Considerable curiosity is excited by the case, especially in view of Mr. Bean's relations to the trust and the apparent ignorance at the departments about the circumstances of his trip.

PANAMA NOW THREATENED.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The State Department received advices to-day from Consul General Gudger, at Panama, indicating that the Colombian revolution had again assumed a serious aspect. He states that the Colombian Government announces that the revolutionists are approaching Panama and are making preparations for a fight, which is likely to occur soon.

There is reason to believe that the United States Government will adopt a vigorous line of action in case the City of Panama is attacked or there is any interruption of the transit facilities of the isthmus. According to a treaty arrangement with Colombia, the United States has a certain measure of protection over the peaceful conduct of this traffic. When Consul General Gudger a few months ago reported that the revolutionists would bombard the City of Panama, Acting Secretary of State Hill promptly sent a dispatch to Mr. Gudger, announcing in unusually vigorous terms that the United States Government would not tolerate any action likely to prejudice American interests or interfere with the rights which the American Government had assumed. The dispatch became public in Panama and had the effect of putting an end to the plans of bombardment.

Mr. Gudger's present dispatch does not indicate that the city itself is about to be attacked, but if it develops by later information that there is any prospect of bombardment, the vigorous procedure of a few months ago will be repeated.

At present the gunboat Ranger is at Panama and the Philadelphia and Iowa are on the way to that locality.

BOY KIDNAPPED IN ALABAMA.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 8.—N. H. Frazer, Tax Collector of Bullock County, Ala., has been notified that his son, Bass, an eighteen-year-old student at the Technological School here, has been kidnapped and is held for a ransom of $5,000. The boy was seen here last on Saturday, Jan. 5.

Two of the brothers of Bass Frazer arrived here to-night from Union Springs, Ala., and gave out the following letter which they say was received from the supposed kidnappers. The letter was mailed in Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 6, and bore a special delivery stamp:

Dear Sir—As kidnapping is all the rage nowadays, we have stolen your son. We intended to steal him before Christmas, but could never get a chance. We don't know your financial condition, as your son refuses to tell us, and we only found $15 on his person. He is a boy way above the average and we need him in our business, so we intend to keep him, but you might send a letter to Jim Glover, General Delivery, Kansas City, as we will be in that city by the time this reaches you, stating how much you will give for his return, and if the amount meets with my approval I will write you more about it.

Don't notify any official authority, as it won't do any good and would ruin all your chances of getting him. We will allow him to sign his name to prove to you we are not joking. We have him in a stupefied condition and are caring for him as a sick person and a young brother.

The boy's signature was attached to the letter which contained some grammatical errors.

Bass Frazer was a member of the first year's class. His brothers say their father is unable to pay the ransom. The mother of the boy is prostrated with grief.

NO BONDS FOR STATE CAPITOL.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 8.—The decision rendered yesterday by the United States Supreme Court in the case of Revenue Agent Adams of Mississippi against the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley and other railroads, involving nearly $1,000,000 in back taxes from 1892 to 1897, inclusive, will, according to State Auditor Cole, remove the necessity of a bond sale to raise nearly $1,000,000 to pay for the construction of a new State House building, authorized by the last Legislature to be erected at Jackson.

The decision was against the railroads. By agreement of counsel this decision settles the case against the Natchez, Jackson and Columbus for taxes from 1891 to 1897 inclusive, now pending before the State Supreme Court, and involving over $200,000.

The revenue agent now has pending before the Mississippi State Supreme Court other suits aggregating $800,000 against the various branches of the Illinois Central system. The most important of these is one against the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley for 1886 to 1891, inclusive, involving $400,000.

In discussing the decision, Auditor Cole said to-day that it will render any issue of bonds for building the new Capitol unnecessary. Of the $1,000,000 already practically recovered, the Revenue Agent will receive 20 per cent., and the remainder will be distributed between the State and counties, the former receiving about $300,000.

With this amount and the surplus that can be counted on in the Treasury in the next year the Capitol can be built. By Feb. 1 there will be in the treasury a surplus of over $400,000 which could be used for this purpose if necessary. If the revenue agent wins his remaining cases the State will have about $150,000 more to apply to the building.

BLACKMAIL GOES TO TAMMANY MEN.

Mr. Nixon Says Some High in the Councils of the Organization Get the Money.

Existence of the Gambling "Combine" Admitted, and this Is Construed as Implicating Tammany Leaders.

Men "high in the councils" of Tammany Hall, but not as high up as Richard Croker, may have been receiving money from the gambling "combine" according to the latest statement of Lewis Nixon, Chairman of the Committee of Five.

Chairman Nixon, in his public utterances, has drawn a line between what Tammany does as an organization and what Tammany leaders do on their own hook. The evidence to show that some Tammany men have received money levied as blackmail on gamblers and the keepers of disorderly resorts has in part been handed to District Attorney Philbin.

The threat is made by Chairman Nixon that Tammany Hall as an organization will drive out any political leader against whom evidence can be procured to show that he has been in any way connected with the gambling "combine" or the levying of blackmail. Street Cleaning Commissioner Nagle bids defiance to Mr. Nixon and says that he will stay in Tammany Hall even if ordered out by the Governor or the President of the United States. Commissioner Nagle claims to be anxious to be indicted by the Grand Jury so that the insinuations made against him can be disproved.

Interviews obtained by THE NEW YORK TIMES reporters yesterday showed that many prominent New Yorkers do not draw a distinction between what Tammany leaders do and what is done officially by Tammany Hall.

CHAIRMAN NIXON'S STATEMENT.

Lewis Nixon, Chairman of the Tammany Vice Committee, said yesterday: "I repeat the statement I made that Tammany, as an organization, has never received money collected by the 'combine' which for many years has been levying blackmail on the gambling places and law-breaking resorts. I do not say that there are not in the gambling 'combine' men high in the councils of Tammany Hall. When their connection with certain forms of protection is shown, I am satisfied they will be dropped from the organization."

"If it was proved that, for instance, Senator Sullivan had been profiting by the protection of gamblers, what would be done to him?"

"He certainly would not be an exception. There are ways of getting rid of a district leader if his actions are objectionable and criminal. I do not want to discuss personalities. We are working to get evidence, and we want all people who have the interest of the city at heart to come to the front and tell us all they know about the 'cimbine' which has been collecting blackmail."

"Do you expect to indict any of the members of the gambling 'combine'? was asked.

"You can assure the public that the Tammany Hall Committee intends to do its whole duty. We will try and secure indictments just as soon as the District Attorney can lay the matter before the Grand Jury. I have already put before the District Attorney enough evidence to secure some indictments."

"Do you think that gamblers would continue to pay millions each year for protection unless the money went to the police officials and the men high in the councils of Tammany Hall?"

"That thing has been going on for the past ten years—probably fifteen or twenty. There is no doubt that the police have been used as a club by the gambling combine, otherwise no money could have been collected. What should be made clear is that the evildoers must suffer for their acts."

"Why was it necessary in your first statement to make such an elaborate defense of Richard Croker as a man who never received blackmail money?"

"Neither Mr. Croker nor Tammany Hall needs any defenders. Our enemies have been intimating that Mr. Croker personally and the organization known as Tammany Hall have been thriving on the proceeds of protected money collected from law breakers. I thought it was well enough to deny it. Our enemies are not always fair in their methods. When I said that Judge McQuade had never received one cent of blackmail money as the 'Treasurer of Tammany Hall,' I have been asked in what capacity, if any, he did receive any of the money. I do not quibble with words in such a matter as this.

members of the Gambling Commission?" was asked.

"Yes. The names are known to many people. I do not care to discuss names."

MR. ISIDOR STRAUS'S VIEWS.

Isidor Straus, whose challenge to Richard Croker really brought on the Tammany vice crusade, was interviewed as to Chairman Nixon's statement. He said:

"I have the utmost faith in Mr. Nixon. He would not stop in doing his duty for any political party or person. I do not think he would stop short of the Mayor himself. From the conversation I have had with Mr. Nixon recently I have been impressed with his high purpose and motive. He will, if possible, bring the lawbreakers to justice.

"Did you notice Mr. Nixon's statement that no money collected by blackmail went into the coffers of Tammany Hall?"

"Yes. I cannot discuss that matter. I do not know anything about Tammany Hall, and the only interest I had in this matter was when Mr. Croker requested me to appear before the Tammany Hall Executive Committee and tell the leaders about vice on the east side. The crusade was started as the result of a challenge by me to Mr. Croker."

"Is it your opinion that Tammany Hall, as an organization levies blackmail?"

"I could not answer such a question because I have no facts. I have no knowledge of such matters."

TAMMANY CONVICTED, MR. MOSS SAYS

Frank Moss of the Society for the Prevention of Vice said yesterday: "It is arrant nonsense for Mr. Nixon to separate Tammany from the combine which has levied millions of dollars in blackmail on keepers of disorderly resorts and gamblers. Why, on the face of it the police are a part of the combine. The Committee of Five, after making the statement about the levying of blackmail cannot well avoid proving that very fact now. Who is to grant immunity to run illegal resorts but the police? It is a tremendous admission for Chairman Nixon to make as the head of a Tammany committee. I think that Mr. Nixon and Mr. Platzek are sincere, but they must be childish if they think people will believe parts of their extraordinary statement.

"The Tammany five has admitted the existence of gambling before. It has even boasted of closing the poolrooms. Now it goes further and openly proclaims the existence of a 'combine' to levy blackmail, and says it has legal evidence against some of its members. The local Police Captain can't be on top, can he? The Inspector is on top of him. The Deputy Chief is at the top of the Inspector, the Chief is on the top of the Deputy Chief, the Commissioners are on top of the Chief, and the Mayor is on top of the Commissioners. Now, who is in control of the Mayor? Mr. Croker—the man who rules New York. He rules this city when he wants to rule it, and he rules it when he does not want to rule it. He is travelling incognito in Europe, and 3,000,000 of people are waiting for him to send word to remove Devery. Of course, the Mayor is in the combine, but I do not believe he gets any money for the part he plays. His rôle is one of political necessity. He is a creature of a political system. Every act of the Tammany Committee of Five is a reflection on the Mayor. I don't suppose Croker gets the money. He is not such a fool as to sit at a desk and take money from the hands of gamblers. It gets it in such a way that the Penal Code can't reach him."

"Every district leader is like a king in his own district. He has got to run it. He has got to keep his people in jobs, and then he has got to supply Tammany Hall with a big bulk of money. Every poolroom, from five to ten Tammany retainers, who get from $5 to $10 a day. The gambling business not only supplies money to run the district, but yields a good crop of money for Tammany Hall. The two things are inseparable. Tammany Hall could not live a minute without the profits from illegal resorts. Mr. Croker appoints a committee to lop off the main branch of the Tammany tree, on which he and all his friends are sitting. It is evident how helpless is Mr. Nixon's attempt to dissociate gambling, blackmailing, and Tammany Hall. It is rather amusing to assume that the gamblers of this city are so innocent and guileless as to submit to a system of blackmail without feeling assured that they are receiving their money's worth in the shape of protection from the police and from the politicians."

MR. PLATZEK HAS THE EVIDENCE.

Mr. Warley Platzek of the Tammany Committee of Five said yesterday: "I approve of Chairman Nixon's statement. I do not care at this time to discuss the evidence which has been put in my hands by Mr. Nixon. It would be discourteous to the District Attorney to do so. I have been misunderstood in reference to a certain matter. I want the public to know that I have not at this time any legally digested evidence that would convict any official or Tammany leader of levying blackmail on evil-doers.

"The evidence submitted to me by Mr. Nixon has been put into form, and I have submitted it and shall continue to submit it to the Grand Jury. This evidence will undoubtedly affect certain individuals. I would like to tell the public more, but it is impossible to do so at the present time. To reveal the nature of evidence sent to the District Attorney would be discourteous and would place me in contempt of the Grand Jury."

"Why did the committee feel called upon to say that Mr. Croker had never received any money paid for protection and blackmail?"

"It has been intimated in various papers that he has been receiving such money. It has been intimated that he was profiting by crime, and we wanted to inform the public of the true facts."

A reporter asked Mr. Platzek whether the Committee of Five was trying to purify Mr. Croker or the city. Mr. Platzek became indignant and said the question was an impertinent one, which he would not answer.

"Do you still claim that Mr. Croker and Tammany Hall do not receive money collected by blackmailing lawbreakers?"

"Not one dollar. I do not want to discuss any such matter. The members of this committee are honest, and they are endeavoring to do the work for which they were appointed."

ANTHONY COMSTOCK'S IDEAS.

"Did you read Mr. Lewis Nixon's statement about vice in New York?" a TIMES reporter yesterday asked Anthony Comstock of the Society for the Suppression of Vice.

"Yes," replied Mr. Comstock, "and I don't think there is any question but there has been a systematic levying of blackmail, under promise of protection of some sort or another, to permit certain classes to violate the law."

"Do you think the District Attorney will do anything in the premises?" was the reporter's next query.

"I think," he answered, "there will be if those who are proceeding against the offenders have any legal evidence to present. The great difficulty is that while there are many to make complaints of which there is a moral certainty of their correctness, they do not have the legal evidence to sustain a prosecution. Many good people think that because crime exists there is nothing to do but to prosecute, but the most essential thing is sound legal evidence."

"Do you construe Mr. Nixon's statement as an admission that Tammany officials in power are cognizant of the sources of revenue from gamblers and others looking for protection?"

"That is the natural inference. A man who pays tribute for protection does not pay it unless he has good reason to believe it can be furnished."

"Do you believe these offenders can be reached in the courts?"

"I believe that it will be very difficult to get the legal evidence against the men who stand as sponsors for the criminals and against the men who are enriched by the systematic blackmailing. In the first place, the criminal is bound to secrecy. So, too, is the criminal who gives up blackmail. He who receives it from the criminal will not betray his backer any more than a policy or green goods man will tell who is behind him."

"That is a matter of conjecture. I don't care to discuss it. I think the public generally pretty well understands it. But there is one thing that many overlook. There are very many good men on the police force, who, if they were permitted, would gladly do their whole duty. While a policeman takes an oath to enforce the law, he also pledges himself to obey his superiors. So if a superior officer tells a subordinate to keep his hands off of a certain place or places, he is in duty bound to do so. The game is higher up."

"Have you any idea of the means of communication between the blackmailers and the blackmailed?"

"I believe Tammany Hall has allies and others besides myself know pretty well who they are."

"What about the allegation that representatives of your society have received tribute?"

For answer, Mr. Comstock showed the reporter a letter he had written to Mr. Nixon, in which he calls on Mr. Nixon to furnish the society with the name of any person who has ever contributed money, directly or indirectly, to any agent of the society. He also asks for the name of any agent who has received money, and promises to prosecute the agent on the receipt of the information. Mr. Comstock denies that the society has ever received a penny of blackmail; declares it has clean skirts, never was for sale, and is not for sale.

Mr. Comstock then asks Mr. Nixon why he did not allude in his statement to a certain society, "supposed to be an ally of Tammany Hall, and which is supposed in well-informed quarters to be the source of negotiations between those who violate the laws and those who protect them in its violation."

This society, according to Mr. Comstock's letter, has a staff of about fifteen men who have visited gambling houses daily and while they had abundant evidence, had not preferred a single complaint in years.

While Mr. Comstock did not say so, it is understood his reference was to the Society for the Enforcement of Criminal Law.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

Ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott said: "It would be obviously improper for me, as an officer of the police tribunal, to discuss Mr. Nixon's statement about the levying of tribute on gamblers, and I decline to entertain the subject."

W. H. Baldwin, Jr., Chairman of the Committee of Fifteen, said: "Reading this, is there any need of legal evidence now of practices that have been suspected? And—well, the public is the jury in this case."

Ex-Mayor Abram S. Hewitt said: "During my administration as Mayor no protection was given or sold to gamblers, &c., or, at least, none that I discovered, and I made efforts to discover it. I will not criticise Mr. Nixon or his committee in any way or comment on his statement about the sale of protection. Mr. Nixon is a gentleman who is acting in good faith, I have no doubt."

Ex-Sergeant Cram of the Dock Commission was at the Hoffman House last night, and when asked about Mr. Nixon's statement, said: "I have been told that blackmail has been levied. I do not think, however, that Tammany Hall or Mr. Croker received one cent of it. Did I think so for a moment I would resign from the organization."

COMMISSIONER NAGLE'S DENIAL.

Street Cleaning Commissioner Nagle was indignant yesterday at stories circulated that he was a member of the "combine" exposed by Mr. Nixon. Commissioner Nagle said:

"That is going too far. I don't believe that Mr. Nixon ever said one word implicating me with any wrongdoing. He knows better."

"You are not connected directly or indirectly with any gambling commission?" was asked.

"I have never received a cent directly or indirectly from any gambling transaction in my life. I made bets on the horses, as every one knows, and I played poker a few times, but I always lost."

"Have you heard the rumor that the Tammany Committee of Five would try to put you out of Tammany Hall?" was asked.

"Well, that is a fine piece of impudence. I would like to see any one try to put me out of Tammany Hall. The Governor of the State nor the President of the United States could not do that. As long as the people of my district stick to me I will be in Tammany Hall."

"Do you think your name will be presented to the Grand Jury?" was asked.

"I hope so. I hope I will be indicted, but I don't believe it. If I were indicted I could be cleared of all these charges. Don't be afraid. Neither Mr. Nixon nor any one else will present my name to the Grand Jury, because they have no evidence against me. My district is the cleanest in town, and as for any connection with gambling or sharing in the proceeds, it is a lie. My offer of $1,000 for proof of any disorderly house or gambling place in my district goes, and I will offer another $1,000 reward for any one who will prove that the statement I have just made is not the truth."

THE COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN.

The Committee of Fifteen will meet this afternoon, in the United Charities Building, and it is expected that when it adjourns interesting, if not startling, announcements of the developments of its plans will be made.

It was stated yesterday that the Committee of Public Morality, of which Felix Adler is the head, and the University Settlement Society have turned over to the Committee of Fifteen all the evidence in their hands, and that the next step of the committee will be to take up the lawbreakers' combine and reach the men at the top. It was stated that two prominent gamblers appeared before the representatives of the committee yesterday and exposed the entire system of police assessment.

District Attorney Philbin announced yesterday that M. Warley Platzek of the Committee of Five had submitted to Assistant District Attorney Schurman evidence gathered by that committee, which it wants presented to the Grand Jury. Mr. Schurman is engaged in investigating the evidence submitted and looking up the laws relating to it. He will report to the District Attorney in a few days.

John C. Sheehan and Chief of Detectives George Titus were in conference with Mr. Philbin yesterday. Mr. Sheehan, said the District Attorney, simply called to pay his respects. Capt. Titus was present to talk over a case having no connection with the vice crusade in which the public prosecutor is interested.

THE HERLIHY HEARING.

James B. Reynolds Testifies to Conditions in the "Red Light" District.

The entire time at the hearing in the trial of Capt. John D. Herlihy at Police Headquarters yesterday was occupied by the examination of James B. Reynolds of the University Settlement. In answer to Mr. Olcott's question, Mr. Reynolds said that he first saw Capt. Herlihy in October, 1899.

"I told him that the conditions were unfortunate and injurious," he said, "and Capt. Herlihy told me that he was not in sympathy with the attempts of aristocrats from up-town to improve our district." Capt. Herlihy, said the witness, answered that the women had to live somewhere, and he did not see any good in driving them from one place to another.

Mr. Reynolds then testified that the women at several houses in the neighborhood often asked him to "come in." A boy took the place of the women at 27 Rivington Street early in March.

"Did the boy ever speak to you?"

"Frequently."

"What did he say to you?"

"He asked me to come in, and said that they had girls there."

A policeman, Mr. Reynolds said, was within twenty or thirty feet.

In the cross-examination, Mr. Grant asked the witness if he had ever made complaint to Capt. Herlihy, and Mr. Reynolds said he had complained of push-carts. He said that from his conversation with Capt. Herlihy, he was convinced that there was no use of making complaint to him.

Mr. Grant got the witness to tell where he had lived from the time he was two years old, and it was brought out that he had been abroad four years in the interest of the Young Men's Christian Association. Mr. Reynolds said that he lived in the Latin Quarter in Paris.

"Have you ever seen things in New York as bad as in London or Paris?", asked Mr. Grant.

"I think so."

Mr. Reynolds said that he had gone through the district at the suggestion of President York, on whom he called on Jan. 6, 1900.

Asked if anything was then said regarding charges against Capt. Herlihy, he answered negatively.

The hearing will be continued this afternoon.

OCTOGENARIAN TWIN DEAD.

Demise of Augustus Lyons Smith Ends a Long Life of Innocent Companionship.

A companionship between twin brothers that has been of the closest character for a lifetime was ended yesterday by the death of Augustus Lyons Smith at his home, 17 East Thirty-eighth Street. Mr. Smith was over eighty years old. For many years he had been feeble, and his brother, William Augustus Smith, who lived with him, has also been in failing health. Two weeks ago Augustus Lyons Smith was stricken with pneumonia, which caused his death. The brother was prostrated last night and could not be seen.

The two men had lived a retired life for many years. A nurse has been constantly in attendance on them. Neither went out without the other.

For many years they held a pew in the Dutch Reformed Church, where they worshipped together. It was related at the house last night that the two men had a common bank account, against which each drew at will. Each of them was known familiarly as "Uncle William Augustus."

They usually left the city together during the Summer months, returning early in the Fall. Since they returned last October they had not gone out at all. Besides his brother, a nephew, Edward P. Lentilhon, survives him. Neither was ever married.

GAMBLERS' SCHEDULE FOR PROTECTION

The New York Times Showed It Was Over $3,000,000 a Year.

Rates Were Fixed by a Commission and Applications to Do Business Regularly Passed Upon.

The official statement made on Monday by Chairman Nixon of the Tammany Committee of Five that there exists a combine for the levying of blackmail on gamblers contained nothing that is new to those who have been following the course of events in police circles for the past year. In his statement Mr. Nixon said:

"There is an organization of men known as the 'combine' that is organized for systematic blackmail, and they cloak their workings by pretending to be paying Tammany Hall the money they collect for the protection they are supposed to furnish in its name. * * *

"From the first to the fifth of each month men may be seen going to the house of the man who receives this money to pay their portions. * * *

"The men who wish to open places know whom to see, and, having found that certain men who act in defiance of the 'combine's' orders are given short shrift, are naturally inclined to believe that these men do collect this money on account of Tammany Hall, and that, if matters reach a climax, this organization will protect them.

"This accounts for the almost defiant attitude of the gamblers, who thought the money really went higher up, and the instant obedience of those in the ring, who, with guilty consciences, if they have any consciences, knew that no protection could be obtained."

THE LEVY FOR PROTECTION.

On March 9, 1900, THE NEW YORK TIMES published a story of which the following is an epitome:

"More than $3,095,000 is paid every year by the gambling house keepers of this city for the protection afforded them by the police and other powers of the City Government. THE NEW YORK TIMES has facts in its possession which makes this an absolute certainty.

"This enormous amount of money is handled by what is known among gamblers as the 'Gambling Commission,' which is composed of a Commissioner who is at the head of one of the city departments, two State Senators, and the dictator of the poolroom syndicate of this city, who was before the Mazet committee, and who is allied to Tammany Hall.

"This so-called commission meets weekly in the apartments of one of its members not far from Forty-seventh Street and Broadway. The money is not only apportioned at these conferences, but licenses to run gambling houses are virtually issued there.

"Not a gambling house is running in this city to-day that is not known to this board, and not a place is running that does not pay its tax to this board. Its system is as complete as any branch of the City Government. There are no leaks and no unauthorized place can run for twenty-four hours without either putting up or shutting up.

"The requisite for opening a gambling house, large or small, and this includes poolrooms, is to go to the Captain of the precinct. The request to be allowed to open is accompanied by the 'initiation' or 'introduction' fee of $300, and the Captain tells the applicant that his case will be acted on in time.

"A week later the applicant is notified as to his fate. If he cannot open, and cases of this kind are rare, his initiation fee is returned to him. The matter has in the meantime been reported to the Gambling Commission, and the case passed on much as a Board of Governors passes upon the application of a man for club membership.

"If the application is favorably passed upon it is not done without an investigation, but that investigation tends for the most part to finding out the ability of the would-be member to pay his dues promptly, and whether he is a person who is to be relied upon. The Captain of the precinct is responsible for that part of the matter. For his work therein he is allowed to retain the initiation fee.

"From that time on little that comes from gaming crib sticks to the Captain's fingers. There are regularly organized collectors, among them ward men and Inspectors, and there is not much leakage before the money finally lands in the Gambling Commission's hands. The amount that lands there is made up as follows:

"Poolrooms, 400, at $300 per month, $120,000; per year, $1,440,000.

"Crap games, 500, at $150 per month, $75,000; per year, $900,000.

"Gambling houses, 200, at $150 per month, $30,000; per year, $360,000.

"Gambling houses, large, 20, at $1,000 per month, $20,000; per year, $240,000.

"Envelope games, 50, at $50 a month, $2,500; per year, $30,000.

"Policy, $125,000.

The story then goes on to tell how the tax is fixed and regulated, the patronage of the houses and their revenue fixing the amount of the tax. It is stated that the information upon which the statements in the story are based comes from the gamblers themselves, and that their information is given entirely as the result of self-interest.

The revelations came as the result of a complaint on the part of the gamblers, who contended that the Gambling Commission in its desire to make all it could in as short a time as possible, was licensing the gambling houses indiscriminately, and therefore, the business was to a large extent being ruined through too much competition. The article states further:

HOW THE SYSTEM WORKS.

"A gambler who knows every ramification of the 'protection' business said yesterday that there were in the greater city more than 2,000 illegal 'joints' which pay for non-molestation. Every one of these was required to put up an initiation fee of $300 before it could open. This part of the plunder goes to the Police Captain and his henchmen, so that in the past three years over $600,000 has been paid to this part of the protection combination."

It was also pointed out in the article, in an interview with President York of the Police Board, that THE NEW YORK TIMES had some time before given in its columns a list of more than 100 poolrooms which its reporters had visited, a copy of which had been given to Chief of Police Devery, who said he would investigate it.

As a result of THE TIMES'S exposure every poolroom and gambling house in New York closed its doors at 2 o'clock on Saturday, March 10, about thirty-six hours after the publication in THE TIMES. On March 11, in stating this fact, THE TIMES said:

"The order to close followed the conference held in Tammany Hall yesterday between John F. Carroll, Mr. Croker's lieutenant; Police Commissioner Sexton, and Chief of Police Devery.

"The moving spirit in the closing of the poolrooms is James A. Mahoney, who is at the head of the poolroom syndicate in this city, and with whom are allied some of the leading men in Tammany Hall."

On the subject of extra assessments, Mr. Nixon, in his report, has the following to say:

"Learning that a number of extra assessments, aggregating about $1,000 each, were levied upon the gambling houses and poolrooms under the guise of political assessments just before the last election, I take this occasion to say that this money was not paid to Tammany Hall, and that the men who paid it were swindled by those who levied it; and I make this statement upon the authority of the Chairman of the Finance Committee and the Treasurer of Tammany Hall."

DECEIVED THE GAMBLERS.

On Friday, July 20, 1900, THE NEW YORK TIMES published a story telling how one of the members of the Gambling Commission—a State Senator—emboldened by the success of the scheme, branched out on his own account, and assessed the poolroom keepers of New York $143,850. His excuse for going into business on his own account was simply that he needed the money, and the scheme was the outcome of what was known among the poolroom keeping fraternity as the "extra assessment racket," which was worked at the last session of the Legislature. It followed the introduction of a bill making it a misdemeanor for any telegraph or telephone company doing business in the State to furnish the keepers of poolrooms or other gambling resorts any information concerning racing. The bill passed the House, and it was while it was in the Senate for concurrent action that the State Senator made his strike. He told the poolroom keepers that the bill would be pushed to a passage unless there was plenty of obstructive material. The agent [illegible] Secretary.

of the Senator who knew where every poolroom in the city was located—the Senator could have found them himself with his eyes shut—did a little rapid figuring, and the poolroom keepers were told that $350 from each of them would furnish about obstruction enough.

It was of course stated by the agents of the Senator that this money was to go to Albany, and when the poolroom keepers protested that they had already paid their assessments to the Gambling Commission they were told that the commission had given the Senator carte blanche to go ahead with this matter on his own hook. They were even told that the Senator was forced to do what he was doing because unless he did the other Senators would take the bit in their teeth and that the Gambling Commission did not propose to stand for the ruining of its business as well as that of the poolroom keepers. There were 411 poolrooms in the city at this time, and after each of them had given up the account looked like this:

411 poolrooms at $350 each.....$143,850

The story came out when some of the poolroom keepers took certain liberties with some State Senators on the strength of the share of the pool that the latter were supposed to have received. When the defrauded lawmakers cast about for a chance to get even they found that the Senator in question had taken a trip to Europe for his health. When he returned some time later the very men whom he had thus fleeced were forced to give him a reusing welcome as a member of a club to which they all belonged.

FIFTY-EIGHT NEW SERGEANTS.

Chief Devery Attends Police Board Meeting Without Invitation.

The Police Board yesterday promoted fifty-eight Roundsmen to be Sergeants. The Commissioners took no action regarding Chief Devery, nor did the question of his retirement come up.

Chief Devery, without invitation, and seemingly to demonstrate his rights under the charter, entered the board room while the session was in progress. It was the first time the Chief had attended a board meeting since he walked out, flushed and angry, after the board had ordered him to prefer charges against Capt. Herlihy and Inspector Cross, nearly two months ago. There were persistent rumors that Chief Devery would either resign or be retired, although the Commissioners denied that the question would even come up.

President York said he did not know the purpose of the Chief's visit.

"Was he asked to attend the meeting?" the President was asked.

"No."

"Was he consulted about any matters?"

"He was not."

"Was anything at all said about his resigning or his being retained?"

"I cannot talk any more on the subject," said President York as he walked away.

Commissioner Hess admitted that the Chief had attended the meeting without invitation.

"I don't know what he came for," said Mr. Hess. "Not a word was said about his retirement, and he made no suggestions about the promotions."

"I guess he just wanted to come in," said Commissioner Sexton. "He had a right to be there."

Commissioner Abell, who sat beside the Chief while he was at the meeting, refused to reply to a single question regarding the visit. "Go ask him," said Mr. Abell.

Chief Clerk Kip was given the extraordinary direction to transmit at once to Chief Devery the notification of the appointments of the new Sergeants, and not to make them public until after he had been notified.

CAPT. ALLAIRE'S POSITION.

Disqualified Under Court's Decision from Promotion in the Police Service.

Justice Bischoff, in the Supreme Court, yesterday denied the writ of mandamus asked by Capt. Anthony J. Allaire of the Police Department to compel the Municipal Civil Service Commission and Dr. Augustus H. Brown to certify that he was physically fit to perform the duties of Police Inspector. Capt. Allaire was a candidate for the position of Inspector when Capts. Kane and Druhan were appointed. Dr. Brown gave the Captain a rating of "zero" on his physical examination.

The Captain asserted he had been discriminated against in that, although he was over seventy years old and a veteran of the civil war, he was put through a course of athletic exercise which was not required of the other candidates. The Justice holds that the physical examination was within the rules, and that Capt. Allaire is now permanently disqualified from any higher position in the department.

REFORMS IN MISSISSIPPI.

Grand Jury Is Asked to Investigate Abuse of Convicts and Indict Bucket Shop Keepers.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 8.—In his charge to the Grand Jury in the Criminal Court at Meridian, Miss., yesterday, Judge G. Q. Hall took up the reports of ill treatment of county convicts. The Court said that his attention had been called to stories that for months past convicts on the county roads had been most inhumanly beaten. He instructed the Grand Jury to make a rigid investigation into these charges and indict every man who might have been guilty of acts of cruelty.

Judge Hall said he had observed officially that there was a practice of collecting civil debts by criminal procedure. A poor white man or negro who could not pay a creditor was arrested on some trumped-up criminal charge and frightened into signing a contract to work from six months to two years, or until the original debt and court costs were paid. It was virtually involuntary bondage, a system of slavery, and the parties to the transaction were guilty of penitentiary offenses and should be indicted and convicted.

Judge Hall also instructed the Grand Jury to indict the proprietors of the Meridian bucket shop, and to stop the traffic in lottery tickets.

TO ABOLISH WHIPPING POST.

Bill to Accomplish This Will Be Introduced in Delaware.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 8.—A movement will be made to abolish the whipping post and pillory as punishment in this State. Senator S. M. Knox of this city has a bill which he will introduce in the State Senate calling for the abolition of corporal punishment. The bill will be accompanied by a petition of 100 names. The church associations of the city are considering the matter, and Chief Justice Lore is going to make an address on the subject to them.

The Trustees of the new county Workhouse are said to be opposed to continuing the post. It is doubtful, however, whether the bill will go through, as the people of the lower counties, and especially of the rural districts, believe that the very small percentage of burglaries and similar offenses in the State is due to the whipping post, and every one here knows that the application of the lash is merely formal, but serves to scare the criminals.

HILL MEN WIN OUT.

Obtain Control of the Monroe County General Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, Jan. 8.—David B. Hill's lieutenants made a clean sweep of the offices in the Monroe County General Committee, which organized to-day. At the primaries last August, at which delegates to the State Convention were elected, the Croker men made a hard fight to obtain control of the General Committee for the coming year in order to dictate the municipal nomination to be made next Fall. William H. Tracy and George Raines were the local Croker leaders, and ex-Mayor Warner, a former Hill man, had cast in his lot with the Crokerites in the hope of being renominated for Mayor.

The County Committee is composed of the Chairmen of the Ward and Town Committees of Rochester and the towns of Monroe County. Both factions have for weeks been canvassing the county to secure a majority, but the Hill forces were nearly everywhere successful, so that just before the meeting the Crokerites abandoned the fight. The line-up between the factions in the full committee is said to be twenty-nine Hill men and ten Croker-Murphy men. [illegible] Page was chosen Chairman and [illegible] Secretary.

BRYAN SPEAKS IN CHICAGO

Party, He Says, Was Never in Better Fighting Trim than To-day.

THE ISSUES OF THE FUTURE

Practically Same as Those of the Past—Talks on Defeat and Reorganization—No Room for Deserters.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—William J. Bryan was the guest of honor at the annual banquet of the Chicago Bryan League, which was held to-night at the Sherman House. Some of the preliminary addresses were of considerable length, and it was after midnight before Mr. Bryan, who had the last place on the programme, rose to make his address. He spoke, in part, as follows:

"This is the fifth consecutive Jackson Day banquet which I have celebrated with this club, and I appreciate the honor which the members have done me in giving my name to the club, and am grateful for the support which they have given to my candidacy in two campaigns. I take this opportunity, however, to express the hope that this club and others which have borne my name will substitute for my name the name of some Democratic saint, or a name descriptive of principles rather than men.

"I am now a private citizen, with excellent prospects of remaining such. I intend to continue actively in the discussion of public questions, and do not desire to be embarrassed by being placed in the attitude of a candidate for any office. In selecting journalism as the best field for usefulness, I am aware that I am placing myself in the position where I can give more aid to others than to myself, but the field is chosen deliberately, because I am more interested in the promulgation of Democratic principles than I am in enjoying any honors which my countrymen can beatow.

"The Democratic Party was never in better fighting condition than it is to-day, and I rejoice that in the course of nature I have many years in which to participate in the unending struggle between human rights and the usurpations of greed. Our party stands for well-defined and positive policies, and is prepared to wage an aggressive warfare against the plutocratic tendencies of the evils against which Jefferson contended a century ago, and against which Jackson fought thirty years later.

"It is not necessary to discuss the subject of reorganization further than to say that reorganization is an internal remedy, and that it cannot be applied externally. A person must be inside of the party before he can participate in the party management.

"Some seem to think that they can be outside for voting purposes and inside for purposes of reorganization. If a man allows his wife to obtain a divorce from him on the ground of failure to support, desertion, or infidelity, he must remarry her before the public will pay any attention to his expressions of solicitude for her welfare, and so those who have lost their party standing because of their desertion of the party candidates and unfaithfulness to Democratic doctrines, as defined by legitimate authority, must reunite with the party before any attention will be paid to their pretensions of interest.

"Those who are within the party lines have a right to a voice in the making of the platform, and are entitled to make such change in the organization or machinery of the party as they please, but honesty and good faith require that any desired change shall be openly proposed and fairly presented. Party organizations are framed for party governments, and derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. Party platforms are of no value unless they reflect the purpose of and the policy desired by a majority of those who belong to the party.

"The defeat which the party recently suffered ought not to discourage any one who believes in the principles set forth in the Kansas City platform, for if those principles were right when the platform was written and when they were indorsed by nearly six millions and a half of voters, they are right still.

"The Democratic Party has been defeated before, but defeat has neither destroyed its hope nor its tenets. In 1872 the defeat was overwhelming, and yet we won in 1876. In 1880 we thought that the people would rebuke Tilden four years before, but we were doomed to disappointment. We won in 1884 and lost in 1888. We won in 1892 and lost in 1896 and 1900. If any one is inclined to attribute recent defeats to the platforms adopted or to the organizations in charge of the fight let him remember that the defeat of 1886 came at the close of an Administration entirely satisfactory to those who are most anxious to reorganize the party, and that the defeat in 1894, which occurred under a similar Administration was more disastrous than any that has taken place since.

"No one can foresee the conditions which our party must meet, but we can face the future with the determination to apply Democratic principles to every emergency and to make the party a faithful exponent of the views of those who believe in equal rights to all and special privileges to none.

"Whether the money question will figure prominently in future campaigns will depend upon circumstances, which no one can measure with certainty. What is desired is a sufficient quantity of money to keep pace with the demand for money. If an unexpected and unpromised increase in the output of gold restores the level of prices and protects the producers of wealth from the evils of an appreciating dollar, those who have labored for bimetallism will rejoice more heartily than the financiers who advocated the gold standard at a time when gold was scarce and the dollar was becoming dearer.

"Monopolies will ultimately become so hurtful that the Republicans no longer will be able to defend them. Even to-day their defense is more secret than open. A colonial policy when put into full operation will prove so repugnant to American principles that it must finally be repudiated by the American people. If in the cases now pending the court holds that the Constitution follows the flag, a large portion of the Republican Party will oppose the retention of the Philippine Islands. If, on the contrary, the court holds that a President and Congress can govern peoples without regard to the restrictions of the Constitution, many Republicans will be able to realize what imperialism means.

"But if fate decrees a change in the ideas and ideals of our Nation, and we are to return to the brute force doctrine upon which empires rest, our struggle will still have answered a purpose, and the work of our party will live in history and inspire the lovers of liberty in future years, when mankind again takes up the fight for the principles of self-government.

"We are advocating truths that cannot die, and we can afford to share in temporary reverses that may come to them. The love of freedom will live while the human race endures, and those who suffer for the right will receive their reward in history even if their eyes do not behold the victory.

"In defeat those who support the principles set forth in the Declaration of Independence can take courage from the heroism manifested by those in South Africa who are giving their lives in defense of the same doctrines. Cronje suffers in loneliness on St. Helena, but his name will live in poetry and song when the name of Roberts is forgotten, and Krüger will wear a crown of deathless fame where Kings and Emperors are known no more."

Southworth Never a Naval Officer.

Accounts of the death of Alvan S. Southworth published yesterday stated that he was a graduate of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. He entered the institution in 1863, but left long before the completion of his course, and never served as an officer of the navy.

BAR ASSOCIATION MEETS

Annual Election Harmonious, with Only One Ticket.

President John E. Parsons's Donation to the Library $10,000—Nine Candidates Admitted.

What was expected to be a contested annual election of the New York Association of the bar last night, with two tickets in the field, turned out a unanimous affair, with only one ticket, and that the regular one.

At the last meeting of the association there was a spirited contest over the Nominating Committee, there being two sets in the field. The younger members took umbrage at the attitude of the association during the recent political campaign relative to judicial candidates, and more particularly at the action taken regarding the appointment of John R. Hazel to the Federal bench in the Western District of New York.

The regular or older element won out in the Nominating Committee, and the younger element permitted the election to go by default. The ticket elected last night places in control of the Bar Association the same element that has controlled it for some years past.

The officers for the ensuing year are:

President—John E. Parsons.
Vice Presidents—Adrian H. Joline, Hamilton Odell, Peter B. Olney, John M. Scribner, and James M. Varnum.
Recording Secretary—Silas H. Brownell.
Corresponding Secretary—B. Aymar Sands.
Treasurer—S. Sidney Smith.
Executive Committee—Class of 1903—Charles A. Gardiner, William H. Hamilton, Arthur H. Masten, Charles E. Rushmore, and Egerton L. Winthrop, Jr.
Executive Committee, to fill vacancy in class of 1901—James McKeen.
Executive Committee, to fill vacancy in Class of 1902—John McLean Nash.
Committee on Admissions, to fill vacancy in Class of 1902—A. Leo Everett.

George Zabriskie read the annual report of the Executive Committee, which declares that the association finances are in excellent condition; that the membership totals 1,663, and that there are 52,154 volumes in the library.

The Executive Committee announced that President John E. Parsons gave to the association the sum of $10,000 for the uses of the library. Other gifts, such as portraits of prominent members and those who have passed away, were reported.

It was moved and adopted that a committee of 100 members be delegated by President Parsons to attend the one hundredth anniversary of the assumption of the bench of the United States Supreme Court by Justice Marshall. The Court of Appeals will conduct the ceremonies at Albany on Feb. 4, and Judge Dillon of this city has been chosen the orator of the occasion.

The annual report of the Treasurer shows the association to be in a flourishing condition. A mortgage of $10,500 has been paid off.

The report of the Committee on Admissions shows that 71 candidates came before them. Of that number 67 were recommended for admission, three were withdrawn and one was laid over. The following candidates were voted on and admitted last night: Brainard Avery, James F. O'Beirne, S. Vilas Beckwith, Otto C. Wiegrum, Jr., Charles Montague Gilpin, Henry A. Wise, John Griffin Carlisle, William Mason Smith, and Theodore M. Hill.

TWENTY-SIX DEAD IN ROCHESTER ASYLUM FIRE

Terrible Scenes About the Burning Building Yesterday.

A Mysterious Explosion the Apparent Cause of the Disaster—Fire Escape System Was Bad.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 8.—Twenty-eight dead bodies lie at the morgue and twelve persons, more or less seriously injured, lie at the different hospitals in the city to-night as a result of the terrible holocaust which early this morning occurred at the Rochester Orphan Asylum. Of the dead, twenty-six were children of both sexes, ranging in age from two or fourteen years, while the remaining two were adults.

It was but a few minutes after 1 o'clock when a nurse in the hospital, Miss Cline, smelled smoke. She immediately notified another nurse, Miss Vallient, and the latter reported the matter to the Matron. The smoke was speedily located in the boiler-room, and word was sent to Police Headquarters. All the fire apparatus was rushed to the burning building, but before the first engine arrived the neighbors for blocks around had arrived and were doing their best to rescue the inmates.

Shortly after the fire was located in the boiler room a terrific explosion took place near the west end of the connecting wing, completely blowing out the lower part, thereby cutting off the escape of the children in the east end of the building. Later it was found that the boiler had blown up.

The explosion, though of great force, was not loud enough to awake the sleeping nurses, but when the smoke began to pour into the east wing a terrible chorus of cries and groans arose. It was impossible to see anything, and as the thick smoke filled the air the scene became one of indescribable confusion.

Two young men, W. Clark and F. Young, were coming down Plymouth Avenue when they saw the smoke issuing from the building. Clark immediately ran to Box No. 25, corner of Plymouth Avenue and Glasgow Street, and sent in an alarm. Then he and his companion ran up the fire escape to the roof of the building furthest away from the fire and had just reached that point when the explosion occurred.

When the firemen arrived on the scene their attention was first turned to the inmates in the hospital ward, in the west wing, which is the older section of the institution. The floor next to the top was in charge of Miss Brad. With the flames leaping all around her, it seemed impossible to escape. She did, however, but was so seriously injured by falling that she will not live. It was stated by the Matron, Miss Dinehart, that there were seventy-five girls in the west wing.

The work of rescue and attempted rescue was taken up by many hands, volunteers as well as firemen, and in many cases was carried on in a manner that was nothing less than heroic, but the flames gained such rapid headway and spread with such incredible speed that it was beyond human effort to prevent the loss of life.

Ambulances from all of the hospitals were on the ground almost as soon as the fire companies, and the houses of those residing in the neighborhood were thrown open to receive the little waifs who were dragged and carried from the asylum. The scenes at and near the asylum were beyond description. The smoke poured out from every window, and screams and frantic cries could be heard coming from the imprisoned inmates. The long ladders were run up, and, plunging into the stifling smoke, fireman after fireman came sliding down the ladders, bearing inanimate forms in their arms. Most of the children and adults carried from the burning building were unconscious from the effects of the thick smoke.

Crazed women were running about trying to find out whether certain little ones had been taken from the building in safety, while others were looking for their friends. All who were rescued had nothing on but the night clothing. Policemen, citizens, and firemen united in the work of rescue. Four little children had been forgotten on the fourth floor until a woman screamed out that they had been left behind. Instantly a dozen volunteers started for the stairway. Two were allowed to go to the rescue, and in a moment—it seemed ages—they returned with the babes in their arms. A cheer went up from the crowd, which was hushed as the children were seen to be unconscious.

In the midst of the confusion and in the dim light it was impossible to see many of the happenings that were later reported. A most dramatic incident was the fall of a fireman, Morris Keating, who went up to the roof on a ladder to rescue women and children. Just as he reached the top a stream of water was turned on him to keep away the flames, but it had the effect to confuse the man. He reached for a woman, and the latter jumped for his arms. Suddenly the man lost his hold on the ladder. The crowd groaned as the fireman fell with the woman to the ground. The woman was killed outright and the fireman was so seriously injured that he may die. The roof was covered with children who had escaped through the scuttle from the upper rooms, and the firemen were kept busy carrying them down.

When it became apparent the fire was not being subdued with the apparatus already on the scene, a general alarm was sent out, bringing out the remainder of the department. The fire was fought from every available point, but, in spite of that, the building was almost completely destroyed before the blaze was finally under control.

Miss F. M. Hibbard, who had charge of twenty-three children on the third floor in the main building, said this morning:

"I was awakened by the cries of the children. I knew that the building was on fire, as did all the children. As quickly as possible we all made our way to the roof of the building, escape in any other direction being impossible.

"Already the firemen had their ladders to the roof of the building, and quickly the children were carried down. After most of them had been rescued, the heat became so intense that to save myself I slid down a post leading from the roof to the ground." Miss Hibbard was terribly burned about the face and body. The flesh on her face was hanging in big patches, and blisters had formed on the exposed portions of her body.

The loss on the building is estimated at $10,000. The fire spread throughout more than half of the asylum, but the firemen succeeded in keeping the walls intact. There was an insurance of $30,000 on the building.

The theory that the fire started from an explosion of the boiler does not seem to be generally accepted. Engineer W. A. Mosher stated to-day that he left the building at 8 o'clock last evening, and at that time everything was in order. He banked the fires in the boiler. The steam pressure carried was at no time higher than forty pounds, and at night it was allowed to run down. He gave as his opinion that the fire must have originated through the medium of a gas pipe springing a leak, filling the boiler room, under the Potter Memorial, with the escaping gas, until it reached the fires of the boiler, and that this caused the explosion and sent the fire through the building. This theory, which is generally accepted, would seem a plausible one, as the rapidity with which the fire spread would indicate an origin of this kind.

There was a joint meeting of the Board of Managers and the Trustees of the asylum in City Assessor Pond's office to-day. The meeting was hurriedly called, but the Assessor's large room was filled to the doors with members of the board and those interested in the institution. While all sorts of excuses were put forward for the disaster, there was unanimity in conceding that the managers had been derelict, in that there had not been a better and more complete system of fire-escapes provided. One —Thomas C. Montgomery—frankly expressed the opinion that the managers had been negligent, in that they did not employ a night watchman at the asylum and that the building was not patrolled nightly.

Deaths at Another Rochester Fire.

ROCHESTER, Jan. 8.—The nitrate building of the Eastman Kodak Works, West Side Boulevard, was destroyed by fire shortly before the fire in the orphan asylum was discovered last night. Two firemen were killed by the fumes of burning chemicals, and one other was so seriously injured that he will probably die.

Kindergarten Association Benefits.

A piano recital for the benefit of the New York Kindergarten Association will be given at Sherry's this afternoon at 3 o'clock, by Harold Bauer. An author's reading by Mrs. George C. Riggs, (Kate Douglas Wiggin,) including selections from unpublished stories, will be given at the home of Mrs. H. F. Dimock, 25 East Sixtieth Street, on Thursday afternoon, Jan. 17, for the benefit of the same organization.

FRENCH BALL A GAY AFFAIR.

Police, However, Exercise Stern Control and Eject a Number of Men and Women.

The French ball opened at Madison Square Garden last night a little larger and a little gayer than in past years, but it was the same old gathering. The whole interior of the garden had been transformed so as to represent an actual scene in the Champs Elysées, and the night's pleasure opened with a series of grand tableaus and illuminated floats. Then there was quadrille dancing and the general dancing began at 11:30.

Attempts at disorder were promptly stopped by the force of policemen, whose blue uniforms were everywhere in evidence. They worked under the direction of Inspector Walter Thompson, and he was not in a mood to stand any nonsense. Some early attempts at high kicking resulted in the expulsion of three or four young women as a warning to others, and nine men who took their part, mildly enough, it seemed to the spectators, were also promptly thrown out of the building.

A man with a pronounced English accent, who had been partaking of the wine before the stream had fairly begun to flow, asked Inspector Thompson to get him a light for his cigar, and the little policeman resented it in fierce language. The man made an insulting remark, and the last seen of him he, too, was being hustled toward the door, with his high hat demolished about his ears.

By 1 o'clock this morning the fun was getting fast and wine was running freely in the supper room. At this hour polite parties who had come to view the spectacle from the boxes had pretty nearly all withdrawn and the dancers were assuming a greater sway.

LONG TRIP FOR A CHILD.

Little Beatrice Barnard, three years old, arrived in the city yesterday on her way from her home in Dallas, Texas, to her new home in the metropolis, where she is going to live with her grandfather, Gates H. Barnard, at 214 West One Hundred and Eighth Street. The little woman made the trip all alone in less than eight days and without the slightest difficulty.

Older residents of New York know Mr. Barnard as a wealthy retired liquor dealer. His only son, Gates H. Barnard, Jr., went to Dallas a number of years ago and settled on a ranch near that city. He died recently, leaving six children and an invalid wife. Little Beatrice was the youngest of the flock, and the grandfather wanted her to come and live with him. So the little girl was prepared for her long trip. A stateroom was engaged for her in the sleeper from Dallas to Chicago and another from Chicago to New York.

After all the long miles across Texas, Arkansas, Missouri, and Illinois had been traversed, the big conductor with the smoke streaks across his face pointed out to little Beatrice that she was in Chicago. Then she was bundled into a warm carriage, and with the Pullman officer and two of the women travelers was driven across town at dead of night and put on board another car. Then the men of the great railroads of the Southwest and those of the East exchanged greetings with this little charge, and Beatrice started on the last stage of her long journey. Over the last thousand miles of the trip women fairly fought for the privilege of acting as lady's maid to the littlest traveler, and when her grandfather met her at the Grand Central Station the little tourist was surrounded by a flock of admirers. They had combed her bangs and curled her ringlets, and she was just as ready to be kissed as she was when her mamma's tears fell upon her in the Dallas station so long ago and so far away.

Mr. Barnard's eyes filled with tears when he hugged his little girl. "I'd give my eyes for Beatrice," was all he would say as he drove away with her.

HENRY HART GETS HIS STOCK.

Syndicate Delivers 25,000 Third Avenue Railroad Shares to the ex-President.

Somewhere in a safe deposit vault in this city there are 25,000 shares of Third Avenue Railroad stock, the property of Henry Hart, ex-President of the line. It was collected yesterday from the members of the syndicate which just a year ago loaned Mr. Hart $2,500,000 on it. Mr. Hart redeemed his pledge through Albert J. Elias, who has been acting for him in the matter of getting his stock back.

Contrary to all expectations, even those of Mr. Elias himself, and particularly of Mr. Hart, the members of the syndicate were able yesterday to deliver the 25,000 shares, although it was known in the Street for some time that a number of the members of the syndicate were short of the stock. It was stated in many quarters yesterday that much of the stock turned over yesterday was borrowed, and that the shorts will have to stand another squeeze before they have finally got themselves out of the trouble connected with Mr. Hart's stock.

In spite of his years the builder of the Third Avenue Road came down town in a coach yesterday, and went up to Mr. Elias's office, where for several hours he sat signing checks and handling the stock which had held so much of financial sorrow for him. His intimate friends who saw him yesterday say that the old man was rejuvenated, and that he went through the details of the day's work without showing the slightest fatigue.

Mr. Elias did the actual work of collecting the stock. He went to each office with cash or a certified check and sent the stock back to his office as fast as he got it for Mr. Hart's inspection. When it had all been accumulated it was sent over to a safe deposit vault. The stock was divided in different portions among the members of the syndicate, the largest holding by any one person being 10,000 shares and the smallest 300 shares.

A number of banking houses on the Street yesterday stated that they had been asked to loan their Third Avenue stock. Whether they complied with the requests or not they refused to state. At any event there was none sold in the open market. Not a transaction was recorded in the Stock Exchange.

SAVED FROM BLAZING TUGBOAT.

Fire was discovered on the tugboat Nettie L. Tice, lying at the Lackawanna Railroad freight docks, Hoboken, at midnight, and before it was extinguished the boat was damaged $1,000. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin. Henry Tree, a deckhand, who was asleep in his berth, was overcome by smoke. He was unconscious, but was rescued by his brother, Milton Tree.

The crew of the Tice saved many lives at the great steamship fire of June 30 last, and the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, in recognition of their services, gave Capt. Gilkinson and each member of the crew a medal.

NEW YORK'S BIGGEST WOMAN DEAD.

Mrs. Anna Feld, forty-five years old, said to be New York's heaviest woman, who weighed 420 pounds, dropped dead in the street last evening near her home, at Eleventh Avenue and One Hundred and Eighty-seventh Street.

A mounted policeman saw the woman's body lying in the street. He asked some men who were near by to help him move the body. Among the men who volunteered was John Feld, the woman's husband. Death was caused by fatty degeneration of the heart.

Train Buried in a Snowslide.

Special to The New York Times.

BUENA VISTA, Col., Jan. 8.—A mixed train on the Colorado and Southern ran into a snow slide near the Alpine Pass tunnel at 8 o'clock last night, and, owing to the severe storms raging, cannot be reached. The train consists of one passenger coach and ten loaded freight cars. It is known that ten passengers were aboard. A portion of the track was carried away and part of the train is completely buried. Wrecking trains are endeavoring to reach the scene of the disaster, but will not be able to plow through to the tunnel before to-morrow morning.

$90,000 Verdict Reversed.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 8.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals here has reversed the decision of the lower court, which last year gave A. A. Woods, receiver of the New Orleans Sewerage Company, a verdict of $90,000 against the American Surety Company of New York, which carried a surety bond of $100,000 for the sewerage company. The latter failed to complete its contract, and the case will go back to the lower court for a rehearing.

BURGHER COMMITTEE ISSUES PEACE APPEAL

Says Only an Obstinate Minority Continues the War.

HARD WORDS FOR MR. STEYN.

He and De Wet Declared the Only Obstacles to Peace—Krueger Willing to Accept British Terms.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 8.—The Central Peace Committee at Kroonstad has issued a circular, in the course of which it says:

"The time has arrived for the inhabitants of the Orange River Colony to make an effort to save the country from further destruction. The country is literally a vast wilderness. The farmers, ruined and facing starvation, are obliged to go to the towns for protection, and huge refugee camps have been formed by the British for them. This misery is caused by an obstinate minority, who will not bow to the inevitable."

The circular points out that the British will never restore independence to the republics, and urges upon the burghers the duty of surrendering and accepting the terms offered. The recent Afrikander Congress at Worcester is criticised in the circular as "misleading the Boers and giving false impressions."

In conclusion, the committee says:

"The British Government is willing to settle matters in a way not ungenerous or humiliating to us. We appeal to you to appoint another congress and to nominate men of influence out of your list to visit Mr. Steyn and Gen. De Wet and to try to persuade them to accept the terms Great Britain offers.

"These two men are the only obstacles to peace. We ask you to believe us when we say that Mr. Krüger and the late Transvaal Government are willing and would already have accepted the British terms, but Mr. Steyn has refused to have anything to do with surrender.

"He has continued the war, and has encouraged the burghers with a hope that we would get European assistance. To-day he is cut off from all communication with the outside world. You know and we know how unfounded that hope is. It is your duty to assist us to make him understand this. We appeal to you to help us to end the unhappy state of affairs which is plunging everybody into poverty and despair. We appeal to you because we know you are able to assist us in the right manner."

The committee includes W. E. De Wet, late Assistant Chief Commandant; three members of the Volksraad, and two Justices of the Peace.

BOERS STILL ADVANCING.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 8.—It is reported that the Boers have reached Sutherland and are within twenty miles of the village of Piquetberg.

The country round Kimberley is being cleared of people, live stock, and foodstuffs. A commando of 150 looted a cattle farm seven miles from Kimberley.

It is reported that all residents of Vryburg who are unable to supply themselves with provisions for two months must be brought south.

LORD RAGLAN'S VIEWS.

Under Secretary for War Says British Will Commandeer Horses—Not Nervous About Cape Colony.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Lord Raglan, Under Secretary of State for War, who was interviewed yesterday regarding the serious trend of events in South Africa, the possibilities of peace, and the action the War Office is taking to mend matters, said:

"The condition of affairs in South Africa absolutely forbids prophesy. You cannot call it war, yet in some respects it is worse than war. It is well-nigh impossible to fight in the ordinary way against a people who have no uniforms. For a week, perhaps for a month, a Boer goes out to fight. Then he says, 'I am sick of this,' buries his gun, and becomes in all respects a peaceable farmer. Yet the very next week the spirit moves him, and he digs up his gun and rejoins his commando. It is terribly hard to deal equitably with such a character.

"The secret of the whole thing consists in horses. We have enough men there, but not enough mounted men. This is not due to the paucity of supply sent out, but to the difficulty of acclimatizing the animals. The trouble is that fresh horses have been sent up country before they were hardened to the climate.

"The army is getting 8,000 horses a month now, and we are going to begin to commandeer horses throughout the disturbed regions. One would think the Boers would prefer to get a fair price for their animals from the British to giving them up to Gen. De Wet for nothing. Personally, I believe we should have begun this plan before now.

"What with depriving the Boers of mounts and transforming all our men into mobile bodies, capable of pursuing detached commandoes, we trust the commandoes may be run to earth, although it is arduous work.

"I have just been talking to a man who has come from the Philippines, and he tells me the Americans have made practically little headway during two years' work there, so far as the suppression of detached bodies of the enemy is concerned. We face the same difficulties in South Africa, but over a vastly superior area, the extent of which cannot even be conceived by those who have not been there.

"We are not nervous over the possibilities of a serious rebellion in Cape Colony. Had arms been more plentiful there, the situation might have been more dangerous, but the scarcity of rifles and ammunition in the colony robs the disturbance of the gravity it might otherwise have had.

"You cannot expect to end such a war as this in a day. The disturbance in Burma continued for more than four years. I believe that, if the Boers now in the field knew the true state of affairs and were aware that the continuance of opposition could not possibly improve the terms offered to them, a majority would have sense enough to cease fighting.

"Meanwhile, you may be assured of the fact that the War Office is not guilty of inertia. Lord Kitchener is getting all he asks for. Lord Roberts has a perfectly free hand. What can be done is being done."

DEATH OF EUGENE OTTERBOURG.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Succumbs to Operation for Appendicitis.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Eugene Otterbourg died yesterday as the result of an operation for appendicitis. He was stricken on Christmas eve, after he had finished his report of the year's work of his office, and was taken to a private hospital, where an operation was performed. The patient never rallied, as his system was weakened by a severe sickness last Summer.

Mr. Otterbourg was born in this city about forty-nine years ago and was the son of the late Justice Marcus Otterbourg, a lawyer and Police Magistrate. While he was studying law the present Police Magistrate Flammer, then Justice Otterbourg's associate in office, appointed young Otterbourg a police court clerk, and he won the reputation of being the most accurate clerk in the courts. He started in business for himself as a trial lawyer about twenty years ago and was made counsel to the Building Department when it was organized, in 1892, and he served almost continuously since as head of the Law Division of the department. He belonged to many German-American societies.

He founded the firm of Otterbourg, Jencks & Spring and latterly he had law offices with Maurice Marks, the leader of the New Jersey Legislature, and enjoyed a good practice. He leaves a wife and three sons. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Transport Wright for the Philippines.

The transport Wright, which has been serving in Cuban waters, is to be withdrawn from that service, and will be sent to the Philippines this month to be used there for transportation of supplies.

GEO. W. HOWARD INDICTED

Alleged Bigamist's Bail Increased to $10,000.

Now an Inmate of Raymond Street Jail—Prosecutor Makes Open Charge of Intimidation.

George W. Howard, the electrician who married Helen P. Hawkes, the youngest daughter of Henry Hawkes, Superintendent of Construction in the Water Supply Department of Brooklyn, when, according to the police, he had a wife living in Cambridge, Mass., was indicted on a charge of bigamy yesterday by the Brooklyn Grand Jury. The indictment was found before the preliminary hearing in the Police Court had been held. Magistrate Brenner dismissed the case in his court as soon as Howard was arraigned, and the prisoner was at once rearrested and take before Judge Aspinall.

Assistant District Attorney Clarke asked that the prisoner's bail be increased, and charged his bondsman, William A. Price, President of the New York Coal and Navigation Company, with having attempted to intimidate witnesses in the case. At his request Judge Aspinall fixed the bail at $10,000. No one appeared to furnish this, and Howard is now locked up in the Raymond Street Jail.

When the case was called in the Adams Street Police Court yesterday morning the courtroom was packed to the doors. Howard was well dressed and composed, as usual.

"Please stand up straight, Mr. Howard," said Judge Aspinall, and Howard immediately straightened up. Through his counsel, John S. Bennett, he entered a plea of not guilty.

After the case had been concluded in court, Price, who had been Howard's bondsman, followed Henry Hawkes, the father of his Brooklyn wife, into the District Attorney's office, and began to talk to him there.

Hawkes edged away from him, and then turned to Mr. Clarke and talked to him for a few moments.

"Where is this man Price!" he cried.

"There he is," said Hawkes, pointing toward him.

"You get right out of this office!" said Clarke, turning to Price. "Let me tell you that if I hear any more of your threats I'll have you in the penitentiary in short order. I've heard enough of you and your friend Howard. Your friend has ruined the life of this old man, and I won't let you threaten him. I've heard of your boasts, and I won't hear any more of them. Get out of this office, and don't let me hear of your annoying any witnesses. If you do, you'll soon be in the penitentiary."

"Look here," said Price, "I won't—"

"Shut up!" shouted the District Attorney, going closer to him and getting very red in the face. "Get out of here, and don't bother me any more."

Price turned on his heel and walked out of the office. When questioned in regard to his conversation with Hawkes, he said that he had not tried to intimidate him.

"All that I said to him," he explained, "was that I did not want the case to go any further."

MARINE SOCIETY ELECTION.

Delehanty and Anti-Delehanty Factions Have Rival Candidates.

The rival Delehanty and anti-Delehanty factions of the Marine Society have announced the tickets which they will place in the field for officers of the society. The Presidency will be the only contested office, the Delehanty forces having decided upon Capt. Andrew W. Newbury for the position, while the rival faction has named Capt. W. G. Schackford, formerly sailing master of Howard Gould's yacht Niagara.

The other officers named by both factions are Capt. David A. Scribner, First Vice President; Capt. B. F. Marsh, Second Vice President; Capt. J. H. Chamberlain, Treasurer; Capt. T. M. Nichols, Secretary, and William A. Butler, counsel.

The President and First Vice President are ex officio members of the Board of Trustees of the Sailors' Snug Harbor, of which Commander Delehanty is the Governor. Capt. Newbury voted for the thousand-dollar appropriation that the society voted Commander Delehanty when he was transferred by Secretary Long.

SMALLPOX IN A LODGING HOUSE.

Late last night the Board of Health physicians were notified that a lodger in the Melrose Lodging House, One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street and Third Avenue, had the smallpox. At 1 o'clock this morning physicians were vaccinating the lodgers in the place.

Early in the evening Edward Muller, forty-three years old, one of the lodgers, went to the J. Hood Wright Hospital. He was sent to Harlem Hospital, as there was no room for him in the J. Hood Wright Hospital. At Harlem Hospital Dr. Slevin pronounced his ailment smallpox. The physicians in Harlem Hospital then vaccinated fifty-three patients and employes in and about the hospital.

Two other cases of smallpox were located by the Board of Health physicians yesterday. The victims are Emma Leuelch, eight months old, of 106 Beach Street, Borough of the Bronx, and William King, colored, of 206 West Sixty-second Street. Both patients were removed to North Brother Island.

FLAGG WANTED COFFEE FREE.

It Was Against the Restaurant Rules, and a Fight Followed the Demand.

William S. Flagg of 109 University Place, who appeared in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday afternoon as the complainant against a waiter in a restaurant on Sixth Avenue, who, he said, had assaulted him without provocation, was characterized by William Downs, the proprietor of the restaurant, as the meanest man on earth. Mr. Downs told the Magistrate that in the twenty years he had been in the restaurant business he had seen some men who deserved substantial recognition in the line of meanness, including a few who were entitled to National renown in the matter of diminutiveness of soul, but that in Flagg he had discovered a being who towered far above and dwarfed all others and should receive the grand prize and medal of honor for meanness.

"It is our custom," he said, "to give coffee free with all meals which amount to 25 cents or more up to 11 o'clock at night. Mr. Flagg has repeatedly demanded free coffee with meals that amounted to less than 25 cents, and even when he came in after 11 o'clock. He has been repeatedly told the rules, but he makes trouble every time he comes into the restaurant, and I have taken up much valuable time preventing him and the waiters coming to blows on the coffee question. I have seen him take butter off the plates of other customers after they left and put it in his pocket. Oh, how I wish he would stay out of the place!"

It was the coffee dispute that led up to Mr. Flagg's complaint. He added that he was willing that the Magistrate should not deal harshly with the waiter, but that when Roosevelt was Commissioner he had told him that it was the duty of every citizen to press complaints of this kind; hence he did so. The waiter was discharged.

WIRELESS SYSTEM IN HAWAII.

Available for Commercial Messages Jan. 3—Tests Were Satisfactory.

Special to The New York Times.

HONOLULU, Jan. 1.—Wireless telegraphy between Honolulu and the various islands of the Hawaiian group will be in practical working order next Thursday. The stations on the various islands have all been established, and the tests made show that everything is in perfect order. Next Thursday commercial messages will be received. The service will include all the islands except Kauai.

There are three stations, one at Honolulu, one at Hilo, and one on the island of Lanai. Lanai is the connecting station between the two others. By means of the cable messages can be sent from Lanai to the island of Maui. By this means and by telephone all the islands of the group will be in close communication.

West Point Cadets from Hawaii.

Special to The New York Times.

HONOLULU, Jan. 1.—A letter has come from Delegate Wilcox at Washington, to the Central Committee of the Independent Party asking the appointment of a committee to examine Hawaiian youths who wish to enter West Point Military Academy and to forward recommendations as to five youths, with photographs. Mr. Wilcox says Hawaii is entitled to two cadets. He added that recommendations must reach Washington by Dec. 23, but this was impossible, as the committee has referred the matter to a general convention of the party to be held on Jan. 7. There will be no trouble about the physique of the boys, as native or half-breed Hawaiians excel in all athletic sports.

ROUGH WEATHER VOYAGES.

With various portions of the superstructure giving evidences of the severity of gales and rough weather, the Hamburg-American steamship Cap Frio, which sailed from Hamburg Dec. 23, arrived yesterday. The heaviest gale encountered was on Jan. 4, when the vessel met a northwester. Tremendous seas broke over the forward part of the ship, carrying away a large section of the railing and causing other damage to various parts of the deck fittings. At one time the rudder chain parted, leaving the steamer helpless before the gale while the injury was being repaired. The Cap Frio brought over 26 cabin and 219 steerage passengers.

The steamship Chicago City, which sailed from Bristol Dec. 19, arrived yesterday, and also experienced a rough and uncomfortable passage, strong westerly gales, and snow and hail storms. The Lady Armstrong also reported the severest kind of weather.

News of the Missing Tillamook.

Special to The New York Times.

TACOMA, Washington, Jan. 8.—The first definite news of the missing steamship Tillamook was given out to-day by L. H. Gray, her former agent. James Dobkis, a miner, who returned from Valdes on the last voyage of the steamer Bertha, brought intelligence of the fact that the Tillamook was hemmed in by floating ice at Seldovia, at the mouth of Cook's Inlet, and that she was not likely to get out this Winter. Dobkis got his news at Valdes from an Indian who had just come down from Seldovia. The Tillamook is now six weeks overdue, and was believed to have been lost. She has aboard at least fifty passengers, who are probably as completely icebound as if they were engaged in a polar expedition.

Macy's Annex the Scene of Another Rousing Carpet Sale.

Habitual readers of our advertising, and vigilant buyers, are as familiar with the conditions and influences that create these exceptional values as we are ourselves. It's another periodical clearance of odds-and-ends, dropped styles, and patterns that haven't proved lively sellers. They are remnants only in a relative sense, as there is sufficient of each kind for a small room, and many contain enough for two large rooms. All are marked at surprisingly low prices. Compare our quotations with those exploited elsewhere—and then examine the Carpets. We'd ask for no better test.

$1.50 Wool Velvet Rugs at 98c.

Rich Wool Velvet Rugs—heavy all-wool fringe—beautiful Oriental patterns in brilliant, effective color combinations—size 2¼x4½ feet. The same fabric of which these Rugs are made is used in the form of Carpets by one of the largest and most prominent hotels in America. That fact should convince you of the wear-worth of these Rugs. They are sold elsewhere at $1.50; our price, 98c.

Bargains in Brass Beds—In Annex

The intense growth of the popularity of Brass Beds developed a grand business in them. The consequence is our stock has become broken. Some of the patterns are here in only one or two sizes, however, of others there are all sizes. We've decided to close them entirely out in order to have cleared spaces for the free display of the new full lines now being bought. That's why we offer handsome Brass Beds

At About One-Third Less Than Regular Prices

The above head lines contain the meat, the real essence of much that might be written regarding these bargains. But we cut the story short with the strong, condensed statement that tops this paragraph:

Brass Beds, extended bow foot ends, three sizes, $12.98.

Brass Beds, extended bow foot ends, extra high head ends, tee ball mountings, three patterns, but not all sizes in each, prices ranged from $24.99 to $29.99; choice at $19.99.

Porcelain-decorated Brass Beds, extended and bow foot ends, heavy 2-inch pillars, extra high head ends, enriched with porcelain in three colors, graceful and artistic designs, our prices ranged from $75.24 to $102.99; choice now from $57.54 to $87.34.

Mattresses and Springs.—ANNEX.

Cut prices for Mattresses. That stands for considerable when found in our advertising columns. Most of you know why. Simply because our regular prices—which are much less than others charge—furnish the basis for the cut. The mattresses sold here are made in our own factory—no guess-work, no say-so of somebody else. We know exactly of what they are made. No room for doubt, no chance for mistakes, no cause for excuse. Reduced rates that will give quick impulse to the January Mattress movement.

Mattresses made of best grade No. 1 mixed hair, full size, weighing forty pounds, covered with heaviest A. C. A. ticking, sold by us regularly at $14.98; special now at $9.98

Same in single size, reduced from $9.24 to $6.36.

Box Springs, for any size bed, covered with best quality A. C. A. ticking, sold by us regularly at $7.99; special now at $5.99.

All-iron Springs, heavy woven wire fabric, made to fit any bed, sold by us regularly at $3.49; special now at $2.49.

Housefurnishings—BASEMENT.

Gray Steel Enameled Ware is prominent among the Housefurnishings. We keep no "seconds." Could buy "seconds" at half the cost of firsts. That's true, notwithstanding the fact that others often charge more for the damaged kind than we do for the perfect. The blemishes are frequently almost imperceptible, but they are dangerous to health, just the same.

January Stock-righting Sale of ORIENTAL RUGS

There is no reason for reducing prices on Oriental Rugs at any time—except those that good store-keeping suggests. There are no changes in patterns to affect designs that are to be used for generations; and the greatest merit of Oriental Rugs is that neither soil nor wear affects them even in years of hard usage. But we are very rigid storekeepers, and even Oriental Rugs must meet the demand for new stocks every season.

To-day we offer more than a hundred large-size Oriental Rugs at a reduction that averages and those familiar with our regular prices know that they are lower than the prices elsewhere at all times. This makes the present savings very real and positive.

The lot includes India, Turkish, Persian, Ak-Hissar, Herez, Goravan, Kirman, Khandahar and Yap Rak Rugs—the following sizes and prices:

11¼ x 6¾ ft., was $38; now $20.
9 x 5¾ ft., was $42; now $31.
10½ x 6¾ ft., was $55; now $40.
11¾ x 7½ ft., was $68; now $48.
8½ x 7 ft., was $88; now $60.
13 x 9 ft., was $98; now $70.
14¾ x 10¾ ft., was $155; now $95.
14 x 11¾ ft., was $175; now $115.
14½ x 11¼ ft., was $215; now $145.
16¾ x 10¼ ft., was $228; now $150.
17¾ x 10 ft., was $268; now $185.
18 x 11¾ ft., was $295; now $195.

Also a large number of Shirvan, Guendje, Mosoul and Kazak Rugs, in smaller sizes, at quite liberal concessions in price.

The Part that LINENS Play

The Linen Store keeps pace with the rest of the Wanamaker organization in broad and far-reaching preparation for this January sale. On account of the magnitude and scope of our operations, the most responsible linen manufacturers of Ireland, Scotland and Germany gladly meet us more than half way. This makes such prices as the following possible throughout this splendid stock of Table Linen by the yard, Dinner Cloths, Napkins and Towels; prices that are particularly low for household linens that are pure flax in every fibre. Specifically excepted are the Turkish Bath Towels, which are all cotton. Read the details:

Table Cloths—
Bleached dinner cloths of the best Irish make.

Mercerized Cotton PORTIERES

Two hundred pairs of them, all this season's patterns. The manufacturer wished to concentrate his energies on the coming season's designs, which, though they may differ slightly from these, can hardly be handsomer. So he let us have them at a price which means to you a reduction of a quarter in their value. The color-combinations are varied and effective, the fabric rich and luxurious. This word of them:

$10.75 from $14.50—Two-toned effects in red, blue, gold, light blue and green; also green-and-gold, rose-and-green, silver-and-Nile green; corded front, edge and bottom.
$11.50, from $15—Two-toned effects in Nile-green-and-rose, green-and-gold, gold-and-gold, green-and-green, blue-and-blue, red-and-red, silver-and-Nile-green; corded front, edge and bottom.

Men's Overcoats

These are Raglans, the correct, swell, broad-shouldered, gracefully-hanging Raglan overcoats, that many try unsuccessfully to imitate. None of the skimpy, narrow, tired-looking affairs, that go parading about as Raglans, is to be found in this gathering. We made unusual preparations months ago with our stock of garments in this style, and you've kept us busy preparing ever since. In the recent breathing spell that you've allowed us, we freshened up a bit. Several excellent lines at $15, and to-day some brand new handsome styles at, $20. All correct Raglans, correctly made of correct fabrics.

Under-price Store Begins Again To-day

After a brief period of usefulness in another direction, the mission of this popular basement institution is resumed this morning. The splendid holiday business has created many new splendid offerings, the first of which to claim your attention are here noted:

Silk Waists at $2—
These are not perfectly new. All this season's goods, and all in good styles, but they're mussed a bit from too frequent and too fond handling. Various desirable colorings and black. Not many, and they'll not last long. For the values are from $3.75 to $4.50 and the price but $2.

50c Women's Vests at 38c—
Silky-looking vests, of ribbed luster cotton; low necks, silk taped; white, cream, pink, sky blue; neatly crocheted around necks and shoulder straps. 1,650 of these at this two-thirds price.

$2 Women's Umbrellas at $1—
These will not go on sale until 10 o'clock. There are only 200. Good and good-looking 26-inch umbrellas, in perfect condition, that usually sell for no less than $2. Now half price.

Edgings at Half Price—
The quality that sells regularly at 25c a yard is here at 12½c. Insertings that usually bring 10c, in this offering, at 5c.

Table Linen Remnants—
Two-thirds prices for all of these 250 remnants of both bleached and cream linens. 1½ to 4 yds. long.

Fancy Taffeta Ribbons—
We had these made to our special order. You'll not be able to find duplicates of any of the styles anywhere else at any price. They are in glacé effect, and have white corded stripes. In white, cream, yellow, pink, blue, cardinal, violet, light green and black. All 3¼ in. wide. All 15c a yard, though 20c would be much nearer the actual value.

25c Fancy Boxes at 13c—
They are glove, handkerchief and necktie boxes prettily painted in floral designs of violets, daisies and Kaiserblumen,—all imported. All new for the holiday selling, but showing slight signs of handling.

60c Bath Mats at 35c—
One hundred dozen of an extra good quality of Turkish Bath Mats are offered at this little-more-than-half price. Very large; unusually heavy; 8 colorings.

Calendars Reduced again in Price
Our first prices were much below those of the publishers. Then we cut them in half. Now those half prices are cut to one-third. That would bring the prices of these down to one-sixth. A countenful of handsome specimens this morning.

The January Sale of Parlor FURNITURE

This is an extremely particular Furniture Store. We are not only careful in the selection of artistic furniture, but samples must be bright and fresh; so we are determined to hurry away these sample parlor suites and other pieces from our floors, no matter how costly the change may be. Of course you won't notice defects or damage to these goods—the object of this clearance is to get new owners before the samples receive any harm.

The entire collection is of a high character—shapes, styles, upholsterings, all are new, refined, artistic; made up in the manner that assures years of service. We will lose profits on a vast amount of business; but it will make this a better furniture store, and give you good reason to remember Wanamaker's when you have furniture to buy. Enough reason for us, and most profitable reason for you.

These added hints of the furniture and the new prices:

The CHINA SALE

We're selling almost as much China and Bric-a-Brac as we did before the holidays. That's natural. Such opportunities as this sale offers are of large importance to the tasteful housekeeper who is thrifty as well. The china is of a high character; the bric-a-brac is artistic and beautiful; yet prices average

A Third Under Value

Dinnerware—
Many other sorts; but particular word to-day of fine English Porcelain, enameled, and trimmed with gold, in odd pieces or by the dozen, at a straight reduction of a third. These pieces:
Dinner Plates, $3.25, from $5 a dozen.
Tea Plates, $2.50, from $3.75 a dozen.
Covered Dishes, $2, from $3 each.
Tea Cups and Saucers, $3.35, from $5 a dozen.
After-dinner Coffee Cups and Saucers, $3, from $4.50 a doz.
Fruit Saucers, $1.25, from $2 each.
Vegetable Dishes, 65c, from $1 each; 50c, from 75c each.

Fancy China—
Cups and saucers and plates—new goods just received; French and Austrian china, in tea and breakfast and bread-and-butter sizes; all handsomely decorated with flowers and gold; also colored border overlaid with gold; well worth 50c each; now at 25c.

Fancy China—
Cups and saucers, tea, bouillon and after-dinner coffee—
$1, from $1.50 40c, from 75c
50c, from $1 10c, from 25c

Opera GARMENTS

There's no collection anywhere that equals this, so far as we know. And there's been no such selling as ours this season ever known anywhere else. We've twice cabled the European makers to duplicate original orders—and they were very generous.

Now with much wearing time still ahead—the opera season, balls and parties, the theatre, and so on—all that remain, and that comprise about every handsome style one could wish to view, are now reduced. Divided into three groups—one contains values up to $30—choice at $20; one in which values run up to $43.50—all these at $30; the third comprises capes and coats that were very fairly priced up to $65—now $45. These handsome garments are of soft Vicuna Chudda, many trimmed with white Thibet or Mouffion; all lined with quilted satin.

A lot of elegant broadcloth capes are likewise reduced. These from a leading Paris maker. The various greatly admired pastel shades, and the solid darker colors that are sometimes preferred. The collection holds numerous handsome styles that were priced, moderately enough, at $46 to $75. Now reduced to $34.50 to $56.25.

Second floor, Broadway.

Lamps and Globes

The splendid collection we had brought together for the holiday selling survived the attack of the vast army of shoppers, but left it in a greatly weakened condition. The many odd lots are rallied once more to the front—handsome specimens in plenty among them, but each style small in numbers. After this sale—reorganization, plans of which are already completed. In the meantime, unmatched offerings like these:

$3, reduced from $5 and $6—
Squat and high shape lamps in this lot, attractively decorated with lilies, chrysanthemums, and other flowers, on light grounds. Complete with 11-in. globes.

$6, reduced from $10—
Half high shapes, handsomely decorated with peonies, daisies and roses, on rich dark grounds. Complete with 12-in. globes.

$7.50, reduced from $10.50 and $12—
Decorated lamps; mountings of these are of wrought iron; decorations of roses on solid colored grounds—ruby and yellow. Only about 20 in this lot.

$7.50, reduced from $10.50 to $15—
Imported and domestic pottery vases, mounted for lamps; low and high shapes; old brass and Japanese trimmings.

Ruby Lamp Globes Reduced
Large, rich ruby lamp globes that we were selling at $4.50 are now $3.50. Bought all the maker had on hand. The first price of these globes was $7.50, and they are still being sold for that at other stores.

Main floor and Basement.

The WHITE SALE Muslin Underwear

The usual bargain limits selection—compels you to take the arbitrary style that happens to be in the offering. The usual Muslin Underwear Sale is the same way. One style—possibly two—is offered at a low price. If you want to pick and choose, you must pay more. This sale is unapproached by all others in that it not only offers splendid garments at the most exceptional prices; but it provides such variety as is not thought of elsewhere!

You get the best bargain possible, yet you can select from more styles than are found in the next best regular stock, at full prices.

Does this explain the difference between bargain sales, usual sales and the Wanamaker Sale of White?

The BOOK Sale

The "Hurt Book" Sale, the announcement of which is eagerly looked for every year. But the offering is not wholly of damaged books. Indeed, a large proportion of this collection is absolutely perfect—especially the sets—and those that are imperfect are rarely injured very seriously. The prices are "hurt" considerably more; they've been reduced to one-third and one-half regular. Particularly good choosing in books covering a wide range of subjects, 10c, 25c and 35c.

A new lot, embracing many good titles, is added this morning.

Book Store, Ninth street.

CALENDARS

Five and ten cents each for kinds that were thought very reasonably priced at 10c to 40c. We're selling them in thousand lots—printers and advertisers appreciate the unusual advantage of the offering and are laying in stocks of these fine lithographic pieces. There's also some rich choosing among the larger, more elaborate pieces, at half prices, or less.

GRAND JURY INDICTS BELLEVUE NURSES

They Must Answer for the Death of Louis R. Hilliard.

Charged with Manslaughter in the First Degree—Witness Minnock Returns to Testify.

Nurses Clinton L. Marshall, Edward O. Davis, and John R. Dean were yesterday indicted by the Grand Jury for manslaughter in the first degree in causing the death on Dec. 12 last of Louis R. Hilliard, a patient in the Bellevue insane pavilion, by beating him to death. The indictment sets forth that, in neglect of their duties, the nurses named "assaulted, pounded, bruised, and choked Louis H. Hilliard, and broke several of his ribs, displaced the hyoides bone in his throat, pounded and lacerated the arms, shoulders, legs, face, head, and all other parts of his body, and choked and strangled him, thereby causing his death." The three nurses, who are at present at liberty under bail of $5,000 each, fixed by the Coroner after the inquest, and furnished by Ogden Mills, will plead to the indictment to-morrow.

Assistant District Attorney Pierce brought the matter to the attention of the Grand Jury soon after it assembled yesterday. Thomas J. Minnock, a newspaper man, who had himself committed to the insane pavilion on an assignment from a morning paper, was the chief witness. Minnock was erroneously reported to have disappeared and gone to California. Early yesterday he walked into the offices of the District Attorney's detectives, in the Criminal Courts Building, and said he understood he was wanted. He had been in Waterbury, Conn., with a theatrical company in which he was interested. He had no intention of remaining away, he said. After a short conference with Mr. Pierce, Minnock was taken before the Grand Jury.

Other witnesses who had been subpoenaed and who testified, were Register Gleeson of Bellevue, Mrs. Louis Hilliard, wife of the dead man, and Coroners' Physician Donlin, who first made public the fact that Hilliard had been cruelly beaten. The Grand Jury deliberated only about an hour, and then handed up to Judge Cowing a "blanket" indictment against the three nurses, charging manslaughter in the first degree.

CHARGES BY DR. HAMILTON.

He Tells of Cruelty in the Hospital, and of Alleged Exorbitant Fees Asked for by Dr. Fitch.

Commissioner Keller yesterday afternoon received a long letter from Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, telling at length of alleged abuses in the Insane Pavilion. Dr. Hamilton also repeated his charges that Dr. Fitch made exorbitant charges for examining insane patients. He cited numerous cases, and especially the Gergiana Wendell case, in which specific complaint is made of overcharging in fees. He also calls attention to the case of a man named Ritchie, who was a patient of Dr. Hamilton in 1895. In this case Dr. Hamilton called Dr. Fitch, and claims that the latter put in a bill for $600 for his three hours' work. He remonstrated with him, he says, and Dr. Fitch reduced his claim to $250, which was paid.

Asked if he would take any action concerning these charges against Dr. Fitch, Commissioner Keller said:

"All I can say is that if Dr. Fitch has broken any rule of Bellevue Hospital, he will have to suffer."

Dr. Hamilton claims that many inmates of the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane should by right be in the Almshouse, as they are for the most part sufferers from senile dementia. These, says Dr. Hamilton, are improperly committed by the examining physicians. The manner of disposition of non-resident insane patients is also touched upon.

Dr. McDonald of the Manhattan State Hospital, says Dr. Hamilton, has in his possession a number of photographs showing marks of brutality on patients who have been committed from Bellevue to the Manhattan State Hospital. Commissioner Keller stated that he would look into this charge, and take action if necessary.

"Hereafter," said he, "the examiners of the insane will not only have to look after the mental condition of the patients, but if there are any marks of violence or symptoms of other diseases present, it will be necessary for them to notify the proper authorities."

DR. STEWART TAKES CHARGE.

Begins Reform Movement by Making Changes in Duties of Staff.

Dr. George Taylor Stewart, the newly appointed Superintendent of all the charity hospitals in the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, assumed charge at Bellevue yesterday morning. With his new deputy, ex-Superintendent William B. O'Rourke, deposed by Commissioner Keller, Dr. Stewart made a thorough inspection of the institution. All of the wards were visited and the members of the house staff presented to the Superintendent, who will also act as Chief of Staff.

Dr. Stewart began his contemplated sweeping changes in the management of the hospital by placing Deputy Superintendent O'Rourke on duty during the day and assigning former Deputy Superintendent Rickard to night duty. This rendered necessary the abolishment of the position of night captain, long held by John McHale. Mr. McHale will have a position as keeper in the penitentiary under Corrections Commissioner Lantry.

Mr. Rickard will in all probability perform the duties formerly discharged by Major Samuel Russell, the steward. Although Dr. Stewart denied that the position of steward was abolished, he intimated that some change would be made in this department, and that there will be numerous other changes of minor importance among the administrative staff of the hospital.

Dr. J. K. Wetherbee is acting temporarily as Superintendent of the Metropolitan Hospital, on Blackwell's Island, which position Dr. Stewart vacated to take charge of Bellevue.

Dr. Robert J. Hill, who has been keeping an eye on the hospital for the State Board of Charities for two weeks, said that he regarded with favor Dr. Stewart's appointment to the Superintendency of the institution, as a physician was the best man to have at the head of a hospital. Dr. Hill went to Albany last night, to be present at the quarterly meeting of the State Board of Charities and make his report to that body.

HIGH INTEREST ON LOANS.

But Loan Association Cannot Foreclose on Lowery's Mortgages.

Companies which loan money on chattel mortgages under the act of 1895, which allows them to collect 3 per cent. for the first month and 2 per cent. for each month thereafter, cannot do business with residents of either Monroe or Westchester Counties. This fact was brought out by a decision handed down by Justice Lawrence in the Supreme Court yesterday.

The decision was on a demurrer interposed by the Collateral Loan Association in an action brought by John Lowery and his wife of Mount Vernon to enjoin the loan company from foreclosing on three chattel mortgages, which the plaintiffs want declared null and void on the grounds that excessive interest was charged. The first loan, made in 1897, was for $150, on which $11.50 a month interest was paid. Each of the other loans was for $75, with $5.25 a month interest. Failure to pay interest caused the company to bring foreclosure proceedings in Westchester County, and they were followed by the present action in the Supreme Court of this county.

The Justice held in the demurrer proceedings that the law of 1895 prohibited the loan associations from working in the counties named, and that in the present case, even if they had a right to do business at Mount Vernon, a rate of interest which was really usurious had been charged.

TAKES UP PAPER'S CHARGES.

Judge Instructs Grand Jury to Investigate Story of Another Alleged Bosschieter Case at Paterson.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 8.—Judge Dixon, in opening the January term of the Supreme Court here to-day, charged the Grand Jury to investigate the report published in a local paper to the effect that a prominent person here had recently been concerned in the drugging of a young girl, who escaped the fate of Jennie Bosschieter only through the prompt services of physicians.

The story published told of the doctors working over the girl all night, and of her being brought back to life with great difficulty, and it was asserted that the man in the case had paid the girl's father several thousand dollars to hush the matter up.

"Whether," said the Judge, "that article was published for the purpose of raising a public sentiment which would aid in the suppression of such crimes and vicious propensities, or with some less commendable motive, may perhaps be the subject of question, but it would seem to be advisable for the Grand Jury that they call upon the persons who were concerned in that publication for whatever information they are able to give, and then, by that information, you may be able to get at the original source of the report, and so find out whether it has a basis in truth or not.

"If it has a basis in truth, and you find reasonable ground for believing that in this community any part of this felonious transaction occurred, there would be evidence enough upon which you could present an indictment. If, on the other hand, you find that this article is without reasonable foundation, and that it has been published not from good motives, and with a design to promote the administration of public justice, but upon some less commendable motive, so that it reflects upon any individual in the community, whether it point to him by name or by insinuation merely, it will then be proper for you to indict for libel every one who was engaged in that publication.

"Such publications as that either are commendable as earnest efforts to secure the administration of justice, or else they are blamable and despicable as publications intended to rob a man of his reputation, or even society of its just repute."

THE BOSSCHIETER MURDER CASE.

Separate Trial for Kerr—McAllister's Plea for a Review Denied.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 8.—The first case taken up by Judge Dixon in the Supreme Court to-day was the application of George J. Kerr for a separate trial on the indictment charging him with assaulting and murdering Jennie Bosschieter, and of Walter C. McAllister for removal of the indictment to the Supreme Court, to the end that it may be reviewed and quashed on several technicalities.

Judge Dixon said that as a member of the Supreme Court he had carefully gone over the latter application and considered the points raised, and had come to the conclusion that they did not warrant the quashing of the indictment, as all were groundless.

In the matter of the application made by John W. Harding for a separate trial for Kerr, the Judge granted this, and said he would make known his reasons later.

The Judge then ordered that the four defendants, McAllister, Kerr, Death, and Campbell, be ready for trial next Monday.

LEGAL NOTES.

RIGHTS OF CARRIAGES AND STREET CARS.—Upon the first trial of Catherine McCann's suit as administratrix to recover damages from the New York and Queens County Railway Company for the death of her husband, Simon McCann, she had a verdict, which was reversed in April, 1898, by the Appellate Division, in this city, on the ground that it was against the weight of evidence, and that there was no direct evidence that the company's car ran into the carriage which the decedent was driving. The opinion, which was by Justice Ingraham, was concurred in by Presiding Justice Van Brunt and Justice McLaughlin. Justice Patterson gave a dissenting opinion, in which Justice O'Brien concurred. The intestate was driving a carriage on Borden Avenue, near Bradley Avenue, in Long Island City. The carriage, in which three women were riding, had started from Calvary Cemetery, and had proceeded about 200 feet, when it was overtaken by a trolley car, which struck either the carriage or one of the horses, and McCann was thrown or fell from the box of the carriage and fractured his skull. On the second trial Mrs. McCann again had a verdict, which has now been again reversed by the Appellate Division, on appeal by William E. Stewart, counsel for the company. Justice McLaughlin gives the opinion, basing the reversal upon the fact that the Court refused to charge that "if by the exercise of reasonable care McCann could have seen the approaching car, and ought to have apprehended the danger of the situation, he was chargeable with negligence." After the refusal to so charge, the Court said the intestate was under no legal obligation to look around to see if a car was coming. The Court holds otherwise, saying that the decedent, "while driving upon the tracks, if he knew that a car was approaching, and was liable to or was about to collide with the carriage which he was driving, it was his duty to do whatever he could to prevent the collision; and if he did not do that, and by reason thereof he sustained an injury, the defendant could not be held liable for it."

RIGHTS OF PASSENGERS.—A judgment recovered by Elizabeth Kellegher in her suit against the Forty-second Street, Manhattanville and St. Nicholas Avenue Railroad Company for injuries resulting from an accident on April 25, 1897, has been affirmed by the First Appellate Division, by a divided court. Mrs. Kellegher claimed that while attempting to board one of the company's north-bound horse cars, at Amsterdam Avenue and Seventy-ninth Street, she was thrown to the ground and injured by the negligent starting of the car. The five witnesses for the company testified that the car first stopped at Seventy-ninth Street and then went on slowly about seventy-five feet before the accident happened, and that the plaintiff had got on at Seventy-ninth Street, leaving a companion behind, then stepped off the car, backward. Justice O'Brien, giving the opinion of the appellate tribunal, says that, regard being had to the rights of a person, who after the car had stopped is attempting to board it, "the obligation is on the conductor to see to it that such person has secured a reasonably safe foothold or position upon the car before the signal to start is given. If we take the plaintiff's statement of what the conductor here did is true, his act was certainly a negligent one, for the consequences of which, unless it was refuted, explained, or justified, the defendants would be liable." Justice McLaughlin, in a dissenting opinion, which is concurred in by Presiding Justice Van Brunt, holds that the Court's charge, in which the jury were in substance told that if they believed the testimony of the plaintiff and her witnesses the defendant was guilty of negligence, and that they could render a verdict for the plaintiff, was erroneous. "There is no rule which obligates a street railroad not to start its cars until persons taking passage have actually been seated in the car All that is required is that the car must not be started until the passenger is in a safe position."

RENTAL AND FEE DAMAGES FROM ELEVATED RAILROAD.—Mary Venn Cohen purchased an old two-story and attic brick building on the east side of Greenwich Street, south of Hammond Street, about twenty-five years ago, and occupied it for a residence up to 1885. Since that time she has rented the property, first getting $60 a month, but subsequently reducing the rental to $40 a month. Over thirteen years ago Mrs. Cohen sued the elevated railroad companies for damages resulting from the elevated railroad structure, which is about seven feet from her building. An award of $3,500 for fee damages, and a total of $4,025 as rental damages has been affirmed by the Appellate Division. The company complained of the size of the award for rental damages. Justice Ingraham, giving the unanimous opinion of the Court, says upon this point: "It must be considered that the period is over thirteen years, and it certainly is not the fault of the plaintiff that she has been compelled to wait such a long time before a trial of the action. The evidence is that the communication with the lower part of the city by the surface roads is quicker than that of the elevated roads, and in view of this fact, it is difficult to see what possible benefit to this property the elevated railroad can be. It certainly is no advantage to have a large number of people carried past her house each day between the upper and lower parts of the city, and she gets no benefit from adjoining stations."

NEW JERSEY LEGISLATURE

Republicans Organize in Both Houses with Caucus Nominees.

Gov. Voorhees, in His Message, Indorses the Palisades Park Plan and Refers to the Pollution of Rivers.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 8.—The one hundred and twenty-fifth session of the New Jersey Legislature opened to-day. The lobby and galleries of the two houses were crowded with spectators, and the members' desks were loaded down with flowers.

Senator Cornish, the only "hold-over" Democrat, was made temporary President of the Senate. Senator Pitney, Republican, of Morris County, was elected permanent Chairman, and Walter Edge of Atlantic County, Secretary. Senator Pitney, in his address, declared in favor of a Constitutional amendment for a separate Court of Appeals. The Senate officers decided upon by the recent Republican caucus were then elected, and Senator Pitney announced his committee appointments.

The House was organized by the election of William J. Bradley, Republican, of Camden, Speaker, and the other caucus nominees. After the appointment of the usual committees the annual message of Gov. Voorhees was read. In his message, after calling the Legislature's attention to the importance of its labors in the coming session, the Governor presented figures showing the financial condition of the State. The gross receipts for the year were $3,453,-205, while the disbursements were $2,701,-226, an excess in receipts of $752,068. Aside from appropriations made at the last session of the Legislature for 1901, and from any supplemental appropriations, the indebtedness of the State is $119,000. "To meet this," the Governor adds: "it has funds, the market value of which is $505,-716, and further assets valued at $207,526, which constitute a sinking fund.

"The comparison of the State's present financial condition with that at the beginning of the past century will afford some degree of satisfaction. In due time, when the policy adopted by it is understood, and ignorance and prejudice give way to a clearer and less passionate consideration, the full measure of praise will be accorded to those who have directed and shaped its policy in this regard, and judiciously husbanded its resources."

During the year 322,575 children between seven and twelve years of age attended public schools and $2,333,550 was spent on their education.

On building and loan associations the Governor said: "Wisely conducted, these associations encourage and make possible the building of many homes, promote habits of thrift and economy, and afford to the 129,131 shareholders—mainly persons of small means—an opportunity for the profitable investment of their earnings."

The revised school law, he says, has proved generally satisfactory.

Referring to a Palisades Inter-State park, the Governor says: "The subject has aroused widespread interest in the past, and has received repeated consideration at the hands of previous Legislatures. Nothing practical or feasible was suggested or accomplished until the present commission undertook the work. Now, for the first time, the project seems capable of realization, if reasonable aid be given by the States especially interested. On the part of New Jersey, I respectfully urge such legislation and assistance as will facilitate the work so auspiciously begun."

After an indorsement of the Pan-American Exposition to be held at Buffalo, he adds: "The advantages to our own State in having a suitable exhibition of its resources and products are manifest, and to defray the expenses thereof a suitable appropriation is recommended.

"The condition of the rivers and streams in several localities demands attention. Especially is this true of the Valley of the Passaic. The citizens and property owners in that valley have become alarmed at the foul and polluted condition of the waters in the river. These are now the receptacle and conduit of all the sewage of the cities, towns, and villages in the territory which it drains, and of all the refuse of the numerous factories and manufacturing establishments along its banks. The subject is worthy of your most earnest consideration."

Senator Hutchinson introduced the only bill of the session. It provides that the annual appropriation for State aid for stone road building be increased from $150,-000 to $300,000. The Legislature adjourned until Monday evening.

Former Harvard Athlete Dead.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 8.—Allan E. Doucette of the Harvard University football team of 1897, and one of the famous football centres of the country, died at his home here late last night of typhoid fever. He was twenty-eight years of age. Doucette's illness had covered a period of six months. During last season he acted as a coach for the Harvard 'Varsity team. He was graduated from Harvard in 1895, and three years later from the Law School. Since then he had been a practicing lawyer.

Fifty Cigarmakers Strike.

Fifty cigarmakers in Joseph Whitlaw's factory, 319 Bowery, have gone on strike to force the firm to supply a better quality of "binders" tobacco. The strikers allege that with a poor quality of binders they cannot make as many cigars as with good material. The strikers' places were filled with non-union men.

August Belmont Able to Drive Out.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Jan. 8.—August Belmont, who is convalescent from typhoid, took his first drive to-day. He was out in a closed carriage, and was accompanied by his son August. Mr. Belmont will not return to business for some time. He does not appear to have lost any flesh, or if he did he regained it. He says he is possessed of a strong appetite, which he is not permitted to gratify.

To Call a German Jewish Congress.

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—A large meeting of Zionists, held to-day, voted to call a national Jewish Congress for the protection of threatened Hebrew interests.

More Seaboard Air Line Resignations.

NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 8.—The resignation of Vice President and General Manager St. Johns of the Seaboard Air Line Railway will carry with it the resignations of a host of other officials, and the personnel of the general offices here will be in consequence almost completely changed. Following swiftly upon the retirement of the chief comes the announcement that O. B. Bidwell, freight claim agent of the system, with headquarters here, and B. P. Johnson, Superintendent of Transportation of the line, whose headquarters have also been situated here, have resigned. Other resignations will follow.

Brief Railroad Items.

There was a rumor current yesterday in Wall Street about proposed changes in the control of the Delaware and Hudson Company. One rumor to the effect that the New York Central would lease the road, guaranteeing a 6 per cent. dividend on the stock, was denied by a down-town representative of Vanderbilt interests, who said that such a proposition had not even been considered.

The Great Northern Railway has opened a prize competition for the best written advertisement of the advantages of the road, to be submitted to its General Passenger Agent and to be judged by three competent St. Paul newspaper men. The contest will close Jan. 31.

President Harris of the Philadelphia and Reading was in the city yesterday, and spent most of his time in conference with officials of the Jersey Central Railroad, but both he and the Jersey Central officials declined to say what matters were being considered or to speak about the terms of the Reading-Jersey Central transaction. At the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. it was said that the details were not yet ready for publication.

Both the west-bound freight and passenger committees of the Trunk Line Association were in session yesterday. At the meeting of the Freight Committee only routine business was transacted. The Passenger Committee again considered the proposed equalization of differentials between New York and Chicago, but without reaching a conclusion. The matter was laid over for two weeks, and in the meantime Commissioner Farmer is to collect such statistics as he may be able to get in regard to the proposed changes.

An all-day session of the Road Committee of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company was held here yesterday and gave rise to considerable gossip. It was assumed that the recent sale of the Jersey Central Road to the Reading Company and the effect of this change of control on the Baltimore and Ohio line would be very fully gone into, but according to a member of the committee this matter was only casually discussed. No other business of importance is said to have come before the committee.

LORD PAUNCEFOTE TO STAY.

Owing to the Important Questions Now at Issue He Will Remain Indefinitely at Washington.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Lord Pauncefote, British Ambassador to the United States, will, according to information obtained to-day, remain indefinitely at Washington. It was the intention of the British Government to appoint his successor next March, but the questions now at issue between the United States and Great Britain are believed to be far too serious to permit his removal. It is understood that Lord Pauncefote is willing to stay on, and is likely to represent Great Britain until the close of this year at least, if not longer.

As yet the Nicaraguan controversy has not engaged the attention of the British Government, nor has any decision been even tentatively formed. Before the matter is discussed in the Cabinet, Lord Lansdowne, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, will have several conferences with United States Ambassador Choate, enlightenment being desired by the Foreign Office upon various points in the amendments to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. These conferences will begin within a few days.

M. DESCHANEL RE-ELECTED.

Again Chosen as President of the French Chamber—A Set-back for the Government.

PARIS, Jan. 8.—Parliament reassembled to-day. Great animation was manifested on the floor of the Chamber of Deputies, and the tribunes were crowded.

M. Deschanel, who has been President of the Chamber since the beginning of the present Parliament, was re-elected President. The vote stood 296 for M. Deschanel and 217 for Henri Brisson, Radical Republican and former Premier.

MM. Georges Cochery, Aynard, Maurice Faure, and Mesureur were re-elected Vice Presidents of the Chamber.

M. Pauline, who spoke as doyen in the Chamber of Deputies, appealed for a union of the Republicans and the closing of the fratricidal hatreds between Frenchmen.

The Senate adjourned until Thursday, for the election of the bureaux, after an inauguration speech by M. Wallon, the doyen of the body.

Paul Eugène Louis Deschanel was born in Brussels in 1839, and was elected to Parliament in 1885 as a Moderate Republican. He was distinguished as an orator from the first. In 1891 he was sent to the United States by the French Government to investigate labor troubles in this country.

At the beginning of the new Parliament in May, 1898, M. Deschanel was chosen by the Moderates to oppose Henri Brisson. M. Brisson had held the office for two preceding Parliaments, and M. Deschanel's chances were regarded as hopeless. Nevertheless, he was elected by a majority of four, and the scenes of confusion and violence that followed were remarkable, even in the French Chamber.

At the election yesterday it was supposed that M. Brisson had an excellent chance of success, for M. Deschanel had been accused of partiality toward the Rightists, and it was known that the Government was desirous that M. Brisson should preside during the debates upon the Associations bill, which is to be the next important measure taken up by the Chamber.

Four groups of the Ministerial majority met on Monday and decided to support M. Brisson, but it was feared—and the fears proved well founded—that in the secret ballot a number of Republicans, who are dissatisfied with the Government, would vote for M. Deschanel.

The election, therefore, furnished an indication of the real hold the Government has on the Chamber.

SIR E. S. SYMES SHOOTS HIMSELF.

Lingering Between Life and Death—Is Chief Secretary in Burma.

RANGOON, British Burma, Jan. 8.—Sir Edward S. Symes, Chief Secretary to the Government of Burma, and a member of the Legislative Council of India, shot himself in the head in a carriage to-day.

He is lingering between life and death.

Sir Edward Spence Symes, Knight Commander of the Order of the Indian Empire, has been Chief Secretary to the Government of Burma since 1890. He was very largely instrumental in pacifying the country after the annexation of Northern Burma by Great Britain.

Sir Edward is forty-eight years old and unmarried. He entered the Indian Civil Service in 1873, after passing the civil service examination, and has been regarded as one of the best examples of how well the examination system has worked. From 1888 to 1890 he was Commissioner of various divisions of Burma. He was only recently knighted.

PRUSSIAN DIET OPENED.

Speech from the Throne Announces an Extended Canal Bill.

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—The Diet was opened to-day in the name of Emperor William, who is suffering from a slight cold, by the Imperial Chancellor, Count von Bülow, who read the speech from the throne. The principal point in this was the announcement of the immediate presentation of an extended Canal bill, comprising not only the Rhine and Elbe scheme, but also the construction of a waterway for large ships between Berlin and Stettin, a more practicable waterway between the Oder and Vistula, and improvements in the Warthe, Lower Oder, Lower Havel, and Spree.

The speech referred to the continued satisfactory financial situation, saying a considerable surplus had been obtained in 1899, and that equally favorable results were expected for 1900, while the budget for 1901 showed a marked increase in revenue and the profits from the State railroads were satisfactory.

It was proposed, the speech added, to introduce bills dealing with the reform of the local Government of Berlin, the relief of provincial finances, the housing problem, &c.

The speech concluded with an appeal for the patriotic labor of the members of the Diet, and with a reference to the bi-centenary of the Kingdom of Prussia.

Warships to Use Wireless Telegraphy.

TOULON, Jan. 8.—The recent experiments with wireless telegraphy in connection with the French fleet have been so satisfactory that it has been decided to provide the entire Mediterranean squadron with wireless apparatus, which will be subjected to decisive tests during the coming cruise of that squadron. The recent experiments showed that dispatches can be exchanged reliably at distances of from eighteen to twenty miles.

Severe Weather in South Russia.

ODESSA, Jan. 7.—Dozens of trains are snowed up on the southern railways, and some are completely buried. Ten thousand laborers have been dispatched to clear the tracks. Several Russian steamers are missing. Sebastopol is full of vessels which have taken shelter in the harbor from the gales. The snowfall in the last three days has been so heavy that no mails have arrived here.

German Commercial Congress Opened.

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—The Secretary of State for the Interior, Count von Posadowsky-Wehner, opened the Commercial Congress to-day. In welcoming the delegates the Secretary warned them that German commerce and industry will have to struggle harder than ever before they find outlets abroad, owing to the marked tendency of the civilized States to become self-sufficing. He, however, expressed the opinion that the excellence of her products would enable Germany to hold her own in all the markets of the world, as well as to win new fields.

Herbert Bismarck Disavows Interview.

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—Prince Herbert Bismarck disavows the alleged interview with him published by Il Corriere Della Sera of Milan, in which he was represented as asserting that the great German industrial organizations, with the approval of Emperor William and Count von Bülow, had accompromised with the Agrarians and would meet the United States with a sharp protective policy.

Vienna Burglar Kills Six Persons.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—According to a dispatch to The Daily Express from Vienna, a burglar named Wanyet, who had robbed a tenement on the Wilandstrasse, shot dead a woman whom he met as he was leaving. Pursued by the crowd, he shot five others dead, and he was not arrested until his revolver had been emptied.

GOV. ODELL'S ECONOMY PLAN.

May Require Constitutional Amendment to Make Proposed Consolidations.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 8.—The State Board of Charities and the State Commission of Prisons are not legislative creations, but have their being from the Constitution of the State. This being so, the question has been raised whether it will not require a Constitutional amendment to carry into effect the recommendations of Gov. Odell with regard to these two boards.

Representative Kelsey, Chairman of the Committee on Cities, said to-day that it was being held by some that the appointment of a single Commissioner for Prisons and a single Commissioner for Charities and the designation of certain State officers to act with these Commissioners would constitute boards which would fulfill the requirements of the Constitution. He admitted, however, that the existing State Board of Charities and State Prison Commission would undoubtedly hold to the contrary view, and that the advice of the Attorney General would have to be obtained before the Governor's recommendations with regard to these two boards could be acted upon.

In order to amend the Constitution it is necessary that a majority of the members of two Legislatures shall vote favorably upon the proposed amendments, which must then be ratified by the people.

Gov. Odell was asked to-day whether he had received any protest against his recommendations in favor of cutting down State Boards.

"I suppose," he said, "that those who intend to protest, if there are any such, don't think it worth while bothering with me, but are reserving their protests for the Legislature."

ESTIMATES FOR NEXT YEAR.

May Be Presented to Legislature at Albany on Thursday—Part of the Governor's Economy Plan.

ALBANY, Jan. 8.—Heads of State departments were busy to-day making estimates of the needs of their departments for the coming year. The particular reason for their activity was that they had been notified that they would have to have their estimates in to-day so as to permit the introduction of the annual appropriation bill on Thursday.

As a rule the annual appropriation bill is due about the end of the first month of the session or early in the second month. To put the bill in on the second day is to do something never done within the memory of any member of the present Legislature.

This is believed to be the second move in Gov. Odell's plan of economy, and that the principal object of this early introduction of the appropriation bills is to give the Finance and Ways and Means Committees plenty of time to go through them. With those bills in a month ahead of time, the committees can examine every item and cut out those that are not absolutely necessary.

Justice Chase in Appellate Division.

ALBANY, Jan. 8.—Gov. Odell to-day designated Justice Emory A. Chase of Catskill an Associate Justice on the Appellate Division in the Third Department, to succeed Justice Milton H. Merwin, who has been returned to circuit work in the Sixth Judicial District.

Mrs. Odell's Reception.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 8.—Mrs. Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., wife of the Governor, will have her first "at home" next Wednesday. She will be assisted in receiving by Mrs. Woodruff, wife of the Lieutenant Governor; Mrs. McDonough, wife of the Secretary of State, and Mrs. Gray, wife of Justice Gray.

The Governor's dinner to the Justices of the Supreme Court will probably occur Jan. 24.

The first big reception of the social season here will be the legislative reception, which takes place Jan. 30.

LAGLORIA COLONY'S STRAITS.

Application Made for Receiver for Cuban Land and Steamship Co.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 8.—Application was made in the United States Circuit Court to-day for the appointment of a receiver for the Cuban Land and Steamship Company. The application is made by Benjamin K. Taylor, Orrin M. Lambert, and Joseph H. Young, who charge that the company has been mismanaged and that it is now insolvent.

The company was organized to develop property at Lagloria, Cuba, and to operate a steamship line between New York City and that place. It is charged that a steamship was purchased, that it made three trips, which were conducted at a total loss of $17,000; that the trips were then abandoned; that $20,000 worth of lumber was purchased to erect a hotel at Lagloria, and that the building was not put up.

Columbia's Basket Ball Schedule.

Columbia's basket ball team is planning an extensive season of games with college, military, and Young Men's Christian Association teams. Contests with all the well-known college teams have been arranged, together with games with the prominent fives in this vicinity.

The first important game of the season will be played to-night with the Twenty-third Separate Company, N. G. N. Y., at Hudson, N. Y. Columbia will be represented by T. H. Allen, H. C. Townsend, F. V. Goodman, F. Benjamin, and O. Marston.

The dates for several of the later games are yet undecided, but the schedule so far completed follows:

Jan. 9—Twenty-third Separate Company at Hudson; 12—Pratt Institute at Brooklyn; 17—Tompkins Athletic Club at Brooklyn; 18—Company B, First Regiment, at Mount Vernon; 26—Seventeenth Separate Company at Flushing; Feb. 2—New Rochelle Young Men's Christian Association; 13—Pennsylvania at New York; 16—Silent Five at New York; 20—Fourth Separate Company; 23—Harvard at Schenectady; March 2—Larchmont Athletic Association at New Rochelle; 7—Washington Continental Athletic Association at Schenectady; 16—Dartmouth at Hanover.

The schedule for January is complete, but many other games will be arranged for February and March, notably with the Yale, Cornell, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Allegheny teams.

Manager Rol C. Megrue is arranging to take the team on a trip to Washington to play the Columbian and Georgetown University teams.

The team at the conclusion of college expects to go to Buffalo to take part in the Pan-American intercollegiate basket ball contests.

NATIONAL AND STATE BANKS ELECT DIRECTORS

Details of the Changes Where Any Were Made.

Boards Also Chosen by Bankers' Life and Eagle Fire Insurance Cos. and Manhattan Trust Co.

Many of the National and State banks and other financial corporations held their annual meetings in this city yesterday, electing their Boards of Directors and in many instances making no changes. Some of the banks showed very large increases in their deposits.

The National City Bank elected Cashier G. S. Whitson to be Vice President; W. A. Simonson, assistant cashier, to be Vice President; H. M. Kilborn, assistant cashier, to be cashier. This gives this institution the distinction of being the only bank in the city to have four Vice Presidents, the others holding that rank and office being Samuel Sloan and A. G. Loomis. No changes in the Board resulted from the election.

James Stillman, Jacob H. Schiff, William Rockefeller, and Cleveland H. Dodge were elected Directors of the Columbia Bank. Mr. Stillman is the President of the National City and Second National Banks, and it was known that he recently bought a majority of holdings in the Columbia Bank. Messrs. Stillman and Rockefeller also joined the Directorate of the Lincoln National Bank.

In the Mechanics' National Bank President Horace E. Garth declined re-election because of ill-health, but continues as a Director. His son, Granville W. Garth, formerly cashier, succeeds as President. No cashier was elected.

Otto H. Kuhn of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. was chosen a Director of the Western National Bank, succeeding John E. Searles.

Edward King, President of the Union Trust Company, was elected an additional Director of the Hanover National Bank.

Col. Robert M. Thompson, President of the Oxford Copper Company, was elected a Director in the Bank of the State of New York in place of the late Robert Dunlap.

Daniel W. Whitmore, senior partner of D. W. Whitmore & Co., commission merchants at 89 and 91 Warren Street, was elected a Director of the New York National Exchange Bank in place of D. B. Halsted, who died last Summer.

In the American Exchange National Bank Samuel Rea, Fourth Vice President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, replaces Gen. C. T. Christensen.

Charles W. Morse of the American Ice Company and A. H. Alden were elected to the board of the New York Produce Exchange Bank. An amendment to establish branch institutions was also adopted, though where these banking houses will be located could not be learned. A story was circulated that the bank was negotiating for the control of the Mutual Bank at Broadway and Thirty-third Street.

Daniel A. Davis was elected to the board of the Bank of New York, National Banking Association.

Alexander McDonald of Cleveland succeeds Lorenzo Semple in the board of the Seventh National Bank.

S. Neustadt of Hallgarten & Co. was added to the Directorate of the State Bank.

In the National Bank of the Republic G. H. Macy succeeds H. B. Stokes.

No one was chosen to fill the vacancy in the Plaza Bank caused by the death of Frank B. Poor.

William B. Reed resigned as cashier of the First National Bank to accept the Presidency of the Bankers' Safe Deposit Company, and Assistant Cashier Brackett was elected to the vacancy.

Andrew T. Sullivan, President of the Nassau Trust Company, was elected to the board of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company in place of Ebenezer S. Mason, deceased.

The following were elected to the Directorate of the Eagle Fire Company: John M. Burke, Thomas J. Gaines, John S. Huyler, and H. Van Rensselaer Kennedy, succeeding Henry Meyer, (deceased.) John L. Riker, William B. Isham, and George H. Prentiss.

New Directors of the Mechanics and Traders' Bank are Eugene Galland of Galland Brothers, Aaron I. Bach of E. Bach & Sons, Aaron Hecht, Vice President of the American Hide and Leather Company, and I. D. Einstein of Einstein, Wolf & Co.

Frank W. Kinsman, Jr., was made a Director of the Fourteenth Street Bank in place of the late Caspar Fechteler.

Following are the boards elected:

NEW JERSEY BANK ELECTIONS.

Officials of Hudson County, First and Third National Banks.

The stockholders of various banks and trust companies in New Jersey held their annual meetings yesterday in Jersey City and elected Directors for the ensuing year.

The Hudson County National Bank chose the following Directors: Hampton A. Coursen, John A. Blair, Cornelius Zabriskie, J. W. Hardenburg, Myles Tierney, Frank H. Larle, Dr. John D. McGill, Henry S. White, David R. Daly, and Nelson J. H. Edge. Mr. Edge was recently chosen a Director to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Richard C. Washburn. Mr. Edge is also Cashier of the bank.

The First National Bank chose the following officers: A. M. Fuller, E. F. C. Young, Hamilton Wallis, F. O. Mathiessen, Joseph P. Bedle, George T. Smith, Charles Siddier, and William H. Corbin.

The Third National Bank elected Directors as follows: John D. Carsalen, Henry Lunneck, Oliver H. Perry, Frank J. Mathews, P. G. Van Zandt, Robert S. Ross, G. B. Van Zandt, Daniel E. O'Leary, Horace H. Farrier, Dennis McLaughlin, and George W. Young. Supreme Court Justice A. O. Garretson was identified with the Third National Bank for some time, but he decided to retire from the Directorate when he was appointed to the bench, and George W. Young was chosen in his place. George W. Young, who was elected a Director of the Third National Bank, to succeed Judge Garretson, is President of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company of New York, and Vice President of the Commercial Trust Company of Jersey City.

ACCEPT REORGANIZATION PLAN.

Pennsylvania Steel Directors Pass the Matter Up to the Stockholders.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 8.—The Board of Directors of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, at a meeting to-day, adopted the $50,000,000 reorganization plan. Notices will be sent to the stockholders asking them to deposit their stock in assent to the plan not later than April 1. It is stated that if by that time a practically unanimous consent is not obtained the plan will be abandoned.

It is proposed to form a new company having an authorized capital of $25,000,000 preferred stock and $25,000,000 common stock, of which $4,500,000 preferred and $10,250,000 common will remain in the company's treasury as a reserve, making the actual amount of stock outstanding $20,500,000 preferred and $14,750,000 common. The present capitalization of the Pennsylvania Steel Company is smaller in proportion to its output than that of any one of the large companies in America, and is inadequate to the needs of its business. The reorganization of the finances will reduce its interest bearing obligations to less than $6 per ton of capacity.

CHECK COLLECTION CHARGES.

Philadelphia Clearing House Not to Follow New York's Example.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 8.—The Philadelphia Clearing House Association has decided for the present to establish no charge for collecting checks in other cities. After the New York and Boston Clearing Houses had fixed a charge for this purpose the subject was referred to a committee of the local association.

There was for some time a radical division of opinion among Philadelphia bankers regarding the question, but when the committee reported unfavorably on the subject, the Clearing House Association concluded that it was inexpedient to make any change in the policy prevailing here.

New York Loan and Improvement Co.

At a special meeting of the New York Loan and Improvement Company stockholders yesterday the proposition to reduce the capitalization from $1,970,000 to $1,739,300 was unanimously adopted.

Baltimore Bank to Resume Business.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 8.—The Old Town Bank, a State institution, which closed its doors and went into a receiver's hands a few days ago, will resume business tomorrow. It is announced that the only change in the management of the bank which will be made at this time is the substitution of Milton B. Williams as cashier in place of Theodore Wilcox, who formerly held that position, and who is accused by the Directors of the bank with having caused the failure of the bank by bad management.

Retires from Four Presidencies.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 8.—W. W. Gibbs, the financier, to-day announced his retirement as President of the Marsden Company, the American Alkali Company, the International Smokeless Powder Company, and the Manufactured Rubber Company. Mr. Gibbs made a statement, in which he said he would continue to serve these companies as a Director and member of the Executive Committees.

Another Bank Robbery in Ohio.

SHILOH, Ohio, Jan. 8.—David Ozier's private bank was burglarized early to-day. The robbers are said to have secured $6,000 in currency, a number of Government bonds, and a lot of valuable jewelry belonging to the banker's wife. They stole a horse and buggy and escaped.

Four-Masted Sailing Ship Here.

The four-masted steel sailing ship Astral, recently completed for the Standard Oil Company's fleet at the yards of Arthur Sewall & Co., Bath, Me., arrived in port on her maiden trip yesterday. The Astral is the first sailing vessel to be owned by the Standard Oil Company to fly the American flag. It is also the largest sailing vessel in the world, being 332 feet long, with a beam of 45.8 feet, and a depth of hold of 26 feet. The gross tonnage is 3,206.47. The carrying capacity is 1,500,000 gallons of case oil. Capt. Jonathan W. Denham of Salem, Mass., commands the ship.

Dinner for Makers of Morocco Leather.

PORTICO MUST COME DOWN

Commissioner Keating to Send Regan Another Ultimatum.

Pabst Hotel Obstruction the Subject of Opinion by Corporation Counsel Whalen.

James B. Regan, proprietor of the Pabst Hotel, at Forty-second Street and Broadway, will receive to-day another ultimatum from James P. Keating, Commissioner of Highways, in relation to the portico of the hotel, which squats on the public domain and takes up an area worth more than $38,000. A like notice was served on Regan on Aug. 20 last by the Commissioner, who a few days later decided to abide by the decision in the Supreme Court mandamus suit brought by Simon Strasburg to compel him to do what he threatened to do in regard to the portico. The suit was abated Dec. 27, after thirteen adjournments, by the death of Strasburg. Gen. S. F. Kneeland, his counsel, wrote to Commissioner Keating, notifying him that the end of the suit left him free to proceed to remove the illegal structure. On this Keating asked the advice of Corporation Counsel John Whalen.

Mr. Whalen yesterday served the Commissioner with an opinion, which concisely and positively set forth the duty of the Commissioner of Highways in the premises and furnished many legal authorities to sustain the decision of the head of the Law Department that Keating has full power to remove the portico, as an incumbrance and a violation of law. In part, Mr. Whalen said:

By Section 524 of the charter you are given cognizance and control "of the removal of incumbrances." What then is an incumbrance? Various definitions of the word have been given, but the best of all, it seems to me, is that it is an unauthorized obstruction of the highway. The highway includes the sidewalks on either side of it, and the public are entitled to its free and uninterrupted use, subject nevertheless to the right of the Legislature to authorize or legalize obstructions in it, and to its reasonable use of the abutting owners.

To me it is an irresistible conclusion from a reading of the authorities that all obstructions in the highway, if not authorized by the Municipal Assembly under the powers granted to it by the Legislature, and which are not, strictly speaking, legitimate uses of the highway, such as "water hydrants, trees, hitching posts, telegraph poles, awnings, posts, or stepping stones," are public nuisances, and it is your duty to remove them.

An encroachment on a highway by the erection thereon of a building, or a part of a building, has been frequently held to be illegal.

Likewise, a part of a building may be an encroachment, even though it is some distance above the surface of the highway.

Nor do I think, for the reasons stated by Justice McAdam, in Simis vs. Brookfield, supra, that the portico can be said to be an awning which the Municipal Assembly would have the power to authorize under Subdivision 7 of Section 49 of the charter.

Even considering it an awning it is an obstruction and a nuisance if not properly authorized.

In conclusion, Mr. Whalen quotes as fitting the situation Judge Earl, in Cook vs. Harris, supra, on the duty of Commissioners of Highways, in which it is laid down:

In no other way can the highway laws be properly administered and public convenience promoted. If a building be placed in a highway, thus entirely obstructing public travel, it would be quite absurd to hold that they must leave it until some individual who is specially injured by the nuisance shall tear it down or remove it. It is their official duty to remove it.

"I shall," said Commissioner Keating, a few minutes after receiving the opinion, "act on what Corporation Counsel Whalen says. I shall proceed by at once notifying James B. Reagan that if within three days of the date of notice I have not full assurance that he will forthwith remove the portico, I will summarily take it down. The notice will be served on him to-morrow."

Emanuel Blumenstiel of counsel for Regan said last evening:

"I have not yet looked into Mr. Keating's right to take the portico down. I had up to the death of relator Strasburg cared for my client's interests in the mandamus proceedings, and without consulting him cannot talk of the new phase of the case. In any event, I shall advise him to protect his own rights consistent with compliance with the law."

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE SITE.

Reported that the Northwest Corner of Liberty Place Has Been Selected.

The new building of the Chamber of Commerce will stand on the plot now occupied by the old Real Estate Exchange Building, 59 to 65 Liberty Street, northwest corner of Liberty Place. That the Chamber of Commerce had acquired this property from the Central Realty, Bond and Trust Company was a matter of common report yesterday. Henry Morgenthan, President of the latter corporation, declined to say anything regarding the deal. Morris K. Jesup, President of the Chamber of Commerce, was equally reticent.

The Real Estate Exchange Building, a six-story iron-front structure, occupies a plot fronting 62.10 feet on Liberty Street and 91.4 feet on Liberty Place. At the time of the dissolution of the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room, Limited, the property was purchased by the Central Realty, Bond and Trust Company for $580,000. The price paid for it by the Chamber of Commerce is not known, but the parcel has been held at from $700,000 to $750,000.

The Chamber of Commerce has had several sites under consideration. Among them the Hoyt property on the north side of Pine Street, just east of Nassau Street. The Realty Trust's property on the south side of Liberty Street, between Broadway and Nassau Street, has also been mentioned as among the possible sites.

No further particulars in regard to the Chamber of Commerce's plans for the improvement of its new site could be learned yesterday.

LIBRARIES MAY CONSOLIDATE.

Proposition for the Members of the Free Circulating Library.

The Trustees of the Free Circulating Library yesterday made another move toward the consolidation of the organization with the New York Public Library. A proposition of consolidation will be submitted to the members, who will have sixty days in which to reply. If the vote for consolidation is ratified by a two-thirds vote of the members, the plan will be carried through.

In case consolidation should be effected, the Free Library will be managed by a special committee, to be appointed by the Public Library, and the Free Library will be maintained as formerly, with the various bequests and gifts made to it, as well as with funds from the Public Library when needed.

City Homes Improvement Company.

ALBANY, Jan. 8.—The City Homes Improvement Company of New York City was incorporated to-day with a capital of $500,000, to deal in and improve real estate in New York City and elsewhere. The Directors are Eugene F. Perry, Frederick W. Mattocks, and John J. McKelvey of New York City.

Industrial Colony for Colored People.

CAPE MAY, N. J., Jan. 8.—Prominent colored men met here to-day and considered the question of establishing an industrial colony in Cape May County. It is said that a wealthy colored man has agreed to establish the colony, giving each colonist a farm and seed and live stock enough to begin operation on an agreement to pay for the farm within ten years.

Sentence on George Holmes Suspended.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., Jan. 8.—Judge Reeve has suspended sentence on George Holmes of Bay Shore, charged with being one of the accessories to the murder of John Bunn at Bayshore, in that he knew of the crime and failed to report it to the authorities. Nearly all the business men at Bayshore signed a petition asking that his sentence be suspended on account of the good reputation he previously enjoyed and the fact that he had already served six months in jail awaiting trial. Richard Johnson died in jail while awaiting trial for the murder. Moses Whittington, indicted jointly with George Holmes as accessory, was sentenced to five years in Sing Sing Prison.

A SHEEP NEW TO SCIENCE

Klondike Curiosity Described to the Zoological Society.

Houses for Monkeys and Lions in Bronx Park to be Finest in the World —Other Improvements.

The first annual meeting of the New York Zoological Society since the opening of the zoological garden in Bronx Park was held last night at the Waldorf-Astoria. Henry F. Osborn, Chairman of the Executive Committee, presided in the absence abroad of Levi P. Morton, the President.

Director Hornaday stated that during his recent Western trip to secure animals for the garden, and to establish connections with Western hunters and trappers, a specimen of the skin of what proved to be an entirely new species of mountain sheep was sent to him from Dawson City. "This species," said Mr. Hornaday, "is absolutely new to science, and is so strikingly differentiated as to render its title to independent specific rank beyond question."

Mr. Hornaday has named it the Ovis Fannini in honor of Curator Fannin of the Provincial Museum of British Columbia. It is known in the Klondike region as a "saddle-backed" or "piebald" sheep. Its head, neck, breast, abdomen, and inside of forelegs are snow white. The other portions of the body are a brownish gray, giving the animal the appearance of being covered with a gray blanket.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Cleveland H. Dodge, and C. Ledyard Blair were elected to the Board of Managers, to serve until 1904.

The report of the Executive Committee, read by Henry F. Osborn, stated that the present membership of the society numbered 945, an increase of 271 during the year. It is desired to increase the membership to 3,000, which would enable the society to erect a new building every other year for housing the park animals. The report of the committee states that the park improvement fund on Jan. 1 amounted to $214,499.88. There is still a balance of $35,500.12, which must be subscribed by Aug. 1, in order to complete the fund of $250,000 which the society is obliged to raise under the original agreement with the city.

Additional subscriptions by those who have contributed largely in the past are as follows:

Levi P. Morton, $4,500; total, $6,500.
Jacob H. Schiff, $1,500; total, $6,500.
W. K. Vanderbilt, $1,000; total, $6,000.
William C. Whitney, $1,000; total, $6,000.
Percy R. Pyne, $1,000; total, $6,000.
John L. Cadwalader, $2,500; total, $5,300.
John S. Barnes, $2,500; total, $5,000.
E. A. Schermerhorn, $2,500; total, $5,000.
Charles T. Barney, $3,000; total, $4,000.
Hugh T. Chisholm, $2,550; total, $3,550.
James C. Carter, $1,500; total, $2,500.
Samuel D. Babcock, $1,500; total, $2,500.
George Crocker, $1,500; total, $2,500.
Henry F. Osborn, $1,000; total, $2,000.
W. C. Schermerhorn, $1,000; total, $2,000.

"The attendance at the park," said Mr. Osborn, "has been at times so large as seriously to crowd the buildings and paths, and when rapid transit becomes a reality the walks and paths will be taxed to their utmost to accommodate the crowds. The total attendance of the year was 525,923, the largest daily attendance being on Decoration Day—20,134.

"The plans of Baird Court in the park have been completed and the approval of the proper authorities secured. The park will be artistically developed and made as beautiful as possible. The monkey and lion houses to be erected, at a cost of $160,000, will be the most beautiful and perfectly appointed houses of the kind in the world. Antelope houses, pheasantries, and eagle and crane aviaries will also be erected. The park has now passed out of the initial stage of its existence, and its development will proceed as rapidly as the funds provided by the city and the society will permit."

Mr. Osborn announced that a motor road would soon be completed in the park, on which the society will operate its own motor carriages for the convenience of the public.

DRIVER BEATS OFF ASSAILANTS.

The display of brawn and muscle of John Matthies, driver of an express wagon for the Wooley Express Company, yesterday afternoon prevented the truck and its contents from being taken by highwaymen. Three men were in the hold-up, but only one, Dennis Murphy of 318 East Fourth Street, was arrested on a charge of highway robbery. The other two escaped.

The truck, which contained three big cases of cotton yarn and eighty dozen towels, was passing along Walker Street, near Centre Street, at 5:30 o'clock in charge of Matthies, when two men leaped on the truck and tried to throttle the driver and force him off the seat. A third man, who the police say was Murphy, jumped on the rear of the truck, his object being it is thought to drive off with the outfit as soon as his confederates put the driver out of the way. Matthies received several punches on the head, but fought back and finally succeeded in knocking his two assailants off the truck. Murphy refused to say who his confederates were.

WHY HE COULDN'T PAY HIS DEBTS

Kaufmann Says He Lost His Money While Going to Deposit It in Bank.

Charles Kaufmann, a shoe dealer, who until recently was in business at 1,340 Third Avenue, tells a queer story in his examination in bankruptcy, which is now going on before Ernest Hall, as referee. Mr. Kaufmann has creditors with claims aggregating $3,800, and these creditors are represented by the law firm of Hastings & Gleason.

Mr. Kaufmann says that on the Saturday before the Presidential election he sold his store for $4,000 cash. He received the money in gold and bills. At the same time he had $450 which he had saved from his business. He had had considerable anxiety over the outcome of the election, and he was afraid that Bryan would be elected, and with this fear he was certain that it would be far better to keep the cash on hand than deposit it in any bank. He carefully wrapped up all his money in a piece of paper and kept it at home.

When he found out on the next Wednesday that McKinley was safely elected he said that he was sure the country had been saved, and that the proper thing for him to do was to deposit his money in some bank. He remembered that four years previously he had an account in the Chatham Bank, and decided that he would go there with his $4,450. On his way down town he stopped at an insurance office and obtained the rebate due him on an insurance policy, as he wanted to add this money to the balance of his funds. He reached the bank and made out his deposit slip, and then he discovered that all his cash had disappeared. He did not know where it had gone.

Being asked by the referee where he had carried the money, he said he had placed the bundle in his right-hand hip pocket. He wore the same trousers at the hearing before the referee that he wore the day he lost the money. The hip pocket was put in evidence. It was an unusually large affair, being over seven inches in depth. This loss of money was the reason Mr. Kaufmann failed to pay his creditors. The referee's report has not yet been completed.

JAMES IRVING BURNS DEPOSED.

No Longer Leader of the Republican Party in Yonkers.

YONKERS, N. Y., Jan. 8.—Ex-State Senator James Irving Burns met his Waterloo to-night. For fifteen years Mr. Burns was the undisputed leader of the party in this county. About six years ago the fight against him began. Town after town was wrested from Burns's control. Yonkers was his last stand. Despite the popularity of Mayor Leslie Sutherland, which was so great that Mr. Burns could not prevent his nomination and renomination, Sutherland, until last Fall, always failed to obtain control of the City Committee.

At the election for delegates last Fall Sutherland triumphed. He elected sixteen out of the thirty-one members of the City Committee.

It was exactly 8 o'clock when the retiring Chairman called the committee to order to-night. At that time two Sutherland men were absent, and an effort was made to rush through the organization, but before a vote could be taken the two missing delegates appeared, and the Sutherland men were in control. Sutherland was elected Chairman of the Committee.

SENATE DEBATES ON THE ARMY CANTEEN

Discusses the Question for Nearly Five Hours.

Senators Gallinger and Hanabrough Say the Post Exchange Leads to Crime and Death.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—During the legislative session of to-day the Senate had under consideration the much-mooted canteen question, in connection with the Army Reorganization bill. The Senate Committee, in effect, restored the provision for a post exchange, or canteen, which had been stricken out of the bill by the House. For nearly five hours the Senate discussed the committee amendment, but a vote upon the proposition is not yet in sight. Senators Gallinger (Rep., N. H.,) and Hansbrough (Rep., N. D.,) vigorously opposed the amendment, and in turn it was quite as strenuously supported by Senators Sewell, (Rep. N. J.,) Hawley, (Rep., Conn.,) Money, (Dem., Miss.,) and Carter, (Rep., Mon.) It is possible a vote may be reached to-morrow afternoon.

Mr. Gallinger, in opposing the proposed amendment, declared that the old question whether saloons in the army should be legalized was again before Congress. He maintained that if beer was sold at post exchanges, other intoxicants, of course, would be sold. He made an extended argument in support of his position, quoting many eminent authorities to prove that the use of alcoholic stimulants among men in and out of armies was most deleterious in its effects.

In reply to Mr. Gallinger's argument, Mr. Sewell, a member of the Military Affairs Committee, discussed the canteen question at length. He had for a long time been a member of the Board of Managers of the soldiers' homes of the country. The canteen had been adopted at the soldiers' homes absolutely as a temperance measure. These canteens were allowed to sell only beer to the old soldiers, and it had been found that the inmates were willing to take a glass or two of beer at the canteen in preference to visiting the groggeries which surround nearly all of these institutions.

Mr. Sewell declared that the experience of the managers of the several homes was that the men preferred to patronize the canteen to a restricted extent rather than to go outside for worse drinks. He had seen hundreds of old soldiers brought to the homes under the influence of liquor before the adoption of the canteen system.

In concluding, Mr. Sewell said: "The American soldier ought not to be condemned to a reformatory. We cannot recruit the army if you abolish the post exchange. It is opposed to the soldier's idea of liberty to be tied down in that way, and he will not have it."

Mr. Hawley arose to declare that the post exchange promoted discipline and good order in the army. He said that the officers, as well as the men of the army, viewed with dismay the proposition to abolish the canteen. In the course of his statements, he was interrupted frequently by Mr. Pettigrew, (Sil., S. D.,) who wanted to learn the reasons for excluding wine from the post exchange. Finally, Mr. Hawley became impatient and declared he would not answer another question.

"I am quite well aware," retorted Mr. Pettigrew, "of the Senator's inability to answer any question."

Angry in an instant, the Connecticut Senator demanded with heat: "What does the Senator mean by that 'way low down' insult? Has he been to a saloon outside of the post exchange?"

The laughter which followed served to clear the atmosphere, and the incident passed.

In conclusion, Mr. Hawley said he hoped Congress would not add 20 or 30 per cent to the crimes and misdemeanors in the army by abolishing the post exchange.

Mr. Money, who followed Mr. Hawley, said he was thoroughly convinced that the post exchange promoted temperance, health, morals, and discipline among the soldiers of the army. He adverted to the prohibition of the sale of spirituous liquors on the Senate side of the Capitol, and said that, notwithstanding such prohibition, Senators could have all the whisky they desired in their committee rooms. He suggested that if Senators had not arrived at years of discretion in this matter they would better resign and go home.

Mr. Money quoted the Secretary of War, the Lieutenant General of the army, and other high army officials in support of the post exchange.

"Those officers," interrupted Mr. Gallinger, "have testified on both sides of the question, and the Senator must know it."

"I do not know it," replied Mr. Money. "That is a bit of information that is very interesting."

"The testimony of the General of the army and of the Surgeon General of the army," interjected Mr. Carter, "against the canteen all happens to have been given before the canteen was instituted. In the light of experience, they have changed their opinion."

In response to arguments advanced by Mr. Sewell and Mr. Money in favor of the post exchange, Mr. Gallinger directed attention to the system in the navy. Under the law, the sailors were given 5 cents per day in addition to their pay in lieu of grog rations. This had been found to be an excellent system, and he suggested it would be well to apply it to the army. He combatted Mr. Sewell's statement that courts-martial had been reduced 40 per cent. by the establishment of the canteen, declaring that during the first four years after the canteen was established courts-martial had been increased in the army 16 per cent. Mr. Hansbrough, who had been recognized as one of the leading opponents in Congress of the post exchange, declared that the use of beer degraded the men and detracted from their usefulness as soldiers and from their morality as men. The sale of beer in the canteen was demoralizing to the morals and discipline of the enlisted men. It had been shown, he said, quoting from a letter from an army officer, to be at the bottom of most of the trouble and misery of the soldier.

Mr. Hansbrough cited the fact that during a specified period in the Spanish war the deaths from disease in the army where the canteen had been established at every post had numbered more than 5,000, while there had not been a single death from disease in the navy, which had no canteen. The conclusion from such facts, he thought, was obvious. He hoped Congress would signalize the opening of the twentieth century by wiping from the statute books the authorization of the Government saloon.

Mr. Allison, (Rep., Iowa,) Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, then asked that some time be devoted to the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill, the Army bill being laid aside temporarily.

Mr. Sewell urged that the Army bill was very important and ought to be passed as soon as possible. He asked that unanimous consent be given to vote on the canteen amendment at 2 o'clock to-morrow. Mr. Teller (Silver Rep., Col.,) objected.

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs to-day agreed to accept in modified form the amendment to the Army bill suggested yesterday by Senator Hoar, (Rep., Mass.,) for the appointment of a commission to investigate the effect of the army canteen. The committee also agreed to an increase of fifty men for the Signal Corps.

A Substitute for the Army Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Among the bills introduced in the Senate to-day was one by Mr. Kenney, (Dem., Del.,) a substitute for the Army Reorganization bill. It provides for the maintenance of a regular army of 65,000 men under the present law, and the special enlistment of 35,000 additional troops for service in the Philippines during the emergency in those islands.

OFFERS A NEW CURRENCY BILL.

Mr. Overstreet Introduces Measure to Strengthen the Gold Standard.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Representative Overstreet of Indiana, who had charge of the Gold Standard bill in the House, introduced to-day a bill "to maintain the parity of the money of the United States." This measure seeks to further strengthen the gold standard and insure the continued parity of gold and silver by providing for their exchangeability at the Treasury. The text of the bill is as follows:

Section 1. That all gold and silver coins of the United States, except subsidiary coins, shall be exchangeable for each other at par at the Treasury of the United States at the demand of the holder.

Sec. 2. That for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, the Secretary of the Treasury may employ any part of the reserve fund of gold coin and bullion established by Section 2 of the act of March 14, 1900, entitled "An Act to define and fix the standard of value to maintain the parity of all forms of money issued or coined by the United States, to refund the public debt, and for other purposes," and money received in exchange for gold or bullion under the provisions of this act shall be held in said reserve fund, and not paid out except in the manner provided in regard to United States notes in said Section 2 of the act of March 14, 1900.

Sec. 3. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

WAR TAX IN THE SENATE.

Committee Holds First Meeting to Consider Reduction.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The Senate Committee on Finance to-day held a meeting for the consideration of the bill for the amendment of the war revenue law. The meeting was the first that has been held by the committee on this bill and the proceeding consisted entirely of a general discussion of its provisions, together with a comparison of opinions as to the possible revenues and expenditures of the Government for the next few years. The Treasury estimates were considered at some length, and some of the members of the committee submitted views of their own on the subject. No effort was made to formulate amendments and none were suggested.

The trend of sentiment appesred favorable to a greater reduction than was made by the House bill, but the members generally agree that there was not sufficient crystallization of sentiment to justify any conclusion as to the result of the committee's deliberations. No time was set for future meetings.

NEW YORKERS URGE ACTION.

Want Legislation by Congress on Bills of Interest to Business Men Here.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—J. M. Peters, Chairman, and Daniel McKeever, member, of the Committee on the Customs Administrative Act of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, were in Washington to-day to urge action by Congress on measures affecting the interests of many business men in New York. They found that the bill to provide an additional Circuit Judge for the Southern District, introduced by Senator Platt and Representative Sherman at the request of the Board of Trade and Transportation, and which seeks to provide a Justice who shall have time to devote to customs cases that are now unavoidably delayed by pressure of other business upon the Judges, is regarded with favor and is likely to become a law before the close of the session.

They also made inquiry concerning the bill proposing to increase the compensation of the examiners at the New York Custom House, which is considered a very important measure, but which does not seem likely to get through. For reasons similar to those that threaten the bill for the benefit of the examiners, it is considered extremely doubtful whether it will be possible to secure the passage of the bill providing for the retirement of the members of the Board of General Appraisers on a pension. The increased expense, however, is not the only objection to this measure, which is opposed on the ground that it will be a wedge to open the way to a civil pension list.

PHILIPPINE MUNICIPALITIES.

Commission Completes a New Code—Rebel Camps Destroyed.

MANILA, Jan. 8.—The Philippine Commission has completed the code for the government of municipalities. It will be enacted next week and supersede the military order of last March, under which many barrios (wards or districts) were organized. The general municipal elections take place in December. The act will not apply to Manila or the settlements of non-Christian tribes.

Ten residents of Pueblo have decided to petition the commission to organize a municipality there. The commission may organize one without the petition.

The military commander of a district is to appoint the police, and can suspend municipal officers for misconduct and disloyalty.

The lands and buildings used exclusively for religious, charitable, or educational work are exempted from taxation, the exemption to include no property held as an investment.

The municipalities are of four classes and will be officered according to population.

Several insurgent camps have been captured and destroyed recently in various districts of Luzon and Laroe. One camp was captured in the mountains of Marinduque. The enemy is very shy and generally escapes.

A scouting party of the Forty-sixth Regiment captured a score of Ladrones near Silang.

Arrests of suspected insurgents continue in Manila and its vicinity.

Paterno and other influential Independence Radicals are seeking to develop the two factions of the Federal Party. Paterno contends that, while the declared principles of the party will do for the present, eventually the Filipinos will seek fuller independence. Although he will not admit believing America's sovereignty is undesirable he says he wants the relations between the Philippines and the United States to be similar to those of Australia and Canada with Great Britain.

Senatorial Fight in New Hampshire.

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 8.—It was announced in the Legislature this afternoon that the Republican caucus for a United States Senator will be held Thursday evening. There are 301 Republicans in the House and 23 in the Senate, so that 163 votes will be required to nominate. Senator Chandler is a candidate for re-election, and those who aspire to succeed him are Henry E. Burnham of Manchester, Henry M. Baker of Bow, Congressman Scullowav of Manchester, Henry B. Quimby of Lakeport, and Henry W. Blair of Manchester. The contest is one of the keenest in the political history of the State.

Mayor of Santiago Removed.

SANTIAGO, Cuba, Jan. 8.—Telegraphic orders were received this afternoon removing Isidro Grinon, Mayor of Santiago, from office, and placing Señor Giro, Vice Mayor, in charge of the affairs of the municipality. This action is the result of the investigation of a commission, consisting of an army officer, an expert accountant, and a member of the Chamber of Commerce, into charges of irregularity in the conduct of municipal affairs.

Congressional Notes.

The House Committee on Commerce has reported favorably a bill for the construction of a third-class revenue cutter for Boston harbor, at a cost of $50,000.

The House yesterday passed a bill to pay the mileage of messengers who shall bring the Electoral votes of the several States to Washington at the rate of 25 cents per mile.

The House Committee on Agriculture yesterday gave a hearing to the wholesale seed men who argued against the free distribution of seed by the Government. They contended that the Government was interfering with private business.

The House Committee on War Claims yesterday reported favorably an omnibus claim bill embodying the findings of the Court of Claims under the Bowman and Tucker acts. The claims aggregate about $1,000,000. The committee also heard members of the South Carolina delegation upon the Senate bill for a settlement of the account between the United States and the State of South Carolina growing out of the war of 1812 and the Florida war. The balance due South Carolina, figuring interest, is claimed to be $395,692.

Arthur Humbert Not Violently Insane.

Pierre Humbert of 6 West Fifty-third Street, father of Arthur Humbert, who was placed in Bloomingdale Asylum on Wednesday, denies the story published in THE TIMES and other papers to the effect that his son has for a long time been insane; that his relatives have been unable to find him, and that he was violent and offered resistance when taken to Bloomingdale. He says that his son is in poor health, suffering from the effect of African fever, but his recovery is expected.

Verdict Against Metropolitan Company.

Capt. James H. Beattie, who placed upon the ocean the first American-built iron sailing ship, the bark Iron Age, which was launched in August, 1869, secured a verdict of $5,000 in the United States Circuit Court yesterday against the Metropolitan Street Railway Company. Capt. Beattie sued for $30,000 for injuries received on Jan. 3, 1899, at Broadway and Forty-third Street, while he was a passenger on a cable car. The case was heard before Judge Shipman and a jury and lasted a week.

McDonnell Held for Shooting Courtney.

Miles McDonnell, who shot and killed George Price and wounded Eugene Courtney and two other men in the Onawa café Dec. 29 last, and who on Monday was held in $5,000 bail by Coroner Hart for killing Price, was held in $2,000 bail in the Harlem Police Court yesterday on a charge of felonious assault for the shooting of Courtney. A certificate was presented to Magistrate Meade showing that Courtney was improving at St. Luke's Hospital.

HOUSE INCREASES ITS MEMBERSHIP TO 386

Passes a Reapportionment Bill After a Hot Fight.

Under It New York Gets Three Additional Congressmen and No State Loses Any.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—By a vote of 165 to 102 the House to-day accepted the reapportionment plan proposed by the Burleigh bill, which increases the membership of the House during the next decade from 357, the present membership and the membership proposed by the committee or Hopkins bill, to 386. The result was largely brought about by the exertions of certain Senators from several of the larger Northern States, who threw the weight of their influence into the scale in favor of the larger membership.

When it became apparent that these factors were at work against his bill, Mr. Hopkins attempted to compromise by giving an additional representative each to North Dakota, Colorado, and Florida, but his adversaries refused to compromise after complete victory was assured.

The Crumpacker proposition to recommit the bill for the purpose of ascertaining what States abridged the right to vote to an extent which would entail reduced representation was defeated, 130 to 110. There was no roll call on this vote, but a number of Republicans voted with the Democrats.

Under the bill as passed to-day, no State loses a Representative and the following make gains: Illinois, New York, and Texas three each; Minnesota, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania two each, and Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, North Dakota, Washington, West Virginia, and Wisconsin one each.

The bill provides that whenever a new State is admitted the Representative assigned to it shall be in addition to the number provided in the bill. It also adds a provision, never hitherto incorporated in a reapportionment bill, to the effect that Congressional districts in addition to being "contiguous" shall also be "compact." States which are allowed additional Representatives by the bill shall, by its terms, elect them at large until the Legislature shall redistrict the State.

When the time came for action on the reapportionment matter, the general debate having been closed, a variety of propositions was offered the House. Mr. Burleigh (Rep., Me.,) offered the first section of his bill making the total membership of the House 386 members, as a substitute for the first section of the Hopkins bill. Mr. Spalding (Rep., N. D.,) offered the amendment to increase the membership provided for in the Hopkins bill from 357 to 360 and assigning the three additional Representatives to North Dakota, Colorado, and Florida. William Alden Smith (Rep., Mich.,) offered an amendment to the Burleigh substitute to fix the membership at 395. Mr. Shackleford (Dem., Mo.,) attempted to offer a substitute for Mr. Spalding's motion to increase the membership of the House to 400, but the motion was held not to be in order.

The vote was first taken upon the Spalding amendment to the original text of the Hopkins bill to increase the membership to 360, and assigning the additional Representatives to Colorado, Florida, and North Dakota, and it prevailed without division. The Smith amendment to the Burleigh substitute was defeated 85 to 136. The Burleigh substitute then was adopted 165 to 102. The announcement was greeted with a round of applause.

Mr. Clark (Dem., Mo.,) offered an amendment to create a Territory out of the District of Columbia and allow the District a Delegate in the House. The amendment was ruled out of order. The House indulged Mr. Clark for five minutes, however, and he delivered a thoroughly characteristic speech in advocacy of his proposition. He said he considered it an "outrage" that 300,000 people living within the shadow of the National Capitol should be denied representation on the floor of the House. The only objection raised to the proposition, he said, came from the fine-haired and silk-stockinged citizens, who declared that if the people of the District were allowed to vote, the "poor whites and the coal-heavers" would vote them into bankruptcy.

Mr. Tayler (Rep., Ohio,) expressed the opinion that the provision requiring that Congressional districts should be "contiguous and compact" was absolutely unconstitutional and should have no place in an apportionment bill. But as the provisions relative to "contiguous" distriots had been in previous bills he would make no objection against the adoption of the committee amendment, adding the words "and compact." Some of the Democrats protested vigorously, and a roll call was finally forced upon its adoption. The amendment was adopted 130 to 110.

After the bill had been read a third time Mr. Crumpacker (Rep., Ind.,) moved to recommit the bill, with instructions to ascertain what States had abridged the right to vote to an extent sufficient to reduce their representation, and to report the facts to the House. On a rising vote the motion was lost—94 to 136. Several Republicans, including Messrs. Pearson, Scudday, Littlefield, (Me.,) Allen, (Me.,) Hill, (Conn.,) Jenkins, (Wis.,) and Joy (Mo.) voted with the Democrats against the motion. Mr. Stewart (Rep., N. J.,) demanded the yeas and nays, but only fourteen members seconded his demand. The bill was then passed.

Mr. White, (Rep., N. C.,) the only colored man in the House, created something of a sensation while the bill was in the amendment stage by a fiery speech of five minutes, denouncing the traducers of his race. He had tried to obtain an opportunity to be heard during the general debate, he said, but it had been denied him. He was, he said, the representative of one-eighth of the population of the country, of a race that had been grossly misrepresented and maligned by three members of the House during the pending debate. He was glad, however, that the idle and slanderous words had come from young men, against whom the statute of youth could be pleaded.

Mr. White said he would take occasion a little later, in a speech which perhaps would be his valedictory, to defend the men of his race, who were no less American citizens than those of white skin and Caucasian blood. Mr. White's remarks received a whirlwind of applause from the public gallery, in which were seated many of his race.

REPUBLICANS THE GAINERS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—With the Burleigh scheme of apportionment adopted, the vote in the Electoral College will be increased in 1904 from 447 to 476. The Hopkins scheme did not disturb either the whole number of electoral votes or give any advantage to either party. By the terms of the bill as approved to-day, the 29 additional votes in the Electoral College will go: 10 to the Democrats and 19 to the Republicans, on the basis of the vote as cast in the election last November.

The prospect was known to all Democratic members who had read the reports on the several bills proposed, but it did not prevent Democrats from voting in considerable numbers to reject the Hopkins bill when it was certain that by rejecting that measure the Burleigh amendment or something much worse for the Democrats would be accepted. The gain of ten members for Democratic States does not seem to have been sufficient justification to all Democrats for support of so politically injurious a proposition as that adopted.

The division of the house was remarkable. Of the 165 votes cast for the Burleigh amendment 89 were cast by Republicans and 76 by Democrats and others. Of the 102 votes cast in opposition to the Burleigh amendment 53 were cast by Republicans and 49 by Democrats. States were found to be very decidedly affected by the desire to hold on to or gain members. This was not the case, however, with New York. Of the 22 members from the Empire State present and voting 8 voted to secure increased representation and 14 voted against any further increase. The members who voted to increase were Cochrane, Gillett, O'Grady, Ray, Tompkins, and Wadsworth, Republicans, and Levy and Sulzer, Democrats. In opposition to increased representation were Ketcham, Littauer, Sherman, Vreeland, Republicans, and Fitzgerald, Glynn, McClellan, May, Muller, Ruppert, Ryan, Scudder, Underwood, and Wilson, Democrats.

It is the belief among Republican Senators that the bill will be put through the Senate without change or delay.

Wants Constitution Amended.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Representative Henry C. Smith of Michigan to-day proposed the following amendment to the Constitution: "The House of Representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several States, and the electors in each State shall have the qualifications hereafter prescribed by act of Congress, which qualifications shall be uniform in all States of the United States."

PNEUMATIC TUBE SERVICE.

Committee Appointed by Post Office Department Recommends Extensions Here.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith to-day sent to the House of Representatives a report showing the results of a complete and exhaustive expert investigation into the cost, operation, &c., of the pneumatic tube postal service, with a view to determining whether the service should be owned, leased, extended, or discontinued by the Government. The Chairman of the committee making the investigation was Theodore C. Search, President of the National Association of Manufacturers.

The committee fully sustains the pneumatic method of mail transportation as a valuable and mechanically successful system. In this view the Postmaster General concurs, saying: "In the great cities the pneumatic tube service is too important and vital an agency of postal expedition to be abandoned. It is an instrumentality which within reasonable limitations has come to stay as a part of the modern system of communication. It can no more be discarded than the fast mail train."

The report contains much interesting information concerning the usefulness and cost of pneumatic tube service. For New York the joint committee discusses a proposition for the installation of eighteen miles of new line, at a cost of $925,000, and assumes a five-year contract. The rental proposed is $398,500 annually for the new and the continuance of existing tube service. A mixed mail and commercial service had been suggested, but this the committee does not consider permissible.

The proposition involved the connection of twenty-one stations and the main office. The figures of $398,500 included all costs of operation. The reasonableness of this figure is considered to be outside the province of the committee and to be determinable only by engineering experts. In detail, this amount consists of $136,000 for power, $80,000 for wages of station operators, $18,500 for local taxes, and $184,500 for interest, renewals, and administration, and incidental expenses.

The present service of 5.18 miles costs $167,100, or $33,420 per mile per annum. The estimates for the total extended service is stated as $398,500 for twenty-three miles, or $17,326 per mile per annum. This is 54 per cent. of the present mileage charge. Possible economies incidental to the use of the pneumatic system as proposed, as by reduction of wagon service, elevated railway service, and incidental savings, are reckoned at $101,052; gains by stimulated correspondence and postal business and by reductions of charges for special delivery from 8 to 5 cents, $24,000; by reductions of cost of delivery, $16,000; by reduction of clerical force, $15,000; total, $156,052.

The net increase of costs is reckoned thus as $75,348, which amounts to but 6 per cent. of the net local revenue of the New York office. On this basis the joint committee recommends to the department that the proposed extension be undertaken.

The subject was investigated in Brooklyn by a special "joint committee," which, revising the report of the local committee, approved the recommendations of the latter committee. This contemplated the construction of seven new connections, amounting to 13.5 miles at a cost of $172,097, or of five such connections, amounting to 8.88 miles for $138,113; or of two connections, amounting to 5.17 miles, at $105,999 per annum, each conditional upon the proposals proving on investigation to be reasonable. A fourth proposition involved the same constructions as the third above, with Station A added, at a figure of $102,000. All proposals included the continued operation of the existing system, which is the connection now in operation between New York and Brooklyn.

Charts accompanying the legal reports show that the proposed New York extension is to be run from the General Post Office to West Broadway, thence north by Canal, Greene, Fifth Avenue, (with a siding by way of Thirteenth Street West to the Bethune Street Station and south along Greenwich Avenue to the foreign branch,) the main line continuing up Fifth and Sixth Avenues and along Broadway to Sixty-ninth Street, then keeping to Columbus Avenue as far as One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. The existing line is to be continued north on the east side from the Grand Central Station to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street.

The Brooklyn scheme is to carry one line over Adams Street to Fulton Street, and then eastward to Pennsylvania and Atlantic Avenues. The second proposed route is to run from Adams Street along Myrtle Avenue, and then toward the Eastern District by Clymer Street, then along Broadway to the extreme point reached by the other line.

Lieut. Smith Dead at Manila.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The War Department has been informed of the death at Manila to-day of First Lieut. Louis P. Smith, Assistant Surgeon, United States Army. Lieut. Smith was born in and appointed from the District of Columbia in November, 1896. In November, 1899, he sailed for the Philippines. He was sick at Manila up to the time of his death.

THE UNITED SERVICE.

Army.

First Lieut. Eugene P. Jervey, Jr., Tenth Cavalry, now at West Point, under orders to join his troop, will report to Capt. Ammon A. BROODED FOR HER SWEETHEART.

Kate Schochet Becomes Violent and Attacks Her Father.

Brooding over the death of her sweetheart, who died five years ago, shortly before the day set for their wedding, drove Kate Schochet of 190 Orchard Street insane on Monday evening, and she was taken to Bellevue Hospital at 3 o'clock yesterday morning after having made a desperate effort to kill her father.

The woman was for nine months in an asylum shortly after the death of her fiancé, but recovered and was sent back to live with her father, Philip, who is a tailor. Two weeks ago she became melancholy and showed signs of returning insanity. At 7 o'clock Monday evening, while the family was at dinner, she became violent and pulled the tablecloth from the table and the dishes with it. Shortly before 3 o'clock she attempted to jump out of the window. She then ran into the kitchen and securing a large knife made a desperate effort to stab her father. She was finally overpowered and sent to the hospital.

The Contest of Mrs. Winters's Will.

The Winters will contest is now on for a hearing before Justice Bischoff and a jury in the Supreme Court. In 1894 Byram L. Winters, then thirty years old, married a widow named Dooley, who was about seventy years of age. Mrs. Winters died in 1898, leaving nearly all of her property to her young husband. She gave a few pictures to the Metropolitan Museum of Art and $20,000 cash to Hildreth Field. Relatives contested the will, and at the hearing gave testimony that Mrs. Winters had numerous admirers and had been engaged several times shortly before she married Mr. Winters. The estate is very large.

STATUS OF PORTO RICO.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Argument was begun in the United States Supreme Court at 3:35 o'clock to-day in the Porto Rican customs cases, now before that court. The consolidated cases were taken up, and F. R. Coudert spoke in behalf of the plaintiffs against the Government in the cases known as the De Luna case. Mr. Coudert devoted considerable time to showing that Porto Rico is not a "foreign country," as that term is understood in the Dingley law, under which the tariff on the Porto Rican sugar imported was imposed in this case. He said that by the Paris treaty Porto Rico had come in completely under the sovereignty and dominion of the United States, and was a geographical part of what Marshall had called the "American empire."

He argued that the clause of the Paris treaty leaving the determination of the civil rights and political status of the native inhabitants to Congress was "merely declaratory of the power given by the Constitution to withhold political rights and franchises and to establish civil government and enact municipal law in all places where no State government exists."

He laid down the general proposition that the Constitution is a charter or grant of powers conferred upon the Federal Government by the people of the United States, and hence that the Federal Government has no existence outside the Constitution. Therefore, he said, it was an impossibility for the United States to possess territory beyond its "Constitutional bounderies." There was, indeed, no boundary to the Constitution other than the whole sphere of the activity of the Federal Government; outside of that sphere the Government could only act by usurpation. Even the freedom from restraint given the President as Commander in Chief of the army was a grant by the Constitution.

With peace restored, Congress had become supreme in legislating for the island acquired, but it was, he thought, a question whether Congress had not in the Porto Rico act violated the Constitutional restrictions "which lie at the centre and foundation of the Federal powers."

Mr. Coudert asserted that as the Dingley act imposed a duty only on goods imported from "foreign countries," it could have no applicability to goods brought from Porto Rico to the United States, as Porto Rico ceased to be "foreign" after the ratification of the Paris treaty. Such an act was a violation of the Constitutional provision requiring uniformity of duties throughout the United States.

He also contended that the Porto Ricans are citizens of the United States, and referred to the anomaly of giving courts which were not courts of the United States, according to the contention of the Government counsel, power to make citizens of the United States as territorial courts do by naturalization.

Mr. Coudert had not concluded his argument when the court adjourned for the day. He will be followed by the order named by Paul Fuller, J. C. Haney, and H. M. Ward for the importers. Ex-Secretary Carlisle will close for them, but not until after Attorney General Griggs and Solicitor General Richards have spoken for the Government. The Government's representatives probably will not be heard before Thursday, and Mr. Carlisle not before Friday.

WOMAN ILLEGALLY DETAINED.

Held as Insane in Bellevue on Certificate of Physicians.

Serbo Felice Donato, who had been held at Bellevue Hospital without the usual court proceedings, was released from custody yesterday by Justice Fitzgerald, in the Supreme Court, upon a writ of habeas corpus obtained by her husband, Alexander Donato, a carpenter, living at 300 East One Hundred and Fifteenth Street. Mrs. Donato became very hysterical on Jan. 2, and on the advice of Dr. Stolfi, her physician, her husband took her to Bellevue Hospital for treatment. She was locked up in the pavilion for the insane, instead of being taken to the maternity ward, where she expected to go. On Jan. 5 Donato was notified that Drs. Fitch and Wildman had declared that Mrs. Donato was insane and that proceedings had been instituted to have her permanently committed.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Cowie appeared for the hospital authorities. After the hearing Justice Fitzgerald said:

"There is no authority to hold her, and she was detained without authority of law. I direct, however, that she be here to-morrow on the return of the application of the Commissioner of Charities to have her committed on the certificate of the examining physicians."

Mrs. Donato went home with her husband, on her promise to return to court to-day.

RABBI MOSES'S INSTALLATION.

His New Congregation to Welcome Him on Friday.

The Rev. Dr. Isaac S. Moses, who was recently called to the pulpit of the Congregation Ahawath Chesed Shaar Hashomayim, situate corner of Lexington Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, will be formally installed as rabbi there by the Rev. Dr. K. Kohler on Friday evening.

Dr. Moses was born in Santo Michael, Province of Posen, in 1848. From 1864 to 1869 he attended the Rabbinical Seminary at Breslau, and also the university in that city. From 1869 to 1873 he was a teacher at the Brunnesscha Institute in Segnitz, Bavaria; he came to America in 1872 and made his home in St. Louis. His first charge was the Reform Congregation in Quincy, Ill., where he remained for five years. In 1879 he received a call from Milwaukee to occupy the pulpit in the Temple Emanu-El, and after eight years' service there he accepted a call from Nashville, Tenn. The following year he was called to the Congregation Anshe Maariv, (Men of the West,) and resigned his pulpit in 1896. Since that time he has been the Rabbi of the Temple Israel of Chicago.

Dr. Moses published an edition of the Bible for family reading. He is also the author of the Union Prayer Book, which was adopted by the Central Conference of American Rabbis, held in New York City in 1892.

In 1872 he married Miss Lillie Strauss of St. Louis. A reception will be given to him and his wife at Tuxedo Hall on Jan. 17.

MISSING HEIR WANTED.

J. J. Silliman, formerly an employe at the Hotel Endicott, has an estate waiting for him to turn up and prove his identity. The estate comes to him through a grandfather, who disappeared nearly thirty-five years ago. The entire property is situated in Washington, D. C., and is worth from $30,000 to $40,000.

Silliman, who is described as a very well educated man, visited Lawyer Thomas McAdam in 1889, and told him that his grandfather, Timothy Gleason, had disappeared from Washington in 1866, leaving considerable valuable real estate in possession of his second wife, and that he was the sole other heir. Mr. McAdam investigated the case and found that Silliman's claim was good. The lawyer, through his Washington correspondents, tried to get Mrs. Gleason to agree to sign papers recognizing Silliman as the direct heir of the property, he in turn to allow her to have a life interest in the property.

She declined to enter into any such agreement, and as a result it was determined to wait until her death before any claim was made to the property. At this time Silliman was employed at the Hotel Endicott, and he remained there until 1893, when he left suddenly. Mr. McAdam heard nothing more either from Silliman or from Washington until March, 1899, when he was notified that Mrs. Gleason was very ill and would die at any time, and that Silliman had better go to Washington ready to claim his property. Mr. McAdam tried to find his client at that time, but could not do so.

Last Fall Mrs. Gleason died. Like his grandfather, Silliman has disappeared, and advertisements and letters of inquiry to his former friends have as yet failed to locate him. The last trace of him ends when, in 1894, he had charge, as janitor, of an apartment house on Upper Broadway.

Killed by New York Central Train.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Jan. 8.—The southbound fast mail train on the New York Central Railroad this morning killed an unknown man, who was walking the track just below the station here. The victim was a man of about thirty-two years, 5 feet 5 inches in height, with brown hair and a light mustache. In his pocket was an old bank book of the Middletown (N. Y.) National Bank, showing a balance of $2,010 due to J. M. Colwell.

WE APOLOGIZE—

If in the rush of yesterday you did not receive proper attention, please accept our apologies and the assurance that now we have this gigantic sale well in hand. Yesterday's business hardly made an impression on the immense stock of up-to-date fabrics we are showing, never offered before for less than $15, but scheduled to go during the next sixty days at the unheard-of price of—

The Same LOFTUS QUALITY OF GOODS
The Same LOFTUS QUALITY OF WORK
THE SAME LOFTUS FIT AND STYLE
$12.50 SUIT or OVERCOAT.

This is no "hurrah" sale to attract attention. We have decided to abandon our Park Row branch and consolidate our business in our Broadway establishment, and as we are physically unable to accommodate two immense stocks in one store and as the season is late the goods must be disposed of.

SKULL FRACTURED IN A FIGHT.

As the result of a saloon quarrel, John Sohl of 423 West Twenty-fifth Street is in the New York Hospital from a fractured skull, and his friend, Harry Heincken of 331 West Twenty-seventh Street, spent the night in prison on a charge of felonious assault. Sohl is forty years old, has a family, and is foreman of a coal yard on West Twenty-fifth Street. Heincken is twenty-five years old and is President of the Manhattan Hygeia Ice Company, at 425 West Twenty-fifth Street. He was only recently married, and is said to be a man of means.

The police report that the two men, with a man named Tietjen, spent a couple of hours, previous to midnight Monday night drinking in a saloon at Ninth Avenue and Twenty-fifth Street. Sohl's money gave out, and Heincken promptly took out a roll of bills and handed his friend some money. The conversation up to this time had been pleasant, but its character suddenly changed. At 12:30 o'clock the trio left the saloon, still quarreling, and when they reached the sidewalk Heincken, it is said, struck Sohl a blow with his fist, knocking him down. The back of Sohl's head struck the pavement. He became unconscious and blood spurted from his mouth and ears. His two companions ran away, but the assault had been witnessed by several persons living across the street, and they went to Sohl's assistance. The wounded man was taken to the hospital, and, from descriptions of Heincken furnished by the witnesses, he was traced to his home and arrested.

At the West Twentieth Street Station House he denied all knowledge of the assault, saying that he left the saloon before midnight and went right home. Later, however, in pleading to be allowed to go home, he mentioned that the affair was an accident. When Heincken was arraigned in the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday afternoon, detectives who had been to the hospital reported that Sohl was much better and refused to make a complaint against Heincken. The latter was then discharged.

MRS. TERRELL'S TRUNK FOUND.

Mrs. Cordelia Terrell, mother-in-law of J. Norman De Ruyter Whitehouse, of 10 West Thirtieth Street, whose trunk, containing Parisian dresses, jewels, and bibelots, valued at $6,000, was stolen from an express wagon recently, recovered her property yesterday through the efforts of Central Office Detectives Price and McCafferty, who had been assigned to the case by Capt. CROKER THE HEAD PROTECTOR OF VICE.

Out of its own mouth Tammany is convicted of organized corruption, and RICHARD CROKER is arraigned as the accomplice of criminals and head protector of vice. Mr. NIXON admits that he has discovered the existence of the organization known as the "gambling commission" that regularly collects money from the gamblers in payment for its services in protecting them from police interference; he admits that the police are, in fact, restrained from interfering; and in his own person, by the fact of his appointment by CROKER to the Chairmanship of the Committee of Five and by the use he has made of that office he demonstrates that CROKER is the supreme authority whose commands the police, from the lowest to the highest, all obey, whose word is law to the Tammany organization, who might at any time have caused the law to be enforced.

When NIXON spoke the Chief and the Captains hastened to close the unlawful resorts, for they knew that he spoke with the voice and the authority of CROKER. Wonders were done in a day. The poolrooms shut up with magical simultaneity, the dreadful trade of the "red light" district was suspended, vice was visibly less brazen in the streets. What the purification societies had failed to do in years of tireless effort, what the law, the reform committees, and legislative investigators have been powerless to accomplish, was done at once when CROKER gave the word of command. That the check was only temporary shows merely the belief of the vicious that the Committee of Five is not in earnest.

Why has RICHARD CROKER not given the word of command before? Why has this abominable league of the officers of the law with the violators of the law carried on its business for years under his very nose without evoking from him the order to put a stop to it?

These questions bring clearly into view the perilous position in which CROKER has placed himself. Mr. NIXON has left him no avenue of escape. Mr. BALDWIN, Chairman of the Committee of Fifteen, backed by the reform sentiment and all the resources of law and good citizenship, could not and can not hope to destroy CROKER as effectually as Mr. NIXON has done it, unwittingly and with every wish and motive to shield and exculpate his victim.

We hope the community understands that an entirely new situation has been created by Chairman NIXON'S irrevocable avowal that vice and lawbreaking flourish here under Tammany protection. This is the first admission from a Tammany source that the controlling police authorities are corrupt and that vice is regularly assessed to pay for the immunity it enjoys. This confession is of the very highest importance. Heretofore Tammany has met every charge with denial and defiance. THE TIMES published on March 9, 1900, the original story of the "gambling combine," and a list of the open poolrooms. The police made no move, none of the head men of Tammany paid any attention to the story except to deny that it was true. On July 20 THE TIMES told of the "extra assessment" levied upon the gamblers by the "combine." In both cases it had evidence of the truth of what it printed. Nothing came from Tammany but denials and defiance. Now Mr. CROKER himself, by his deputy, whose acts and admissions he cannot disclaim, tells us that the Gambling Commission does exist, and that it levies blackmail on the poolrooms and gambling houses. He tells us of the "extra assessment." He tells us that "immunity from arrest has been sold"—these are Mr. NIXON'S words. Sold by whom? By the "organization of men known as the combine, that is organized for systematic blackmail." The gamblers pay promptly, "having found that certain men who act in defiance of the 'combine's' orders are given short shrift." It is established, therefore, that the Chief of Police, the Police Captains, the entire police organization, obey the "combine." But when CROKER speaks, when his appointed deputy calls upon the police authorities to close unlawful resorts and aid him in the work of breaking up the system of corruption organized by the "combine," he is obeyed. CROKER is the overlord, he is supreme. In the hollow of his hand he holds the police and the "combine," too. At last we have traced responsibility to its ultimate head. The chief of Tammany is revealed as the great protector of vice.

It is altogether futile for Mr. NIXON to affirm that CROKER never received a cent, that Tammany never received a cent, of the money with which vice purchased its immunities. It is something worse than futile for him to insist that CROKER was ignorant of the conditions on the lower east side that brought about the appointment of his committee, ignorant of the operations of the "combine." That is contrary to human experience, and must be dismissed as incredible by every reasoning man. But it is not the destination of the money, it is not even the prevalence of vice, that is the chief concern of this community at the present moment. It is the fact that money is paid by persons engaged in unlawful and immoral occupations for immunity from molestation, which is, in fact, accorded them. That this condition exists has long been known on information and belief. It is now established by the confession of Mr. CROKER himself, through his deputy, who announces that the evidence to support his statements has been obtained. If the moral elements in the community, having thus seen the charges of corruption irrefutably established, cannot now destroy the system and hurl the protectors of vice from their places of power, it must be said of them that they desire and deserve no better government than they now have and no cleaner social environment than the one they have so long tolerated.

Of the ruin and the contaminations of protected vice it is the duty of every decent man in the city to inform himself in order that he may be fired to a working pitch of resentment. In a city where an honest effort was made by the police to enforce the law against poolrooms there would be no such multitudinous temptations put in the way of young clerks and trusted employes to become thieves and defaulters. At the trial of Capt. HERLIHY on Monday a fallen woman gave testimony to unimaginable horrors that have become the common condition of vicious life in what is known as the "red light" district. Such things could not be if the practice and procurement of immorality had not become an organized trade out of which men who control the City Government make their hideous living. By acts and utterances that from the Tammany point of view are amazing blunders, but from the point of view of decency and clean government are public services of a high order, Mr. NIXON'S committee has put it into the power of the people of the city to put a stop to this detestable corruption. It can be stopped, it must be stopped.

REAPPORTIONMENT.

It is gratifying to observe that the drift of opinion in the House of Representatives itself, as shown in the debate yesterday, is the same as that of the country at large, upon the question of reapportionment. That is to say, the House agrees that it is already too numerous for the proper and orderly transaction of its business. It could not be expected to reduce its own numbers. That it should be willing to reject personal considerations to the extent of resolving not to increase them is rather remarkable and very creditable.

That we take to be the real meaning of the favor with which the Hopkins bill was regarded by most of the speakers in the debate yesterday. It is also, of course, true that the more numerous the House, the less will be the consideration with which the individual member will be regarded, if he be an average member. But, to do the speakers justice, we do not believe that that was in their minds. It did not need to be, for they were leading members, who are likely to remain so, whatever changes occur in the composition of the body.

If the States in which negroes are disfranchised avow the policy of such disfranchisement, and their own readiness to take the consequences in reduced representation, they will undoubtedly be playing a manly part. But also they will, as Gen. GROSVENOR pointed out yesterday, be introducing into American politics a very big and fateful question, far beyond that of reapportionment. We need not cross that bridge until we come to it. And it has, happily, no necessary bearing upon the question just now before the House.

AUSTRALASIAN TRADE.

One of the most interesting contributions to THE TIMES Annual Financial Review this year was that by our correspondent from Sydney on the expansion of the trade of Australasia. That vast continent is now in more than one regard the United States of the Pacific. With the completion of the plan of federation so long pursued, freedom of commerce will prevail between the various provinces of the Federation, and a new stimulus will be given to the enterprise and industry of the whole Australian people, which in its turn will affect their foreign commerce. For the first time in their brief but prosperous career the Australasians come under substantially the same influences which, in despite of our hindering tariff, have insured the rapid and steady development of our wealth, resources, and activity.

The temper and character of the two peoples have also much in common. In the case of each there has been grafted on the English stock hardy shoots of the most energetic races of Europe. The conditions of life in a new country have produced the same qualities of courage, self-confidence, and endurance. The Australians have happily been saved the necessity of a political or commercial revolution to establish their practical independence, and have been permitted by the mother country, taught wisdom by her experience with us, to go their way untrammeled, enjoying all the advantages of liberty and thriving under its responsibilities. It is natural that there should be a close commercial bond between us and Australia, which would have been still closer and mutually more profitable had it not been embarrassed by the protective tariff in our own country and in parts of Australia. As it is, the trade between the two peoples has grown marvelously, especially within the last few years, in which the progress of our industries has to some extent reduced tariff restrictions and enabled us to seek abroad the markets we formerly found only at home.

In view of the fact that the new Federation will have the arrangement of tariff regulations for the entire country, the following remarks by our Sydney correspondent are of interest:

> Generally speaking, the situation is extremely simple. In Australia and New Zealand the United States is in greater favor than France, Germany, and other countries as a source of manufactured supply. American firms, with their experience of Californian and other industrial requirements, more readily understanding the wants of the Australasian. But the trade cannot be all on one side. If the Australasians are to buy American goods on a larger scale, they naturally expect Americans to become larger consumers of Australasian produce.
>
> These considerations will largely influence the character of the Federal tariff. There is a strong Australian party in favor of a preferential tariff with Great Britain, Canada, &c., and its leaders have expressed a willingness to include the United States should a desire to that effect be expressed by the American Government. In the meantime the course of trade rests on a thoroughly sound basis, with every prospect of steady expansion, despite the many adverse influences at work in Europe as well as in the United States, and there is every reason for believing that the commercial relations existing between the United States and the Australian Commonwealth during 1901 will be more encouraging than during any previous period of their history.

THE CANTEEN.

We cannot imagine any disposition of an important public question sillier and more cowardly than that yesterday accepted by the Military Committee of the Senate. That was the proposition, made, we are sorry to say, by Senator HOAR, that a commission should be appointed "to investigate the effect of the army canteen." Because, if there is any subject in the world upon which all the relevant testimony is already in, it is this same subject of the effect of the canteen. If there be any belated legislator who is still in doubt about it, he can resolve his doubts by sending over to the War Department, or to the Adjutant General's office, for the testimony that has been given on the subject. No "commission" could elicit any better testimony, or any different testimony. And the testimony is, by an overwhelming preponderance, that of all the devices that have been from time to time proposed for the promotion of temperance in the United States Army, the Post Exchange, of which the canteen is an integral factor, is the very best and most effective.

Why, then, appoint a commission to verify results which are already established? What is established is that the canteen is not only a great promoter of temperance, but that it is an almost perfect preventive against the vices, both physically and morally so horrible and injurious, to which the enlisted men of the army are tempted if they have to go outside their own quarters for the alcoholic stimulation which, in their own quarters, is, by the consent of everybody concerned, reduced to the mild stimulation of beer, to which we should like to see light wines added of no greater alcoholic strength.

These things are proved, to anybody who knows the meaning of the word, with a conclusiveness to which the researches of a Congressional commission could add nothing, and from which the researches of such a commission could take nothing away. Unless we take the ground that the officers of the army are inexpert witnesses, or that they are liars, we must admit this to be so.

The W. C. T. U. has a view of its own against which no amount of testimony can prevail. It is that the recruit of the army is an innocent and inexperienced suckling, who would never think of drinking anything intoxicating unless temptation to such drinking were put in his way, and that the canteen puts temptation in his way, and hence is anathema. But there is no adult male who does not know this to be bosh. Every adult male who repeats it, including Mr. DUNNE, who has had the grace to keep quiet of late, but who is, putatively, an adult male, convicts himself either of inexcusable ignorance or of gross dishonesty. Mr. DUNNE has not, in times past, shrunk from the conclusion that the officers of the army are a set of bullied liars. No wonder he keeps quiet. It is the offense of gross dishonesty which a Senate of adult males committed yesterday in consenting to institute an "inquiry" into a case already proved. As we began by saying, its conduct is silly and cowardly. Not one of the Senators who was sneak enough to pretend that he wanted more light on the question was really in doubt. Neither could any one of them really believe that the W. C. T. U. could be convinced, though one rose from the dead, if it were not convinced already. Dean SWIFT justly observed that no man could be reasoned out of an ill opinion which by reasoning he never acquired. If that is true of men it is far truer of women. Inaccessibility to reason and evidence is a charming feminine trait. But when that inaccessibility is exhibited by the Senate of the United States, or any other body of adult males, it ceases to be charming and becomes disgusting.

BELLEVUE.

Undoubtedly, when things come to that pass, in a public institution, that three of the persons employed therein have to be indicted for manslaughter in the first degree, in consequence of their official malfeasance or nonfeasance, it is time that there should be a change. Mr. KELLER, luckily, made his change just before, and not just after, the finding of the Grand Jury.

Doubtless he made it with good judgment. The record of his appointee to the superintendence of the Insane Pavilion seems to be entirely clean, and may even be brilliant. But a change of persons does not seem to meet the criticisms that have been made against the system upon which the Insane Pavilion has been conducted. The criticism of the system has been that there has not been, as there ought to be, always a physician present in the pavilion who could be held responsible not only for good order and decency, which appear to have been promiscuously violated, but also for such expert knowledge as should prevent the detention, as lunatics, of persons who to experts were evidently sane.

Mr. KELLER seems to acknowledge the force of these criticisms by appointing a person who is an M. D. to take the place of a lay politician. But his appointee, by the very fact of being also put in charge of three other hospitals, can evidently not give his whole attention to Bellevue, and cannot be held responsible for the playful or murderous vagaries of the nurses. We printed the other day the recommendation made to Mr. KELLER, early in his term, that there should always be a responsible doctor in charge in the Insane Pavilion. That would fix the responsibility for misdemeanor, as it has not been fixed heretofore, and as it will not be fixed hereafter by a mere change of persons, unaccompanied by a reform in the system.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—If Galveston had been as well protected by sea walls before the great storm as it has been since by its newspapers, it could have offered bold defiance even to the sea. For the Galveston newspapers are fine products of the New South, with courage equaling their enterprise, and hardly had the waters heaped up by the cyclone begun to subside before they urged the rebuilding of another city on the stricken site. Hope overcame despair, and now The Galveston News has issued a special number full of well-justified exultation over the reparative marvels already accomplished, and expressing the boldest confidence in the future. The generosity of the rest of the country and the credit of Galveston herself have both been used to the utmost in the work of restoration; and already the business of the city has recovered much of its former proportions. The harbor is there, and, of course, it is going to be utilized. Trade currents, once established, cannot be diverted by a single storm, or even by the chances of other storms. Indeed, the chances of other storms are not receiving quite so much attention from the people of Galveston as it would be the part of wisdom to give them. They are to be commended for rebuilding their city, but what was once pardonable carelessness now deserves a harsher name. If Galveston again neglects to guard her citizens and her property from the threatening waves, a second disaster will seem more like punishment than calamity, and outside sympathy may be slow in duplicating its contributions. There are good reasons for not abandoning that exposed sand bar, but there is no reason for leaving it exposed. The next cyclone should find Galveston prepared to meet attack, and in the special number of The News we read of everything except preparation for trouble.

—Too much importance should not be ascribed to the anti-vaccination tirades of Dr. MONTAGUE R. LEVERSON. His talk about the non-contagious character of smallpox, his incitement of negroes and others to resist the officials of the Board of Health, and his boasts about having concealed thirty recent cases of the horrible malady are all well calculated to irritate the mind and to provoke harsh language, but it must be remembered that this curious individual is in the habit of making periodical bids for martyrdom of one sort or another, and that the severest punishment which can be imposed upon him is to let him alone. A while ago he engaged in a one-sided correspondence with public enemies, and for a happy moment he foresaw arrest and a trial that would have made his name known all through the country, but the wise men at Washington decided that the country would survive Dr. LEVERSON'S assumption of the rôle of Adviser in Chief to brigands who had never heard of him, and the little excitement he had caused quickly died out. So he has returned to his old love, anti-vaccination. That is a subject on which it is easy to chatter nonsense sensational enough to attract the notice of the newspapers, and though Dr. LEVERSON cannot persuade the public, white or black, to attend his meetings, still the reporters have to go to them, and so the desired notoriety is secured. It requires no great courage for the man to say that he habitually breaks the law against the concealment of contagious diseases. It is hardly to be expected that he will repeat his statements when questioned by authority or that he will give the details of person, time, and place on which alone prosecution can be based. The Health Board officials do not hesitate to declare their belief that Dr. LEVERSON is not the dangerous character he claims to be. They doubt if he has treated even one case of smallpox, and are cruel enough to hint that he would not know a case if he saw it. The people of this country know all about vaccination. They neglect it rather outrageously a good deal of the time, but when they realize their danger, at periods like this, they hasten to make up for lost opportunities. They know where to get good advice, and they follow it.

—Most people, on learning that the American authorities in the Philippines had adopted the policy of exiling the most troublesome of the rebel leaders to the Island of Guam, probably regarded the scheme with approval and wondered why nobody had thought of it before. For Guam is a pleasant enough place, as tropical islets go, and for a Filipino sequestration there involves no physical hardships of any kind. Of course, it will irk the Tagal chiefs much to be deprived of all opportunity for conspiring against law and order, and to have no helpless savages from whom to extort tribute, but with the leisure for reflection which the remoteness of Guam supplies they may, possibly, reach the conclusion that a graceful acceptance of the inevitable, even when it involves working for a living, is the part of wisdom after all. This conviction once reached, it will not be difficult for the exiles to make their peace with the objects of their unreasonable animosity, and a return to Luson would speedily follow. Deportation, even as an alternative for capital punishment, does not, however, please The Springfield Republican, and it moans that again the United States is imitating Spain. "Step by step," says The Republican, "we have been going down the way for pursuing which this Nation went to war with Spain and inflicted such summary punishment. The Spaniardising of the United States now seems to be about complete, and in the mere matter of killing men for holding to the right of liberty we have far outdone Spain. And whence is to come our punishment?" That reference to "the way for pursuing which this Nation went to war with Spain" is a bit obscure, but nobody expects to find good English in The Republican nowadays, and its meaning can be figured out without much trouble. We are, it seems, to do nothing that Spain ever did, no matter what the difference between our motives and hers may be. Rebellion against Spain was justified, and, therefore, according to this queerest of logicians, it is evidence of pure patriotism to murder United States soldiers, and even the mildest punishment of such murders is cruel tyranny. Mere desire to be free wins The Republican's admiration. The need of asking, "Free to do what?" does not occur to it.

—Opposition seems to be developing among the inhabitants of the Indian Territory to the name "Jefferson," proposed as a substitute for the present title in the bill now pending in Congress. They, or some of them, urge the superiority of "Sequoyah" as the designation of the State sooner or later to be erected in place of the tribal allotments that have now become so unsatisfactory to all concerned, Indians as well as whites. We are inclined to regard the suggestion as a good one. The name of the departed statesman is not particularly euphonious, and it has already been used almost innumerable times for villages, towns, and counties. "Sequoyah," on the other hand, is drawn from the source that has given us all of our best geographical titles, and, though it is hardly a brilliant specimen of its class, still it does very well, viewed merely as a combination of letters, and its associations have character and significance. The original owner of the name was a Cherokee chief with claims to remembrance about as great as those of any member of his race, though it is not quite fair to credit all his virtues to the Indians, since his father was a German. Be that as it may, SEQUOYAH was distinctly a remarkable man. He invented an alphabet that was long in practical use among the Cherokees and is not yet forgotten, and his influence was always exerted on the side of peace and progress. He was born in the State of Georgia, and for many years lived some twenty-five miles from Fort Smith, Indian Territory, which he often visited. His death was mysterious, having occurred on the Mexican border in 1837 or 1838, while he was out alone in search of some strayed horses—his own, by the way. His body was never found. The greatest of American trees already bear his name in one of its many forms. Perhaps that is sufficient honor for the old chief, but it will do no harm if his memory is perpetuated also in another manner. Our maps are the better for every Indian name that finds a place upon them, and they will not be the better for the addition of another Jefferson.

—Curiously little sympathy—to be accurate, none at all—is shown by The Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald with the fight of the Southern Congressmen against the Olmsted resolution. It declares that the condition existing in the States where the negroes have been disfranchised is one that invited attack, and a revision of the present ratio is bound to come sooner or later. And The Herald, too, has a theory as to why so many Republicans are content to defer action apparently in their own political interest. "The Republican leaders," it says, "hold that it is partisan policy to preserve the South as it is. They have recognized that the laws necessary for excluding the negro have destroyed political vigor and virtue—have built up machine governments and a leadership that is nationally distrusted and contemptible. It has surrendered to fusions so base as to pull down the National Democracy to loss of confidence and respect. Thus we may perceive why the Republican leaders stood by sympathizing with and aiding the Southern leaders in defeat of the Olmsted resolution. The South, and through the South the National Democracy, are just as their political enemies would have them." This ascribes to President MCKINLEY and a considerable number of his party associates about as low and unpatriotic a motive as could well be imagined, since it makes them content to have the South overrepresented in Congress so long as the representation is of a quality to excite Northern distrust. That is an arraignment severe, indeed, but the Southern Congressmen can hardly like it.

New York Library's Record.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Hild, Librarian of the Chicago Library, states in yesterday's TIMES that the Chicago Library circulated in the month of December 159,000 volumes, and that this is the largest circulation of any one library for one month in the United States.

The twenty-first annual report of the New York Free Circulating Library, which is still unpublished, will show that this library circulated in the month of January, 1900, 163,512 volumes, and in March, 164,298 volumes, both of which exceed the figures given by Mr. Hild.

The circulation for the month of December is smaller, owing to the smallpox scare. E. M. S.

THE LAND OF USED-TO-BE.

Uncle Ned has traveled this whole world through
And his tales of the things he's seen
Are as good as a trip
On a sailing ship.
There's never a country he's not been to;
He's roamed the continents all and a few
Of the islands in between.

When at night we gather around his chair
A geography isn't of use.
He will whisk us away
For a lengthy stay
In lands with the jumbledest names, and where
The people do things that would make you stare,
Or run with the least excuse.

And he tells of places acrost the sea
Where the traveler seldom goes,
Where the cocoanuts swing
And the monkeys cling
By scores to the branches of every tree,
And a beautiful odor of spice goes free
With every breeze that blows.

If you ask his favorite place of all
He just smiles and he says, "Ah, me,
It is not on the map—
What a sad mishap,
For of all the countries, great and small,
I'd make, if I could, for a port of call
In the Land of Used-to-Be.

"It's the fairest land that was ever seen,
But I cannot go back," says he.
"There's an age limit there,
And they bar gray hair;
Besides, I'd appear out of place, I ween
For a boy is King and a girl is Queen
In the Land of Used-to-Be."

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL

"MY LADY DAINTY."

Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon in a New Play by Mrs. Ryley.

"My Lady Dainty," a namby-pamby, inarticulate composite of farce and sentimental drama, was acted at the Madison Square Theatre last night, much better than it deserves to be acted, by Herbert Kelcey, Effie Shannon, and their company. Madeline Lucette Ryley concocted this piece, and it is quite the feebliest production of her frequently diffusive and incoherent but generally lively and entertaining pen. The intrigue is transferred, within its four acts, from rural England to this metropolis and back again.

The hero is a caddish young man, who marries, in England, a poor girl and brings her to New York. He does not inform his wealthy father of his marriage, and, learning that the old gentleman is ill, hurries back to England without his wife. The terms of his parent's will providing for his marriage to a certain young woman as the price of a handsome legacy, he tries to get rid of his wife, and in this plan he is helped by a blackguard to whom he owes money.

Consequently, the estimable, virtuous young woman suffers much, but there is a happy ending, with a reconciliation, of course.

Mrs. Ryley's play of humor concerns itself this time with the misfortunes of a poor clergyman with a fool wife and a large batch of children; with the inconveniences of flat life and the servant girl question. But it is all of the most obvious sort and becomes tiresome.

In the performance, Miss Shannon exerted herself to such good purpose, however, that she actually won the respect of her audience and, in one or two scenes, even aroused their sympathies. Her part was long and arduous, and her acting was distinguished by tact and grace as well as zeal. Mr. Kelcey had a far less grateful task as the husband.

William Boag acted the villain with a measure of intelligence and artistic sincerity that lent dignity to the part, while Isabel Waldron made the most of the acerbity and forlornness of a widow who did general housework because she had to.

The other parts were generally acted with discretion, but an aggressive boy named Edward Argyle, who may still be an actor some day if he grows up, revealed no symptoms of budding talent and was a dreadful bore. As for Mrs. Ryley's play, in conclusion, it belongs to the same order as "The Sprightly Romance of Marsac."

THE KNEISEL QUARTET.

Its Second Evening Concert Given at Mendelssohn Hall.

The second evening concert of the Kneisel Quartet of Boston was given last night at Mendelssohn Hall. The programme consisted of Dvorak's string quartet in E flat, Opus 51; César Franck's piano quintet in F minor, and Beethoven's string quartet in C major, Opus 59, No. 3. The Dvorak quartet has been played frequently of late, and need not now be a subject of comment. The César Franck quintet is new to this public and is the third of the chamber music compositions of this writer which Mr. Kneisel and his associates have made known here. This work is dedicated to Saint-Saëns, and contains some of its composer's most characteristic writing. It is divided into three movements, the first allegro, being prefaced by a slow introduction. Community of theme, as it is called, or the employment of the same melodic germs in different movements, is one of the features of the compositions of César Franck, but it is in evidence in this work only in the relation of the introduction to the main body of the first movement. The idea was in all probability developed backward after the fashion advocated by Edgar Allen Poe, as a literary method.

But the general hearer must have been more impressed with the melodic and harmonic material and the style of this work than with its formal outline. The thematic ideas are clear and incisive, and they suggest possibilities of treatment in the older quartet manner. But this, is quite foreign to Franck. To him the advantage of the piano is its polyphony, and he makes it the foundation for a development which is orchestral rather than of chamber music. He piles harmonic Pelion upon Ossa and ranges magniloquently through foreign keys in a thoroughly modern search after mass climaxes, in which unison of all his bowed instruments is not uncommon, while the piano part rises to concerto-like importance. One cannot call this quintet composition, but it is vigorous, strenuous writing, waxing and waning in breakers and undertow of passion. Yet when all is said and done, one is aweary of the clangorous stress of it, and a little troubled as to the precise nature of the messages, and so is ready to hark back to the simpler felicity of the Dvorak quartet, where all is mellow and warm and bright as the sunshine of a Summer morning. In music of this kind, which is music worthy of thought and which has force and character, too, one always feels that the composer is hampered by his means, and that he would be happy if he had at his command the clarion peals of trumpets and the thunder of the drums.

After such a composition, interesting, yet vexing, the last of the Rassomoffsky quartets of Beethoven comes like the benison of a September sunset after the midday heat. Here one is on firm ground. The four instruments become equal companions, each with its clear, mellifluous message of musical peace, a peace that passeth not understanding. And when both compositions are played as well as they were last night, the contrast is strengthened. In the Franck quintet, Mr. Kneisel, and his three confrères had the assistance of George Proctor, a Boston pianist. This young gentleman, who made his first appearance here, acquitted himself with great credit. In his solo passages he disclosed a tone somewhat too glassy in its cold clearness, but in the ensemble he was never out of the picture, but made himself a substantial part of the whole. He played with spirit and musical intelligence, and showed sympathy with the style of the music. As a performer of chamber compositions of the ultra-modern variety, he should be welcome again.

The four members of the quartet were, as we say of athletes, in good form. Their work is always that of artists, but the best of artists have their ups and downs, for they of all men are least like machines. It was an evening of elevation in the little Kneisel family last night. The tuneful Dvorak quartet was played with delicious tone and finish, while the Beethoven music was performed with that beautiful appreciation found in all the Kneisel quartet's communications of the thoughts of the mighty Ludwig.

MR. AND MRS. GEORG HENSCHEL.

Their Delightful Song Recital at Mendelssohn Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Georg Henschel have come back, and yesterday afternoon they gave the first of two song recitals at Mendelssohn Hall. They were first heard in a duet by Cimarosa, after which Mrs. Henschel sang an air from Handel's "Jephtha," the "Quel Rusceletto" of Paradies, and the couplets from Pierre Monsigny's "Rose et Colas." Mr. Henschel followed with five songs from Schubert's "Die Winterreise." His other numbers were "Saul's Dream," from C. Hubert Parry's "King Saul"; two Biblical songs by Dvorak, and Brahms's ballad "Verrath." Mrs. Henschel's other numbers were Loewe's "Goldsmith's Daughter," Chopin's "Lithuanian Song," Davidoff's "Leis Bewegt," her husband's "No More," (new,) and "Lullaby," and Arthur Foote's "Irish Folksong." The two singers were also heard in the duets "Ueber das dunkeln Haide" and "Lass dich nicht gereu'n," by Mr. Henschel, and the duet of Lotharlo and Mignon from Ambroise Thomas's opera "Mignon."

Comment has often been made in these columns on the peculiar charm of these unique recitals. Perhaps it never had a finer illustration than it did yesterday in Mr. Henschel's singing of the five Schubert songs. The quality of this gentleman's voice would have deterred any other musician from attempting to use it in public, yet with his limited material he achieves what must be called wonders. He produces musical effects in spite of the organ with which nature has provided him, and he interpreted these Schubert songs yesterday in a manner beyond all criticism except the kind most agreeable to the critic, unqualified praise. It was a most eloquent exposition of the art of lieder interpretation.

Mrs. Henschel possesses a much better singing voice than her husband, and a knowledge of her art quite equal to his. Her taste is exquisite, and the dainty finish of her nuancing is fascinating. She was heard at her best in the couplets of good old Monsigny, the Davidoff song, and her husband's "Spring," which she sang as one of her encore numbers. In the duets the two voices do not blend, but the skill in conveying the meaning to the auditor is remarkable. Mr. Henschel might easily have given his hearers something more interesting than the declamatory emptiness of Dr. Parry's truly British festal music, and the songs of Dvorak and Brahms, none of them good examples of their composers. But the entertainment as a whole was so pleasing that no serious fault need be found. The second recital will take place to-morrow afternoon.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Rich & Harris, managers, have signed a contract with Paul M. Potter, by which he will write a four-act play for Louis Mann and Clara Lipman. The piece will be presented in the Spring in the Madison Square Theatre.

Nat C. Goodwin and Miss Maxine Elliott will present "When We Were Twenty-one" in the Knickerbocker Theatre on the 21st, following Miss Rehan, who is to leave that house on the 19th.

Miss Henrietta Crosman will appear in Philadelphia on the 21st, one week sooner that was at first intended. Her manager, Mr. Campbell, altered his plans, so that Miss Ada Rehan's Nell Gwyn play would not be ahead of him in the Quaker City. The 21st is also Miss Rehan's opening date.

"Hearts Are Trumps," which had a successful run at the Garden Theatre last season, is to be presented by Charles Frohman at the Grand Opera House during the week beginning on Jan. 14. Most of the principals in the original cast will be transferred to the company which will play in "To Have and to Hold," rehearsals of which are to begin within a fortnight.

There have been two new engagements for the cast of "The Burgomaster" at the Manhattan Theatre. Mae Lowery will take the soubrette rôle, and Richard F. Carroll that of the crushed tragedian. Lillian Coleman, the Ruth of the original production, has recovered from her illness and will play again on next Monday night. A new song, a trio, has been introduced into the piece. It is called "The Hypnotists," and is sung by Henry E. Dixey, Zelma Rawlston, and Roth White.

JOHN H. GILMOUR IN CONTEMPT.

Judge Hascall So Adjudges Him Because He Dodged Process Servers.

John H. Gilmour, who plays Flambeau in "L'Aiglon," has been adjudged in contempt of the City Court. The principal grievance against him is that he skillfully escaped the process servers when he was playing at the Montauk Theatre, Brooklyn, last week. Wearing a long military overcoat and disguised with a gray mustache and imperial he left the theatre, passing between the process servers, who said, "There goes Admiral Schley."

It was about six years ago, it is alleged, that he incurred a debt of $155 for clothing furnished by Rudolph Wolff, a tailor. Mr. Wolff sued in the City Court and obtained judgment. Recently an order was issued commanding Mr. Gilmour to appear and be examined in supplementary proceedings. The actor failed to respond to this invitation.

The order for examination in supplementary proceedings was obtained from Justice Hascall in the City Court, and two process servers went to serve Mr. Gilmour on Friday night last. He escaped, according to these men, in the disguise above mentioned, and when their story was related to Justice Hascall yesterday he declared that Mr. Gilmour was in contempt of court.

HIRAM CRONK REMEMBERED.

Descendants of Veterans of War of 1812 Send Greeting to the Centenarian.

The annual meeting of the descendants of the Veteran Corps of Artillery, Military Society of the War of 1812, was held yesterday in the Governor's Room in the City Hall. Col. Asa Bird Gardiner presided in the absence of the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix.

Greetings were sent to Hiram Cronk, the only original member of the society living. He was born Dec. 16, 1799. Greetings were sent to him on his living in three centuries.

Among those present were Oliver Hazard Perry, Col. Dudley Evans, A. W. Van Vechten, George Wistier, United States Army; George De F. Barton, and Robert Olyphant. The Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix and Col. Gardiner were re-elected respectively President and Vice President of the society.

SPECIAL ELECTION FOR MAYOR.

Massachusetts Supreme Court Decides the Worcester Case.

WORCESTER, Mass., Jan. 8.—The Supreme Court has handed down a rescript, which was filed here to-day, dismissing the petition of P. J. O'Connell, the Democratic candidate for Mayor of Worcester, for a writ of mandamus to compel the Election Commissioners to throw out three ballots cast in the recent city election, which he alleged to be illegal. This decision of the court sustains the position of the Election Commissioners, who, by counting the three ballots in question, found the vote for Mayor a tie between Mr. O'Connell and William A. Lytle, the Republican candidate. A special election will have to be held to elect a Mayor.

The three ballots which figured in the contest did not bear the printed signature of the City Clerk, and it was contended that they could not legally be counted. The court decides that the ballots should be counted, although they did not bear the City Clerk's name, because they were cast by the voters in good faith.

IOWA AMENDMENT VOID.

Court Decides Officeholders' Terms Cannot Be Extended.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Jan. 8.—Judge A. R. Dewey of the Sixth Iowa Judicial District rendered his decision at Washington, Iowa, to-day on the legality of the biennial election amendment to the State Constitution, declaring the same to be void. He bases his opinion upon the fact that the amendment was not submitted by the Legislature in legal form. Every politician and office holder in the State awaited the decision with anxiety, as it meant that the terms of all office holders would or would not be extended one year, the general opinion being that the Supreme Court will affirm Judge Dewey's opinion.

The amendment declared void by Judge Dewey provided that all terms of office from Governor down, expiring in the year 1901, be extended for one year. It first appeared in the Legislature of 1898, being introduced in the form of a joint resolution. In compliance with requirements in the adoption of an amendment, it was presented to the succeeding Legislature in 1900. In the passage of the resolution at that session, the record made in the journals of the House was by the title of the joint resolution. The Constitution requires that the amendment shall be "entered upon the journals."

Judge Dewey holds that the recording of the title only is not sufficient, and therefore the amendment was not legally adopted by the people of Iowa at the election, Nov. 6, 1900.

White Plains's New Officials.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jan. 8.—At the meeting of the Board of Village Trustees last evening, James H. Moran was elected President pro tem. As there was a vacancy in the Trusteeship of the Fifth District, when at the last election there was a tie between John A. Snedeker, Republican, and James Thompson, Democrat, the votes standing 104 for each, the board elected Mr. Snedeker. He is the teller of the Central Bank. They also elected ex-Sheriff Ziba Carpenter Chief of Police, in place of Edward Bogart, who is incapacitated by reason of poor health.

New Christian Science Church.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jan. 8.—The certificate of incorporation of the "First Church of Christ, Scientist, of White Plains," was filed to-day in the County Clerk's office. Nancy Jane Carter is the minister of the church. Its Directors and Trustees are Frederick Barber, John Quimby, Mrs. Clara Smith, Mrs. Georgianna Quimby, Miss Helen Allison, Niles F. Smith, Herbert McGeouch of White Plains, Daniel C. Reynolds of Elmsford, and Mrs. Nancy Jane Carter of New York.

THOUSANDS OF GRIP PATIENTS IN NEW YORK

Sanitary Superintendent Says Epidemic Is Imminent.

COMPARATIVELY FEW DEATHS

Public and Private Hospitals Crowded to Their Capacity—Pneumonia and Bronchitis Prevalent.

Superintendent Blair of the Department of Outdoor Poor says that there are probably 150,000 to 200,000 persons suffering from grip in New York City at the present time.

So far the mortality rate has been low, but should unfavorable weather set in, the medical profession would expect it to assume serious proportions.

Officials of the Charities Department are compelled to tax to the utmost every available resource in order to accommodate applicants for medical aid. Besides the hospitals and dispensaries where medical attention and prescriptions are given to the poor free of charge, the independent hospitals are also taxed almost to their full capacity, being compelled to remove nearly all emergency cases direct to one or the other of the several city institutions.

Health authorities, basing their opinion on the reports of physicians in private practice and the reports from the various hospitals and dispensaries, declare that fully 4 per cent. of the population is at the present time suffering from the grip, and the number of patients afflicted with the disease is increasing daily. During the week ended Jan. 5, there were 36 deaths from grip—18 in Brooklyn and 18 in Manhattan. Since Saturday, over 25 deaths from the same disease have been reported.

"From what I am told by physicians in the several boroughs and men employed in this department," said Sanitary Superintendent Roberts, "I apprehend that a severe epidemic is imminent since the first death from the disease was reported on Nov. 10 last, there has been a steady increase from week to week, the total number of deaths now being 62. Including the epidemic of 1890 and 1891, there have been 8,796 deaths in Manhattan alone from this disease, up to Jan. 1 last."

Superintendent Blair said that fully 60 per cent. of the people who applied to city institutions for medical aid were afflicted with the grip. "Our entire hospital system," said he, "is taxed to the limit. The building in East Twenty-sixth Street, directly opposite the entrance to Bellevue, has been secured by the department, and will be equipped for the reception of patients within a few days. This building will afford accommodation for 150 patients. All hospitals under the city's control and those which care for indigent patients at the city's expense are full, and more room must be had at once. Bellevue is so crowded that we have been obliged to stop the transfer of patients from the Harlem Hospital and send them to private institutions. Gouverneur is about the only city hospital not filled to the limit. The independent hospitals, with a capacity of about 1,800, declare that their private patients fill about all the cots, so that we cannot look to them for assistance."

Superintendent Blair said that, judging from the large proportion of the poor sick from the disease, he thought 150,000 to 200,000 would be a conservative estimate of the number of cases of grip of greater or less severity now being treated.

Next to the grip comes pneumonia and bronchitis, both of which diseases are very prevalent.

H. H. VREELAND ILL.

Facts Made Known in a Letter of Regret to Putnam County Diners.

That the grip is playing havoc in this city was clearly evidenced last night at the dinner given by residents of Putnam County at the Murray Hill Hotel in honor of Justice Jackson O. Dykman of the Supreme Court.

Every man on the carefully prepared toast list was compelled to send his regrets and in every case but one "the grip" was assigned as the cause of the speaker's absence. H. H. Vreeland, President of the Metropolitan Street Railroad Company, was to have been one of the speakers. The fact that he was so afflicted with the prevailing disease as to cause him to go to Aiken, S. C., for relief came out in his letter of regret. In this letter he said:

"In my case another affliction has been added to the grip in that I am, on account of it, to be denied the pleasure of joining the citizens of Putnam in doing honor to the county's distinguished son. You know that, owing to the close relations existing between myself and the county's most distinguished daughter, I am inclined to regard with a certain affection and relationship all natives of Putnam County, even mistere Judges." It was stated after this letter was read that Mr. Vreeland had gone South on Friday last and that he was still quite ill.

Notwithstanding the absence of those who had been asked to respond to toasts, the dinner was an unqualified success. It appears that some time ago the Supervisors of Putnam County decided to order an oil painting of Justice Dykman to be placed in the County Court House, and after the portrait was completed it was further decided to have a public dinner at which the portrait was to be appropriately presented. The dinner was set to take place in this city, and nearly all the prominent people of Putnam came to New York last night in order that they might be present. County Judge William Wood of Putnam presided, and accepted the portrait, which was unveiled with appropriate ceremonies, and Justice Dykman responded to a toast.

During the dinner it developed that an effort would be made to induce Gov. Odell to reassign Justice Dykman to active duty, and that a committee would wait on the Governor to-morrow in order to press their claims for recognition. Justice Dykman was retired from the bench four years ago on account of his having reached the age limit of seventy years.

PRESIDENT HAS THE GRIP.

Will Be Confined to His Room Several Days—Invitations for Reception To-night Recalled.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The President is still suffering from his cold, and on the advice of Dr. Rixey has decided to stay in his room for three or four days. There will be no Cabinet meeting to-day, and the invitations for the diplomatic reception to-morrow night have been recalled. The reception will be held at a future time not yet decided upon. It is stated at the White House that the President is not seriously ill, but has a bad cold, and these steps are taken as a precautionary measure.

At 5 o'clock this evening Secretary Cortelyou said concerning the President's illness:

"The President's cold has developed into a well-defined case of grip. His physician states that there are no complications, and that everything is progressing favorably. The disease must run its regular course, and the President therefore is not likely to be out of his room for some days."

MAYO W. HAZELTINE HURT.

Lawyer and Book Reviewer Run Down by Cab on Broadway.

While trying to cross Broadway at Thirty-fifth Street last evening Mayo W. Hazeltine, fifty-nine years old, of 59 Wall Street, a lawyer and a book critic for The New York Sun, was run down by a hansom cab driven by Richard Goldsburg of 219 East Thirty-second Street, an employe of the Scuitch Livery Stable Company. Mr. Hazeltine refused medical assistance at the time, and when Patrolman Mury, who witnessed the accident, wanted to arrest the driver he was unwilling to make a complaint.

A cab was called and the injured man was taken to his home, 102 West Forty-sixth Street, where Dr. E. Valentine Buek of 138 West Forty-sixth Street attended him. Mr. Hazeltine received a fracture of the right thigh.

Dr. Buck said that his patient, although in a serious condition, would probably recover. "Mr. Hazeltine has an exceedingly bad fracture of the lower thigh," said the doctor, "a severe scalp wound, and many bruises. The cabman, apparently, did not see him or could not check his horse until too late. He was struck by the horse and knocked down, the wheel passing over his body."

NOTES ON ART MATTERS.

A collection of twenty-five landscapes and seascapes by George H. McCord, A. N. A., may be seen for the following ten days at one of the Clausen Galleries, 381 Fifth Avenue. American, Dutch, and English scenes alternate round the walls of the little gallery, punctuated here and there by a French townscape, like the view of Moret near Fontainebleau from the riverside at nightfall. There are marines which suggest Clays more through subject than through their handling. Mr. McCord has a gentle brush, very wise in the rendering of moonlight as in "The Moonlit Sea," or misty Holland distances, as in "Gray Day on the Scheldt," and in "Amsterdam." There is a difference between his Dutch or English atmosphere and similar American weather, as, for example, the "Misty Evening, Maine," where the fishermen advance through a haze of a somewhat different kind. Among the clear-air pictures a very pleasant one is "Holferd Church, England," in which the painter has boldly made the solid mass of an old yew tree the centre of his village scene.

***

The dinner given to Messrs. Cauldwell and Curran on Monday night at the Salmagundi Club, like the reception given last week by the National Academy of Design, signifies that the younger painters as well as the older are for once united in an agreement that the art side of the American exhibit in Paris was well supported by the official representatives.

***

Just now the question of color for the various buildings at the Pan-American is the matter uppermost in the minds of the directors of that enterprise. The buildings are so well in hand that a good idea of what the exhibition will be, so far as its outward aspect is concerned, can soon be had. For the next three months color will be applied to all the prominent buildings on the grounds, and the questions of the relationship of different colors, as well as the intensity of the colors applied to any one building, will be paramount. Mr. Turner, the Director of Color, has certain general principles to guide him. Thus in a given building he intends to concentrate the color about the monumental entrances. With regard to the entire complex of buildings, his intention is to have stronger and darker coloring in the buildings which are nearest to the observer when he enters from Buffalo. Owing to the existing lakes and ponds, which belong to the park system of Buffalo, the great mass of visitors will be forced to cross a bridge designed by Mr. J. M. Carrère, and from this bridge a general view of a large part of the exposition will be embraced. The more important buildings stand to the right and left, while directly in front in the distance rises the electric tower designed by Mr. Galen Howard. At present the guiding thread of the Director of Color is that this tower will be mainly ivory white, and color will be applied with a stronger and stronger hand to the buildings right and left as they come down toward the bridge in question. Up to the present time a color scheme on this gigantic scale has never been applied to an exhibition.

***

The men in charge of the coming exposition at Buffalo are prompt to remove any obstacle that suddenly rises in the Pan-American's path. When they learned that the quarrymen who had contracted to deliver marble for the Albright Art Gallery, which was to be a prominent feature of the exposition, as well as a permanent attraction of Buffalo, had failed to meet the requirements of the case, and the building could not be made ready for the pictures until midsummer, they instantly gave orders for the erection of a temporary structure, fire proof, made of iron and brick, having exactly the same interior lines and spaces as the Albright Gallery. Thus the paintings and other works of art under the charge of Mr. W. A. Coffin will be placed exactly as if the marble gallery had been carried out. The cellar has been dug and the brick and structural iron are already on the ground. The Albright Gallery will proceed without interruption, and will probably be completed by the 1st of August, but it will not contain the loan collection of paintings for the Pan-American.

***

Provision is about to be made at the Pan-American for a proper representation of American arts and crafts. The large building for manufactures and the liberal arts is in the form of a quadrangle with a spacious courtyard. This courtyard will be covered with glass roofs of different heights, and there the objects of the industrial arts will be exhibited. In order to accommodate workers in this line who do not produce enough to warrant sending a special exhibition of their own, it has been proposed that the National Arts Club should undertake to supervise an exhibition of the sort by various small exhibitors at the Pan-American, either in this courtyard of the manufactures and liberal arts or in some other part of the grounds assigned to it.

***

Next in importance to the colors applied to the exterior of the buildings at the Pan-American is the problem of draping the interior of the great buildings. These are to be left in their primitive conditions of beams and rafters and springing arches, showing plainly the timber construction within. In order to clothe this interior to a certain degree, the Director of Color has had a special color scheme worked out with bunting, tapestries, and draperies of other kinds in place of pigments. These objects will not be festooned and nailed about in the haphazard fashion one sees at conventions and in the interior of other great temporary structures, but will be developed on a well-pondered scheme. The matter of a flag for the Pan-American is also under lively discussion. Four or five designs have been selected out of many, and will be submitted to the managers. Most of them include some arrangement of red, white, and blue—the colors which during the course of the past century have come to represent republics—and some add to these three colors green and orange.

Lenbach of Munich has painted half a century of portraits of Bismarck. Among all his likenesses of the Iron Chancellor it may be that the palm should be given to one that can be seen at the Schaus Gallery. It is a seated portrait in a very restful attitude, with the hands barely sketched in—mere indications of hands. The hair, eyebrows, and mustache are snow-white, but the face has the ruddy hue of a well-preserved old man. In this quiet figure Lenbach has indicated the individuality of Bismarck in a very superior way; one sees the steady mind behind the wrinkled mask. Some of the portraits for which this master is famed have a stare in the eyes, and others seem somewhat too much posed. Here, however, we have the workman at his highest pitch; as a mere piece of painting this particular Bismarck has the advantage of a delightful color scheme, the strongest note of which is carried out by the yellow scarf running diagonally across the breast and reinforced by the golden helmet and the yellow in the General's uniform of the White Cuirassiers.

The January forecast of the American Art Galleries on Madison Square comprises the sale of porcelains belonging to Cesar Cesarini of California. The pictures by William D. L. Dodge, the Raphael tapestries, and collection of butterflies will make room for these porcelains on the 13th. Later in the month the private collection of paintings by modern French and American painters will be shown. They belong to Mr. George N. Tyner of Holyoke, Mass., and will be sold on Feb. 1 at the Waldorf-Astoria. Among the foreign artists in Mr. Tyner's collection are L. E. Boudin of Paris, Josef Israels of Holland, and F. von Uhde of Munich.

One of the French potters whose work is little seen in America is Lachenal, a man who is well known to the amateurs of Paris. He holds once a year a sale of "seconds," or pieces slightly defective, to which the artists flock. On these occasions Coquelin, the actor, usually acts as auctioneer and the function becomes a frolic. A few specimens of Lachenal's work are at Theodore Starr's. In some of them "the new art" seems to have found a place. Others are like old-time pottery, peasant pottery, full of a calculated clumsiness. Another shows a fine green frame over a yellowish body, distinct yet all of a piece with the vase. A fourth looks like a jar turned out of wood and painted, or out of stone and left slightly rough. Some are queerer than they are attractive, while others are decidedly novel and beautiful.

***

JUDGE C. L. BENEDICT DEAD

Had Suffered for a Long Time from Heart Disease.

Had Been a Law Partner of ex-Secretary Tracy—President Lincoln Appointed Him District Judge.

Ex-Judge Charles L. Benedict died in his apartment at the Buckingham Hotel at 8:30 o'clock last evening of heart disease, after a long illness. It was failing health that led him to retire from the bench in February, 1897, but he had been up and about until very lately, and was only confined to his bed for the last week of his life.

His wife, brother, and law partner, Robert Dewey Benedict, and his stepson, George Cromwell, President of the Borough of Richmond, and other members of his family were about his bedside at the last. The Judge had been in a coma all day, and only once in the morning had he shown signs of consciousness by extending his hand toward Mr. Cromwell when he approached the bedside.

Dr. Jefferson Scales of Staten Island had been in almost constant attendance upon the dying man for several days, but left two hours before the end.

Judge Benedict had long been regarded by many lawyers as the most eminent authority in America on admiralty matters, and it is said that not one of his decisions in this line was ever reversed.

Charles L. Benedict was born in Newburg, N. Y., March 2, 1824. He was the son of Prof. Willis Benedict, who for many years was attached to the University of Vermont. His mother was a Miss Dewey, a member of the well-known family which gave Admiral Dewey to the country. His parents moved to Burlington, Vt., and there Judge Benedict received his education. He was a graduate of the University of Vermont.

He came to New York in 1845 and entered the law office of his uncle, Chancellor Erastus C. Benedict of the University of the City of New York. He became a partner in that firm under the title of Benedict, Burr & Benedict. Always a sturdy Republican, he was elected to the New York State Assembly at about the outbreak of the civil war, and served one term, his only political office, excepting his Judgeship.

While he was in Albany, Henry J. Raymond, founder of THE NEW YORK TIMES, was the Speaker of the House, and it was at this time that he first met Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy, and formed a friendship with him which lasted all his life. They afterward became partners under the name of Benedict, Tracy & Benedict.

In 1865 President Lincoln appointed Mr. Benedict to be Judge of the Eastern Judicial District of New York, and this was the last judicial appointment made by the martyr President. Judge Benedict served for thirty-two years on the bench, and he believed this to be the longest term of any United States Judge in the country save one in the far West who also claimed this distinction.

At the time of his retirement an immense calendar had accumulated, which he had not been able to clear away, and some said that he would have surrendered his office sooner had it not been for his political principles. He held on until President McKinley was inaugurated, so that no Democrat would be likely to succeed to his office. When these reports came to Judge Benedict's ears he only smiled at them.

Judge Benedict was twice married, his first wife being a Miss Benedict, a distant cousin, who died in two years, leaving him his only child, George A. Benedict, now a business man in the West.

He married Mrs. Sara S. Cromwell, widow of the founder of the Cromwell Steamship Line, in 1873, the ceremony being performed by the late Rev. Dr. Storrs in the Church of the Pilgrims, where Mr. Benedict has ever since been a regular attendant. He was one of the oldest members of the Century Club of this city, and also of the Hamilton Club of the Borough of Brooklyn.

Details of the funeral services have not yet been arranged, though they will probably be held in the church where he worshipped. The interment will be in Greenwood.

FIFTH AVENUE PLOT SOLD.

Henry Phipps of Pittsburg Will Build Residence and Move to New York.

Henry Phipps of Pittsburg is about to become a resident of this city, and with this end in view he has just purchased, through Broker Herbert A. Sherman, a large plot at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Eighty-seventh Street, only three blocks distant from the site on which his business associate, Andrew Carnegie, is erecting a magnificent mansion. For the ground to be occupied by his new house Mr. Phipps pays about $500,000.

From Perry Belmont Mr. Phipps has bought the plot, fronting 50 feet on Fifth Avenue and 140 feet on Eighty-seventh Street, and an additional lot on the street, separated from the main plot by a ten-foot alley. From E. H. Van Ingen & Co., represented by Brokers Horace S. Ely & Co., he has acquired two adjoining lots on Fifth Avenue, 50 by 140, making, in all, including the alley, rights in which go with the purchase, a plot 100 by 175.

The two lots 50 feet north of Eighty-seventh Street, which have been sold three times within the last two years by Broker Sherman, show the course of values on that section of Fifth Avenue during that period. They were first sold to Henry O. Havemeyer for $100,000; later to Van Ingen & Co. for $125,000, and now to Mr. Phipps for nearly $200,000.

TO HELP THE WEST INDIES?

Mr. Chamberlain Said to be Considering How the Sugar Producing Islands Can Be Assisted.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The Times, in an editorial upon the recent improvements in sugar cultivation, says:

"It is certain that, if only the necessary capital were forthcoming, large economies in manufacture might be effected by the erection of central factories in the West Indies, fully equipped with modern appliances.

"We understand that Mr. Chamberlain is considering the propriety of affording the sugar islands some assistance by way either of subsidy or of guaranty for this purpose.

"Meanwhile it looks as if the cultivation of cane sugar would ere long be able to turn the flank of sugar bounties, and thus relieve the Imperial Government of the irksome task of attacking them in front."

OWL RINGS BURGLAR ALARM.

Priests at New Rochelle Become Frightened and Summon Police.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Jan. 8.—Late this evening the Rev. John A. Kellner and the other priests of St. Gabriel's Church were aroused by the ringing of the alarm which connects the church with the rectory. The church has been robbed seven times, and when the alarm rang the police were called. The alarm was still ringing when they arrived, but no entrance had been effected into the church and everything seemed all right. Still the alarm continued to ring.

An owl was seen to fly off the wire connecting the church with the house, and then the ringing ceased. An experiment showed that the weight of the owl had brought the alarm wire into contact with another wire.

W. W. Astor's "Peace Offering."

LONDON, Jan. 9.—William Waldorf Astor's contribution of £5,000 in response to the appeal of the Princess of Wales for further aid to the fund raised on behalf of the families of the men fighting in South Africa is regarded by The Daily Chronicle as a "peace offering." The paper points out that the Princess sympathized with Sir Archibald Milne in his controversy last Summer with Mr. Astor.

To be Named Cooper Square.

The Board of Aldermen adopted a resolution yesterday giving the name of Cooper Square to the triangular space in front of Cooper Institute. The resolution will have to be passed by the Council and approved by Mayor Van Wyck before the name can be officially used.

Paint Trust May Be Formed To-day.

The American Dry Color Company, the name to be used for the Paint Trust, expects to conclude arrangements at a meeting to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria today. It was announced at a meeting of the Executive Committee at the hotel yesterday that options have been secured on 75 per cent. of the plants in the country.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Midweek finds the society world of New York with more engagements than its members can well fill. While yesterday was crowded with events and incidents and the evening brought three large subscription dances, there is almost as much on the social programme for to-day. Mrs. Daniel Butterfield will give the first of two large receptions with music at her residence, 616 Fifth Avenue, and among the most notable of the numerous "at homes" also slated for this afternoon will be those of Mrs. Clarence Peil, Mrs. Edward M. Knox, Mrs. Eugene Lamb Richards, Jr., Mrs. Ramsay Turnbull, and Mrs. Edward H. Ripley and Miss Alice Van Doren Ripley.

***

The second of the chamber musicals will take place this afternoon at 4:45 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Jacob W. Miller, 113 East Thirtieth Street. There will be a number of dinners this evening, the largest of which will be given by Mrs. E. H. Harriman of 1 East Fifty-fifth Street, and by Dr. W. Seward Webb and Mrs. Webb of 680 Fifth Avenue at their residences. The dance of the evening will be that to be given by Amadee de Pau Moran of 17 East Fifty-sixth Street for his débutante daughter, Miss Rosalie Moran. This dance will follow a large dinner, and among the guests will be the young men and women who are to dine at Mrs. Harriman's and at other well-known houses.

***

Edward Walker Scott, Jr., and Miss Adeline Pierson, younger daughter of Gen. J. Frederic Pierson and Mrs. Pierson, will be married this afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents, 20 West Fifty-second Street. Miss Pierson will have the Misses Julia Pierson, younger sister of Gen. Pierson; Marie Hamilton, her cousin, and Laura Lee and Josephine Isham as bridesmaids. Mr. Scott's best man will be his brother, George Cole Scott, and the ushers are to be James R. Pierson, younger son of Gen. Pierson; C. B. Antrim, John F. Walker of Washington, D. C., and his uncle, George W. Scott. Dean Robbins of Albany will perform the ceremony. Only relatives and intimate friends have been invited to the ceremony, and there will be no reception.

***

The Knickerbocker Bowling Club will hold its first meeting at the Tennis Building, 212 West Forty-first Street, on Wednesday, Feb. 6. The patronesses include Mrs. Philip Rhinelander, Mrs. Byam K. Stevens, Mrs. Prescott Hall Butler, Mrs. George L. Kingsland, and Mrs. Frederick Sheldon, and the managers of the club are the same as formerly, namely, J. Hooker Hamersley, President; Matthew Astor Wilks, Vice President; William Macneven Purdy, Treasurer; Cortlandt S. Van Rensselaer, Secretary, and Walter Rutherfurd.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gibert Thebaud of 158 Madison Avenue will celebrate the anniversary of their wedding Tuesday evening, Jan. 15. They will, as usual, give a dinner, and this will be followed by a vaudeville show. Last year came their tin wedding, and a tin dinner service was used, and the floral decorations were arranged in tin dishes.

***

Mr. and Mrs. George Baldwin Newell (Miss Julia Pomeroy) of Madison, N. J., are to sail for Europe at an early day. They purpose spending February and March in Cairo, and later will travel on the Continent. Miss Josephine Pomeroy's marriage will be celebrated in London soon, and Mr. and Mrs. Newell and other relatives are going to London to be present at the ceremony.

***

There were numerous receptions and "at homes" yesterday, notably those of Mrs. George Crocker and her daughters, the Misses Rutherford. Mrs. Crocker and her daughters received alone. The house was decorated with palms and cut flowers, and the Neapolitan Orchestra played during the afternoon. Mrs. James B. Haggin (Miss Voorhees) also gave a large reception, the first of two, at her Fifth Avenue house. Mrs. Haggin received in the large drawing room, which was simply decorated with several large vases of American Beauty roses. Miss Leary also gave a large reception at her Fifth Avenue house.

***

The reception given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Charles Boyd Curtis and Miss Isabella W. Curtis at 9 East Fifty-fourth Street was practically a house warming, as it was the first entertainment given at their residence since its rebuilding. Mrs. Curtis and her daughter received, and the Misses Lillian Carpenter, Augusta Robbins, Sydney Stuart Lenoir, and Mildred Dix poured tea. Mrs. James Wilson Clark and her daughter, Miss Catharine M. Clark, of 46 East Fifty-third Street also gave a large reception. Mrs. Clark and her daughter received, and Mrs. R. F. Manning, and the Misses Van Orden, Eidlitz, and Lucile Bacon poured tea. Mrs. Berkeley Mostyn and her débutante daughter, Miss Helen White Stevens, gave the first of three "at homes" in January yesterday.

***

Mrs. Pembroke Jones gave a dinner at her town house, 13 West Fifty-first Street, last night. Covers were laid for eighteen, and the table was decorated with pink roses. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. T. Suffern Tailer, Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Smith, Mr. and Mrs. George Crocker, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Childs, Mrs. Burke Roche, Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, and the Messrs. Baring, Woodward, and Harry Weeks.

The third dance of the Fortnightlites took place in the Astor Gallery of the Astoria last night, and was the Christmas dance, as, owing to the illness of Mrs. Lewis Livingston Delafield, that of Dec. 18, which had been scheduled to have Christmas figures and favors, was simply an ordinary meeting. Last night's affair was the prettiest of the season. Underneath the musicians' gallery there was an immense fireplace opened with blazing (electric) logs, and over the mantel and from the gallery there hung greens and holly, and the greeting, "Merry Christmas" and "Better Late Than Not at All." Piled on this mantel and suspended from it were stockings of every imaginable color and size, filled with candies, toys, &c., and placed in the top of each a flag—all nations being represented—and a bit of holly. These were distributed in the last figure, and Master Carrol Winslow, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Dana Winslow, dressed as Santa Claus, came down the chimney and distributed the favors to the dancers. The other favors were paper weights in the shape of gilded frogs, ash trays in bronze metal, the design being bats with outspread wings; tiny leather covered book pen wipers, diaries, metal and fancy bone paper knives, and calendars. The cotillion was led by John S. V. Oddie, and the guests were received by Mrs. Delafield, Mrs. Alexander W. Shaw, and others of the patronesses.

***

The second Junior cotillion took place at Sherry's last evening, and, as there are but three of these during the Winter, last night's affair was as brilliant as the first. The women who received were Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, Mrs. Alfred Ely, and Mrs. Charles R. Henderson. Alexander Hadden led the cotillion dancing with Miss Norah Iselin. The cotillion favors, as always with the Junior cotillions, were simple, and consisted of sachet bags and other trifles. The Misses Norah and Theresa Iselin, Nina F. Cressy, Miss Post, Helen Barney, Eleanor Morris, Helena Rutherfurd Ely, Rosamond Street, Helen Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Jewell Dodge, Schuyler Schieffelin, Walton Oakley, Arthur Street, Lawrence Gillespie, Harper Pennington, Philip Benkard, and others were among the dancers.

***

Another of last night's subscription dances was the Tuesday Assembly, which was held at Delmonico's, in the large ball room. This series of dances was organized by H. D. Mills, and its members number 150. There is always general dancing before supper, which is served in the supper room on the second floor, adjoining the large ball room, and after the seated supper the cotillion is danced.

The portrait of Miss Elsie French, which Mrs. French has had painted of her daughter by George C. Munzig, has been shown to a few friends at Mr. Munzig's studio previous to its shipment to-day to Newport. It is an oval three-quarter length standing portrait of Miss French, whom Mr. Munzig has painted as if walking in a garden, with her full face turned toward the front. The portrait is an extremely decorative one, its color scheme being a light green. Miss French is gowned in a delicate green décolleté frock with white entredeux in the bodice, and a lilac scarf of filmsy material around her neck and floating behind her. In her right hand, as she is seemingly moving forward, she holds two or three long-stemmed white roses. The background has foliage and trees. The picture has good life and movement, is fresh and attractive in color, and is an excellent likeness.

Among the passengers booked to sail for London to-day on the Cymbric are Dr. Horace T. Brown, Thomas H. Leggett, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Reeves, the Rev. Austin Moore, W. G. Weir, L. G. Beaumont, James Wilson, and Miss Wilson. On the Kensington, sailing to-day for Antwerp, there are booked, among others, the Rev. Edward Ritchie, Robert Atkinson, Dr. G. R. Marsh, Dr. Carl Williams and Mrs. Williams, and Major W. H. Williams and Mrs. W. H. Williams.

Mrs. Bird's dinner dance in honor of Miss Frederica Vanderbilt Webb will be given at Sherry's to-morrow evening. The dinner will be served in the banqueting room, and the dancing will be held in the small ballroom. Invitations have been issued to about seventy guests.

A. G. VANDERBILT AT NEWPORT.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Jan. 8.—Alfred G. Vanderbilt and Miss Elsie French spent a busy day completing various arrangements for their wedding. This morning they visited the bank vaults and examined the large number of gifts which had been received since Mr. Vanderbilt's last visit to Newport. The gifts continue to arrive in large numbers, and before the wedding it is stated that Miss French will have received so many gifts that additional bank vault space will be necessary for their keeping.

Mr. Vanderbilt lunched with his fiancée, Mrs. French, and Mrs. Eaton, and in the early afternoon, with Miss French, enjoyed a fast spin to the Vanderbilt farm in his automobile. After the automobile ride, Miss French returned to Marienview, and later Mr. Vanderbilt drove up on his new four-in-hand coach. Miss French mounted the box seat wearing a long red coat, gray fur boa, and a small hat. They indulged in a long drive over the country roads.

At the dinner Saturday evening, which Miss French will give for her bridesmaids and maid of honor, there will be twenty-four guests. Besides the bridal party, the guests will be Mrs. F. O. French, Gen. and Mrs. Herbert F. Eaton, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck Hatch, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, W. A. M Burden, and Ernest Iselin. The table decorations will be bridesmaid roses and maidenhair fern.

The first train with the wedding guests will leave New York on Saturday next from the Grand Central Station, followed by the second train on Sunday, both of which will be the most elaborate ever sent out from the Grand Central. The same trains will be used for taking the guests back to New York Monday afternoon. A special train will be waiting at Wickford Junction for the bride and bridegroom to convey them on their wedding trip.

The wedding gifts will be displayed in the billiard room of Harbourview on Monday on specially constructed tables built on three sides of the room, leaving ample room for the guests to pass from the library into the billiard room to inspect the presents.

SOCIETY IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The Bachelors' Cotillion gave its first dance of the season this evening at the National Rifles' Armory, with 300 guests in attendance. Mrs. C. C. Glover, wife of an ex-President of the club, acted as hostess of the evening for the officers, who are Jesse Brown, P. Lee Phillips, George Howard, Richard Merrick, Capt. Charles McCawley, Commander Thomas Rogers, and Gist Blair. Lieut. John R. Edie led the cotillion, his partner being Miss Paulding.

Among the hosts and hostesses giving dinner parties before the dance were Senator and Mrs. McMillan, Senator Depew, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Legare, Mr. and Mrs. John Sidney Webb, Col. and Mrs. Tyler, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry May.

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst gave a large afternoon reception at her New Hampshire Avenue house, to introduce her niece, Miss Apperson, and her cousin, Miss Lane. A profusion of roses adorned the drawing rooms and dining room.

MRS. THOS. B. VAN BUREN DEAD

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., Jan. 8.—Mrs. Thomas B. Van Buren died to-day at the home of the Phelps family, at Tea Neck. She had been ill for some time. Death came at noon. She was the widow of Gen. Van Buren, former Consul General to Japan, and was a daughter of Joseph Sheffield, the founder of the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University. She was born in Mobile, Ala., about seventy years ago, and had traveled extensively. Four children survive her.

ELLIOTT DEFEATS WELCH

One Hundred Live Bird Match for Du Pont Championship Trophy.

NO WIND TO AID THE BIRDS

A Large Crowd at Inter-State Park to Witness the Shooting Between These Well-Known Experts.

An event extraordinary in pigeon shooting took place at Inter-State Park, at Queens, L. I., yesterday, when the latest challenge match for the Du Pont Championship Trophy, the prize in many sensational races at the traps, was shot for by two of the most famous and popular pigeon shooters in America. The rivals were Robert A. Welch, the wealthy amateur, and member of several of the most exclusive gun clubs in the country, holder of the highly valued trophy, and James A. R. Elliott, veteran professional, victor in innumerable hard-fought contests with the shotgun under all manner of conditions, challenger and winner of yesterday's contest, with a record of 97 kills out of his 100. His opponent grassed 88 of his 100 pigeons.

From every point of view the match was a remarkable one, even to the fact of attendance, for it drew the largest crowd that has ever gathered on the splendidly equipped grounds, except when the most important pigeon-shooting event of North America, the Grand American Handicap, was on.

The number of spectators so far exceeded expectation that for once the management of the park was all but taken unawares, whole trainloads of visitors being landed at the gates as the regular trains reached the grounds, and the crowd being swelled continually until just before the match was completed. Among the notable people present were young W. J. Thompson of Brookdale Farm, who, with his father and elder brother, raced the famous Brookdale stable; Hugh McLaughlin, leader of the Brooklyn Democracy; ex-Sheriff F. D. Creamer of Brooklyn, Harold Money of the Carteret Gun Club, Col. John H. Voss, Heiligate Gur Club; Benjamin F. Norton, Eugene Lentilhon, William R. Hobart, Gus E. Greiff, Wally Wauras, J. S. Schenck Hemsley, President Brooklyn Gun Club; G. D. F. Bonbright, Carteret Gun Club; John Schliemann, James Shevlin, Henry J. Montanus, Philip Suss of the Middle Island Game Protective Association, L. E. Allen, Warren P. Thompson, Carteret Gun Club; Aaron Doty, Paterson, N. J.; Edward Banks, and J. M. Thompson of the Yonkers Gun Club. A great number of ladies also were present, and many of these were as keenly interested as were the men.

BETTING ON THE MATCH.

Partisanship was strongly in evidence, and carried many of the spectators to the extreme of betting on their chosen champions. The speculation was altogether in the shape of private wagers, as the managers of Inter-State Park are disposed to discourage betting, but Carteret and Riverton Gun Club members did quite a little settling after the race was decided, as penalty for having believed that the odds were not 10 to 7 and 3 to 1 on Elliott against their club associate. They refused to believe in Elliott's superiority before the match began, but they were convinced early, as Elliott shot in superb form, and with a lead taken at the start increased his advantage to the end. The match was on perfectly even terms, at 100 live birds to each man, thirty yards' rise, Hurlingham rules, for the Du Pont Trophy and a side bet, the loser to pay the expenses of the match. The trophy which provoked the contention had only been in Mr. Welch's possession for about two months, though he had held the same emblem for a time when it was first offered, winning it in open competition. Since he won it the last time he had already been called on once before to defend it, and then defeated Thomas Morfey by a single bird, after a sensational shoot. The trophy had also been in Mr. Elliott's possession, and he was prepared to welcome it as an old friend when the score gave him a renewed claim on it.

In the race, luck, from first to last, seemed to be on Mr. Elliott's side. The birds released were the fastest, strongest, and best that a diligent search of pigeon cotes throughout the surrounding country could produce, but, by a singular coincidence, the hardest birds to hit were all released for Mr. Welch, and, in addition to that, he lost three birds dead out of bounds that, with fortune only a trifle kinder, he might have counted in his score. Elliott, the victor, started off by killing eleven straight, then losing a swift right-quartering driver, which was hard hit with both barrels, but still had strength enough to get away. He did not miss again until he shot at his thirty-fifth pigeon, a towering quarterer, which flew off unscathed. He added the third goose egg to his score by his sixty-seventh effort, a sliding, slipping bird, that hung close to the ground and got over the line without the loss of a feather. Mr. Elliott killed straight from that time on, and finished by having grassed 97 of his 100 pigeons. There was very little wind blowing at the time of the shoot.

Mr. Welch lost his first bird, a left-quartering driver, from Trap 3, the bird being hit with the first barrel, but escaping the second and getting away. His other lost birds were his fifteenth, an outgoing driver, touched with the second barrel; the thirty-fourth, a miss almost exactly like the one immediately preceding; the forty-ninth, an eccentric flying bird termed a "roller"; the fifty-first, dead out of bounds; the sixty-third, a clean miss at a left driver; the seventieth and seventy-ninth, dead out of bounds; the eighty-second, a miss at an outgoer; the eighty-fifth, the hardest bird of the match, a circling driver that changed its flight three times in as many seconds, and carried all its feathers when it got away, and the ninetieth and ninety-sixth, both left quarterers, which no shot touched.

The match, beginning at 1 o'clock, was completed in the unusually short time of 1 hour and 9 minutes. The officials who acted for the competition were H. B. Collins, referee, and W. R. Hobart, Newark, N. J., and B. C. Waters, New York City, scorers. The score of the match follows.

Fatal Ending to Boxing Match.

EASTON, Penn., Jan. 8.—Frank Welch, the pugilist, died this morning from the effects of his fight at Cedar Park, Phillipsburg, N. J., on New Year's Eve with Paddy Donovan. Welch's case is one of the most remarkable on record. He had not been conscious from the time he collapsed in the ring until he died, a period of over a week.

Welch, whose real name was Frank Grabfelder, was twenty-one years old, and lived in Philadelphia.

Warrants are out for the arrest of some thirty men connected with the fight, and Donovan and several others are in jail at Belvidere, N. J.

St. Nicholas Skating Club Outclassed in Last Night's Hockey Game.

Hockey at the St. Nicholas Rink last evening between the sevens of the New York Athletic Club and St. Nicholas Skating Club was chiefly noteworthy for the splendid team work and impregnable defense of the wearers of the Mercury Foot. These two things gave them an easy and somewhat tame victory over their opponents by a score of 4 to 0.

Except for the athletic club's marvelous playing from one to another, their intricate passing back and forth, which kept the puck elusive, the game was not an exciting one. The humid atmosphere without communicated itself to some extent to the rink, and for a frigid resort the temperature was hot to the spectators and enervating to the players. In consequence, with a view to saving themselves for their international game on Friday night, the wearers of the Mercury Foot simply toyed with their opponents, and spent a profitable evening in practicing the finer points of their team work against a good antagonist. It was only occasionally that the New Yorks had to put forth any strenuous efforts, and these nearly always resulted in a score, or perhaps might have, with a more desperate struggle. The clubmen gave as pretty an exhibition of accurate passing and carrying of the puck as could be wanted, and they had St. Nicholas in a continual stew of bewilderment searching for the little rubber disk.

St. Nicholas only once got the puck near the sterling goal keeper, O'Donnell, and the veteran easily turned the shoot aside. Most of their efforts were stopped by Fenwick and Hunt. St. Nicholas's poor work was perhaps justly accounted for by the fact that four of the regular players, Hayward, Mortimer, Livingston, and Callender, were not playing. Line-up:

New York A. C., 4.		St. Nicholas S. C., 0.
O'Donnell	Goal	Crosby
Hunt	Point	Ayres
Fenwick	Cover Point	Campbell
Howard	Forward	Walton
Hornfeck	Forward	Gunther
Fry	Forward	Conway
Cobb	Forward	K. Gordon

ARTHUR C. JAMES COMMODORE.

Elected to Succeed Percy Chubb by the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club.

Commodore Percy Chubb presided at the annual meeting of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club, held last evening at Sherry's, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street. About fifty members were in attendance, and all reports of the past year showed that the club was in a more prosperous condition than ever before. More races were held last season, and the prospect is bright for a year of even greater activity this coming season.

The most important business was the election of officers, and Arthur Curtiss James was unanimously elected to be the new Commodore. He was conducted to the chair by Percy Chubb, and replied to the members' applause in a brief speech. The other officers elected were:

Vice Commodore—Colgate Hoyt; Rear Commodore—Henry C. Eno; Secretary—Allen E. Whitman; Treasurer—Frank S. Hastings; Measurer—John Hyslop; Fleet Surgeon—H. Holbrook Curtis, M. D.; Fleet Chaplain—W. Montague Greer, D. D.; Race Committee—Charles W. Wetmore, Walter C. Kerr, Charles A. Sherman, Clinton H. Crane, and Johnston De Forest.

Law Committee—Alfred Ely and Wilmot T. Cox.

Trustees, to form the class of 1904 in place of that of 1901, whose term of office expires—Percy Chubb, Henry Clark Rouse, and William J. Matheson.

Work on the Boston Yacht.

BOSTON, Jan. 8.—Designer Crowninshield said to-day that he expected that the actual work of constructing the Lawson cup defender would begin in about two weeks.

"We shall not need the lead right away," said Mr. Crowninshield, "as our method of constructing the hollow keel will allow the lead to be poured into it almost any time before the yacht is launched.

"Some bulbed angles of the frames have been received at the Atlantic works, and, as Mr. Lawley has practically completed the work of laying down the boat, the bending of the frames will begin as soon as the bulbed steel frames arrive.

"To-day we picked out a stick at East Boston from which the wooden mast of the yacht will be made, after it has been towed over to Lawley. It is a stick of Oregon pine, plenty long enough and large enough for the purpose.

"We shall have fully half a dozen wood topmasts on hand, as some are likely to be carried away."

Secrecy Surrounding Shamrock II.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—In regard to the criticism of the secrecy with which the building of Shamrock II. is surrounded, compared with the publicity in the case of the construction of the defending yacht, Sir Thomas Lipton says:

"I do not believe the Herreshoffs are letting out any vital details. The secrecy we are observing is nothing to what the Herreshoffs exercised with their last boat. Why, they even launched it at night. Moreover, do you suppose I would challenge again unless I believed Watson had discovered an important improvement? Why should I let the world know the nature of that improvement? Watson thinks secrecy is necessary, and I perfectly agree with him."

Material for Cup Defender.

BRISTOL, R. I., Jan. 8.—The second consignment of about 100 steel angles for the frame of the new cup defender arrived here to-day from Steelton, Penn., having come by special train from Providence to save time. The angles are 20 feet long, 2 inches wide on the legs, and 1¼ inches on the angle. They are intended for the bow and the stern of the frame.

The keel plates are not quite ready for the setting up of the frame, but will be ready by to-morrow or Thursday.

New Football Rules for Schools.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—Superintendent of Schools E. G. Cooley has been assigned a novel task in connection with his duties as the head of Chicago's public school system. In accordance with a resolution adopted by the Board of Education Committee on School Management, Mr. Cooley has been asked to revise the rules of football and present them at the board meeting to-morrow night.

The details of the changes in the rules have not been decided upon by Superintendent Cooley, but it is expected they will affect principally the matter of umpiring the games. Changes will be made in the line plays, it is said, and some of the mass formations that tend to increase the danger of the players will be prohibited.

The action of the School Management Committee is the outgrowth of the agitation regarding football in the Board of Education resulting from the death of an Englewood schoolboy in a game last Fall, followed by the serious injury of two or three other players.

Seawanhaka Boat Club Election.

The independent ticket won at the annual meeting of the Seawanhaka Boat Club, held at the Hotel Carleton, Brooklyn, last night, resulting in the election of the following Board of Governors: Hobart Ahrens, James F. Brenner, Adolph Engle, R. J. Leighton, R. H. Pelton, W. F. Koerner, and Charles Mulvahill. The board will meet to organize and elect officers for the coming year on Jan. 16. The club is entirely free from debt, with a balance in the treasury and a large active membership, and its prospects for the coming season are very bright.

The reports of the officers showed the club to be in excellent condition in every way. It was announced that forty-eight new lockers had been built in the clubhouse to accommodate the increased membership, and that a single gig, a double gig, and a cedar eight-oared shell will be added to the club fleet in the Spring. Eighty-seven members of the club were present at the meeting and the supper which followed.

Atalanta Boat Club Officers.

NEW YORK BOWLERS BEATEN.

Cyclone and Rosedale Teams Rolled Low Scores in Their Respective Groups.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—Bowlers from nearly every large city in the United States were present this afternoon when the first National tournament of the American Bowling Congress opened. Preceding the tournament, a business meeting of the officials of the congress was held, nothing but routine business being transacted, however.

Five-men teams, rolling not against each other, but for total points, opened the tournament. All of the afternoon and evening were taken up by the teams, and Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday mornings will be required for this part of the tournament. The teams rolled in groups of six, the first to appear being the Webers of Chicago, Marions of Indianapolis, Stars of Detroit, Stars of Chicago, All Stars of Louisville, and Cyclones of New York, who finished in the order named. The Webers made a total of 2,518, while the Cyclones rolled but 2,139.

The second lot comprised the Rosedales of New York, America of Chicago, Diells of St. Louis, West Chicago of Chicago, Difficulty of Belleville, Ill., and Lake Side of Chicago.

The following scores were made during the afternoon play, the teams rolling for total pins:

				Total.
Webers, Chicago	814	883	821	2,518
Cyclones, New York	618	758	763	2,139
Marions, Indianapolis	783	869	855	2,507
All Stars, Louisville	784	865	790	2,439
Stars, Chicago	828	863	802	2,493
Stars, Detroit	777	865	862	2,504

The first series of the night play resulted as follows:

West Chicago, Chicago	802	838	903	2,541
Difficulty, Belleville, Ill.	878	853	929	2,660
Lakeside, Chicago	836	864	841	2,541
Diells, St. Louis	857	847	923	2,027
America, Chicago	848	832	834	2,514
Rosedale, New York	768	797	836	2,401

ICE YACHTS RACE.

J. W. Edward's Elva Duplicated Her Victory in the Second Class.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Jan. 8.—The final race for the championship pennant for first-class yachts in the series of club races held by the South Shrewsbury Ice Yacht Club was sailed this afternoon. Last night's freeze hardened the ice, putting it in excellent condition. A light westerly breeze prevailed.

The first event called was for the second-class championship pennant. J. W. Edward's Elva repeated her unexpected victory of yesterday, crossing the line an easy winner in 17:15. The Leota was second, her time being 19:30. The Harold withdrew on the fourth mile. The Elva and the Harold have each held the second-class pennant in two events. This will make the next meeting between these fliers the final event unless a hurricane wind should blow, and in this event the Leota is more than likely to win the prize.

The contest for the first-class championship pennant was won by E. E. Taber's Leroy. The latter's victory decided the ownership of the championship pennant in this class. It was her third win, and unless her owner feels disposed to open a new series of races, the pennant will fly from the Leroy's topmast the rest of the yachting season.

The final race, like the first event, was over a five-mile triangular course. All four yachts entered got off on even terms. The Leroy led from start to finish, covering the course in 16:00. The Elva was second, the Leota third, and Harold fourth. The Elva's time was 17:53. No date has been set for the finals in the second-class and challenge pennants.

N. Y. A. C. ANNUAL ELECTION.

Definite Plans for Rebuilding Country House to be Made Soon.

The annual election of the New York Athletic Club was held last evening at the clubhouse, Sixth Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street. The following ticket was voted upon without opposition:

President—John R. Van Wormer; Vice President—Albert E. Colfax; Secretary—Charles I. Burnham; Treasurer—Charles E. Goodbue; Captain—Charles H. Sherrill; Governors for two years—R. H. Goffe, Jr., Edward W. Kearney, Joseph J. O'Donohue, Jr., J. Ross Curran, James R. Ely, George W. Kahlke, Mortimer Bishop, Robert C. Kammerer.

No action was taken last evening as to rebuilding the clubhouse which was recently burned on Travers Island, but it was stated that the new officers and Board of Governors would meet on Tuesday night and at that time take action. It was said a handsome brick fire-proof structure would be erected to take the place of the one recently destroyed, and that the new building would be much larger than the former one. No plans have as yet been considered for the new clubhouse.

WOODRUFF MAY RESIGN.

Dissatisfaction with Penn's Football Coach Assumes Serious Aspect.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 8.—George Woodruff, the football coach, who has had charge of the University of Pennsylvania football teams for several years past, may sever his connection with the university. A meeting of the Athletic Association will be held to-morrow, and it is practically certain that the question will be decided one way or the other.

When Woodruff first came to Pennsylvania he evolved the famous "guards back" play, which at once carried the Quakers to the front rank in college football. For three or four years the Red and Blue teams more than held their own, but then they began to slump, and their loyal supporters quaked every time the eleven was scheduled to play a hard game. Two seasons ago Pennsy went through the most disastrous season she had experienced since becoming a factor in the football world, and several of her star graduates decided to try to stem the tide. They urged that Woodruff should be compelled to accept the assistance of former players, and the coach accepted the terms. After the season started, however, they were cast aside and treated with such abruptness that they gave up the task. Then, with the best material Pennsylvania ever had, she was ignominiously beaten by Harvard, and soon afterward the latter was completely snowed under by Yale.

This was the climax, and a movement was soon under way to either depose Woodruff or make him accept the permanent service of half a dozen former Pennsylvania players who had experience in coaching teams. That would place Woodruff in the position of a coach similar to Deland of Harvard, and allow the graduates to instruct the players in the rudiments of the game. Should Woodruff decide to resign the position, the graduates would take up the coaching, with every probability of "Mike" Murphy returning to Pennsylvania.

A former University of Pennsylvania player, who was considered one of the best in the country, said to-night: "The whole trouble is too much Woodruffism. When George first came to Pennsylvania he was full of new ideas, and his guards-back was so radically new that other teams were unable to withstand the play. Since then, however, they have solved the question and common sense should tell any man that he cannot hope to succeed with his football team if he makes his players stand back five yards and then wait for the ball to be put into play before starting.

"You couldn't tell this to Woodruff, because he is so completely wedded to the idea; but ask experienced men of former years and see what they say. I am perfectly willing and anxious to help my Alma Mater, for whose honor I now carry scars; but I won't offer my services while I know they will be rejected. The candidates for the past two years were the finest ever brought out at Pennsylvania, yet look at the results attained—one year of disaster followed by defeat in the Harvard game of last season. The men are taught too much science and not enough of the rudiments of the game, and until this is reversed Pennsy will continually suffer defeat. George Woodruff must accept help from up-to-date coachers, resign, or suffer continuous defeat."

Columbia's Football Election Contest.

Elections of the manager and assistant manager of the Columbia University football team will be held next Friday. William Brock Shoemaker, who managed the team the season of 1900, has been named by the Executive Committee of the Athletic Association as the regular nominee for the position, but since his selection a representative of the independent faction, which disapproves of the policy pursued last season, has been nominated, and will run against Shoemaker. This man is Julian Collier Harrison, 1903 Law, the editor of The Columbia Spectator, a member of the baseball team, and prominently identified with undergraduate life. The contest between these two promises to be more closely contested than ever before, as the supporters of both men are seeking votes vigorously. Shoemaker has the solid support of the football team and those who were connected with it, while Harrison is the candidate of those who criticise what they term the undue extravagance of the eleven.

The outcome of the election is awaited with the keenest interest by all Columbia students. Shoemaker's re-election will vindicate him and his policy, while his defeat will prove that the students favor rigid economy. The new system of balloting at the polls from 11 A. M. to 3 P. M., after the manner of the State elections, will afford every student a chance to vote.

C. L. Hendrickson and F. T. Bogue, both of 1903 College, are the nominees for assistant manager.

Brooklyn Pleasure Drivers Meet.

The annual meeting of the Pleasure Drivers' Association of the Borough of Brooklyn was held last night at the club's headquarters, Bedford Avenue, near Fulton Street. It was announced that the proposed speedway parade had been abandoned, owing to the non-acceptance of invitations by the other organizations corresponded with and the constant use of the sprinting path on the Coney Island Boulevard to the sea. The Treasurer's report showed nearly $700 in hand. The following officers were chosen for the year:

President—William M. Clark; Vice President—J. Clinton Brower; Treasurer—E. H. Itjen; Secretary—Dr. W. H. Feely; Assistant Secretary—William M. Wheeler.

Executive Committee—J. T. Williamson, Dr. J. I. C. Creamer, Mr. W. H. Feely, C. K. Robinson, E. H. Itjen, W. H. Burrows, Daniel J. Runyon, W. H. Higgins, J. R. Hodgson, and Alfred Bacon.

COTTON.—Speculation in cotton was exceptionally dull yesterday, and fluctuations in prices were too small to specially benefit one faction or the other. The influences at work were too conflicting to warrant aggressive action in either direction, while many traders were disposed to hold off until after the holiday in New Orleans, (anniversary of Battle of New Orleans,) which exchange supplies our market with the bulk of the cotton belt news received, before altering present relations to the market. The opening was steady at prices 1 point lower to 2 points higher. Nothing occurred to sway sentiment positively one way or the other. At the close the feeling was quiet and steady, with prices net 4 to 7 points higher. Spot cotton closed dull, with quotations unchanged on the basis of 10¼c for middling upland and 10¾c for middling Gulf. Sales, 150 bales. Spot cotton markets were telegraphed as follows: Orleans quiet, unchanged, at 9 11-16c; Mobile quiet, ⅛c advance, at 9½c; Savannah quiet, 1-16c advance, at 9⅝c; Charleston firm, ⅛c advance, at 9⅝c; Wilmington firm, unchanged, at 9¼c; Norfolk steady, unchanged, at 9⅝c; Baltimore nominal, unchanged, at 10¼c; Augusta firm, unchanged, at 9 13-16c; St. Louis unchanged, at 9 11-16c.

BREADSTUFFS.—WHEAT—The market fluctuated continuously all day over a cent range of prices, showing perhaps a more bullish undertone than otherwise on the average, but declining very sharply in the last few minutes, so that the final prices of the day were only ½c higher than Monday's close. A sustaining factor early in the day was the steadiness of English markets, after our late break on Monday. Liverpool and London closed ¼@½d net higher, after having been at one time ½@¾d lower than the previous night. Continental markets, however, except for an advance of 2 points at Budapest, were unsatisfactory, Berlin closing ¼@½ mark lower, Antwerp unchanged, and Paris 5 points lower. Foreign houses were sellers of wheat at the opening here. The Chicago Trade Bulletin reported a decrease in the world's supply of wheat and flour during December of about 4,000,000 bushels. Minneapolis reported a good domestic trade in flour, but very little export demand. Primary receipts were 556,000 bushels, compared with 530,000 bushels last year. Receipts in the Northwest amounted to 373 cars, against 365 cars a year ago. Quotations of cash wheat, free on board, afloat, basis, were as follows: No. 1 hard, Duluth, 92½c; old No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 89⅝c; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 87⅝c; No. 1 Northern, New York, 85⅝c; No. 1 Northern, Chicago, 85½c; No. 2 red, New York, 83⅝c; No. 2 hard, New York, 80⅝c; No. 2 corn, next week, 47¼c; No. 2 corn, Jan. 25 to Feb. 10, 47c.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, and bearing date the 28th day of November, 1900, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 17th day of January, nineteen hundred and one, at 12 o'clock noon, at the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain piece or parcel of land, with the buildings thereon erected, situated in the Borough of Manhattan, in the City of New York, being on the southeasterly corner of Mercer Street and Washington Place, and bounded as follows, viz.:

Beginning at the southeasterly corner of Mercer Street and Washington Place, and running thence easterly along Washington Place one hundred (100) feet; thence in a southerly direction on a line parallel with Mercer Street forty-nine (49) feet and nine (9) inches to a lot of land formerly belonging to George Lovett; thence westerly along said lot on a line parallel with Washington Place one hundred (100) feet to Mercer Street, and thence northerly along Mercer Street forty-nine (49) feet and nine inches to the place of beginning.

Being the same premises which were sold and conveyed to the said Julius A. Robinson by George L. Kingsland and others by deed dated April 12th, 1882, and recorded in the office of the Register of the County of New York in Liber 1,072 of Conveyances, Page 81, on the first day of May, 1882.

Together with the appurtenances thereunto belonging. The land above described lies in Section 2, in Block 546, on the land map of the City of New York.—Dated New York, December 28th, 1900.
